THE TWO MEDIEVAL MILITARY EFFIGIES AT UPTON SCUDAMORE, WILTSHIRE

by Warren Skidmore

[This is a new Appendix V to be added to The Scudamores of Upton Scudamore. It has been “borrowed” in large part from a fine unsigned typescript sent to me by the late Tim Woodman just before his death. He did not mention the name of the author. It does not seem that the author had used my book on Upton Scudamore, and he may have been unknown to Tim. I have made what I think are better guesses as to the identities of the two effigies based on his dating of them. I have added a note on the new plinths, and one or two other details. However the primary value of this appendix is due to the technical expertise of an unnamed scholar, who has obviously devoted an enormous amount of time to medieval effigies. (WS)]

The two military effigies in the north chapel of the church of St Mary the Virgin, Upton Scudamore, are both mutilated and badly worn but sufficient detail remains, in each case, to identify aspects of the design and style of the figures, and to suggest approximate dates for their carving. Traces of thick paint remain in local areas on both effigies, probably as the result of more than one repainting of the figures. The original polychrome may still be preserved underneath this. The types of stone from which the effigies have been carved have not yet been determined. The worn condition of the two figures suggests that they were outside in the churchyard for a considerable period. Handsome new plinths have recently been made for the effigies paid for both by the parishioners and visitors to the church (which frequently include members of the family).

The earlier figure depicts a knight wearing a long, sleeveless gown over a mail shirt (hauberkr). He carries a long kite-shaped shield on his left side, supported by a strap (guige) over his right shoulder. He is shown with his left hand lying on the scabbard of his sword and his right arm, which is mostly lost, probably lay alongside the body with the hand resting on his right thigh or hip. The legs, which are broken off above the knees, were shown cross-legged (see the greater height of the right thigh above the base slab). The knight's head rests on a single cushion set diagonally. The base slab is badly broken, but on surviving portions of three edges it can be seen that it originally had a deeply hollowed chamfer. Widely separated along this are worn sprigs of foliage known in an architectural context as "stiff leaf". These features are consistent with a date of carving in the third quarter of the 13th century. The cross-legged attitude became increasingly popular from about the middle of the 13th century but around 1280 the fashion in ornamental foliage changed in favour of naturalistic leaves, where a multitude of real plants were represented. The relaxed hand positions and long, narrow shield would both be acceptable features of a figure of about 1270, a date which is about right for this effigy.

Another important detail is the carving of the mail, which can be seen on the top of the right shoulder. This is shown as curved links in parallel lines which run vertically down the arm instead of in the more usual, horizontal direction. This direction is commonly found on military effigies of the 13th and early 14th centuries made in south-west England. The feature has been claimed as a characteristic of work produced by masons associated with Wells and Bristol, but appears to have been somewhat less specific than this being rather a trait of work done in southwestern England in general. It is even found on Irish effigies, such as that at Kilfane in County Kilkenny, at a time when there were strong trading links between southwest England and Ireland. The earlier Upton Scudamore effigy was recorded by Dr Tummers in his book Early Secular Effigies in England & The Thirteenth Century (Leiden, 1980), where he dated it to the late 13th century. Nikolaus Pevsner in his popular Buildings of England: Wiltshire also dated it to the late 13th century. It seems reasonably safe to identify it as a representation of Sir Godfrey Scudamore III who died in 1266.

The other figure belongs to a different tradition of effigy carving. Its badly mutilated and worn state obscures its artistic merit. The body is shown with the hips swayed to the left, creating graceful flowing lines. The small beater-shaped shield is held well to the left so that it does not mask any of the figure. The right arm is broken off at the shoulder but it probably lay diagonally across the centre of the body, the hand resting in the region where the sword hilt must once have been. The lack of any scar across the body suggests that this arm was originally completely undercut. The head rests on two cushions, the lower large and oblong and the upper cushion smaller and oval shaped. The mail was marked out by means of crescent-shaped lines incised onto the surface and areas remain on both hides of the head, the right thigh and the left shoulder. The effigy is shown wearing a close-fitting bascinet (helmet) which has its lower edge at about ear level. At this point, it is joined to a camail, which covers the neck and most of the shoulders. The bascinet has a slightly pointed ridge at its crown. There are traces of a sword-belt sloping across the figure's hips, from right to left.

The skirt of the knight's gown is particularly interesting as it is split at the right (and probably also the left) side. The material falls away at the split over the right thigh, revealing part of the mail hauberk. The skirt falls in deep folds at the centre, where it dips between the thighs. Although they are missing below mid-thigh, the line of the legs indicates that they were straight rather than crossed. During the 1340's, the English fashion of depicting effigies with crossed legs sharply declined and there was a general return to straight legs.

The swayed stance is strongly reminiscent of a number of monuments, particularly the military brasses at Wimbish (Essex) and Elsing (Norfolk), both believed to commemorate knights who died in 1347. The gathering of the skirt in deep folds between the legs is paralleled on a mid-century effigy at Aldworth (Berkshire). There are few other effigies which show the side-split skirt. Two of them, at Tollard Royal in Wiltshire and at Dodford in Northants, have recently been newly updated from about 1310 to about 1340. Another example is the mutilated effigy at Wimbome Minster (Dorset). Again we have a likely identification for Sir Peter Scudamore (living 1340) who was recently dead in 1342.

Between 1352 and 1361, the church at Edington (Wiltshire), only a few miles from Upton Scudamore, was being rebuilt under the patronage of William of Edington, Bishop of Winchester and Chancellor of England. The chancel retains much fine carving from this period (which may bear some similarity to this figure) and it is tempting to suggest that this might have been the workman who did the later effigy at Upton Scudamore. It is possible that Sir Peter de Skydemore, who had founded the chantry in the north aisle of the church, had also provided his own effigy for it during his own lifetime.

The records of the poll taxes taken in the last quarter of the 14th century are fascinating because they provide information about people who (aside from occasional knight or their widows) rarely get mentioned in any other record. Where they survive they provide data about the husbandry and small craftsmen and their wives and dependants, servants, occupations, and relationships that no other records from the period does. This is the good news. The bad news is that they survive for only a small part of the population. For some counties such as Hertfordshire not a single scrap remains, while other like the West Riding of Yorkshire are marvelously complete. Some part of the surviving records give (aside from the age of persons taxed) almost as much information as the census of 1841. The condition of the remainder varies considerably; some are as clear as if the clerk had just put his pen down while others are less informative and are faded, damaged by damp, or nibbled by rodents. Many are illegible without an ultraviolet lamp and are, despite modern precautions, deteriorating still further today.

In 1377 the law required that every person 14 or older owed the tax, which was changed to age 16 in 1379. The taxers went from door to door. John Skidemore of Compton Chamberlayne in Wiltshire was named as one of the honest men (probi homines) who were selected because they knew the number and financial circumstances of their fellow villagers. They worshiped in the same church, worked in the same fields, and attended the same manorial courts to bear witness to one another lives. Very few individuals evaded the paying the tax by pretending to be poor, or by concealing their dependants, or by “taking to the woods.” The Constables and honest men may have made a few concessions not to aggravate their friends, but they still had to satisfy the Crown with a substantial collection.

While we know that John Skidemore helped in the collection of the tax in 1377 the full return is (alas) missing for Compton Chamberlayne for all every year. So we do not get his occupation, or the names of his wife (ux’ eius) or his children (filius or filia eius) for whom he presumably paid the tax of 4d. each in 1377. We get usually only the given name of male or female servants (serviens eius) and so we are left in the dark about the full names they may have used. Some were perhaps known either by the names of their father or their master, or probably on occasion both.

We know that John Skydmore was a descendant of Walter Skidemore who held half a virgate of land at Compton Chamberlayne in 1274. His uncle, Sir Peter Skidmore, died without a son in 1293 and gave Upton Scudamore to his nephew before his death to insure a male descent (but only the head of his honour). His other lands went to his only daughter Alice, wife of Sir Adam Bavant. Compton Chamberlayne, while it was not a Scudamore fee, lies between Fifield Bavant (which was) and Teffont Ewyas, both manors belonging to the honour of Ewyas Harold in Herefordshire. This John Skidemore left three sons living in 1436, John the elder (who had a son Nicholas), Edmund, and John the younger. The family, largely yeomen, continued at Compton Chamberlayne for at least another 200 years. Richard Butler alias Skydemore, buried there in February 1577, in the last noticed in the register of the church.

The returns for Herefordshire are very sparse. However in 1379 we find that Phillo Gwyas [sic], a franklin, paid the largest assessment of 3s. 6d. at Holme Lacy in Webtree Hundred where 51 men were taxed. Philip Skidmores alias Ewyas (and his son George after him) sometimes used the name Ewyas in the right of their descent from an Ewyas heiress. Philip himself had married a Agnes, a daughter of John Huntercombe and the widow of William de la Barre from whom she had a life interest in Hollanton in Holme Lacy.

Unfortunately Ewyas Lacy Hundred in Herefordshire seemingly was never taxed so we learn nothing new about the Skydmores at Rowlstone. Ichenfeld (sic) in Wormelow Hundred is mentioned in the list of Acquittances for 1377, so we know nothing about the persons at Corras in Kentschurch. Both of these places were quasi-Welsh and easily overlooked.

In addition to the counties of Wiltshire and Herefordshire the Skydmores also had holdings in Devon. The returns for Sheepstor (Roborough Hundred) in Devon are missing but a William Skidemore held Longstone in Sheepstor on 5 March1377 at the time of the death of Hugh de Courtenay, 2nd earl of Devon. It seems likely that William was a grandson of the Ralph Skydmore who was taxed 12d in Tavistock Hundred (which is hard by Sheepstor) in 1332, and that this Ralph might have been out of Poston in Herefordshire. Descendants of the Skydmores of Sheepstor survived until Sir William Elford, Baronet, died without issue at Bickford, Devon in 1837.

A Thomas Skydmore (living 1391) married Alice, a daughter of William Wortham, lord of Wortham in Lifton Hundred, Devon (which adjoins Tavistock) in the reign of Richard II, but nothing survives for this hundred in the poll tax lists. It seems likely that he was succeeded by the John Skydmore who held Northcombe in Bratton Clovelly (also in Lifton Hundred) soon after. He may also have been the John Skydmore “of Devon” was a mainpernor on 3 January 1411/2 for Thomas Pyfit of Lincoln in a suit brought by John Ryle, a goldsmith of Lincoln, and may the man of this name who later settled in Buckinghamshire.

All of these Devon Skydmores were substantial persons, probably kin, and we hazard that they may have come out of the older family at Poston. There were possibly other Skydmores, younger sons of younger sons now in reduced circumstances, who may also belong here. Added to these must be still others, not genetically kin to these or to one another, of whom we have no knowledge. The records of the poll taxes promised some enlightenment, which is alas left largely unfulfilled.

SCUDAMORE/SKYDMORE IN EARLY CHANCERY AND OTHER LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

by Warren Skidmore

[I have printed herewith extracts made at the Public Record Office in London over a period of several summers from the early court records. The indexes to these are several and varied, and these notes suffer from their inadequacies. For some there is only an index to plaintiffs, and for others only an index to the surname of the first plaintiff and the first defendant. Thus a case of Smith vs. Jones, Skydmore, Skydmomore, and Skydmore (which would be likely to give a substantial pedigree) would be indexed only under Smith and Jones. The handwriting can be dreadful, and the condition of many of the parchments (which were rained on in the Tower of London for centuries) even worse. Never the less John Hunt and I plowed through hundreds of them down to 1714, and the frequent exciting discoveries kept us at a sometimes tedious chore. The quarrels in chancery probably rank next after probates as a source of information on families relationships. I have added in parentheses (with an asterisk*) my own page numbers, which usually has more information than will be found in the brief abstracts fed into the computer here. John Hunt has a complete file as well, handled differently.

Much of the data copied in London has also found its way into the proper place in Thirty Generations, and will be found elsewhere on this CD. It will be seen that I have copied indexes (even AFTER 1714 not found here), but have barely touched the original files of a good many of the later series. I would be delighted if others would pick up where we have left off and would share their findings with John Hunt and myself as well as with Linda Moffatt’s Skidmore Family History Group. A good introduction to this enormous mass of material is R. E. F. Garrett’s Chancery and other legal proceedings, published by Pinhorns, Shalfleet Manor, Isle of Wight. It is also likely that the Public Record Office now has its own guide to this extremely useful (though seldom used) class of records. (Warren Skidmore)]

EARLY CHANCERY PROCEEDINGS, SERIES C.1

Part 1

The early chancery suits begin in the reign of Richard II, and come down to Phillip and Mary (1558). There are 1522 bundles of these, with perhaps 70 or so suits filed in every bundle. There is a calendar in ten volumes in the Lists and Indexes series, which is completely unindexed. John Hunt and I paged through the entire calendar, an enormous chore. As daunting as this is, it is far more satisfactory than the plea rolls where there is no calendar or means of easy access at all.

The chancery suits deal with subject suing subject on civil disagreements (not criminal matters). The Crown supplied courts, judges, clerks, rendered a judgement and collected a fee, but had no other interest in the proceedings.

Almost all of the suits involving the family have been abstracted, and a fuller account will be found in our files. My page numbers are marked with asterisk (*) and included with parentheses. John Hunt, with whom I exchanged copies, has dealt with his set differently.

In addition to the cases indexed below a good many others were looked at when they involved places and families associated with the Skydmores. Generally speaking this proved to be largely unproductive, although a few cases are noticed here.

In ordering up any of the following bundles or files the numbers must be preceded by C.1.

69/221. William Hamme, esq., vs. John Aburhale and John, son of Philpot Skydmor. Breaking into the complainant’s house at Hamme Lacy, Herefs. (*2613)

108/106. James, son of Thomas, son of James, son of Sir John Scudamour, kt., vs. William Rose, feoffee to uses. Castle of Grove, manors of Grove, Radnore, Mockas, Thurkeston, Kyngeston, Howton, Dewormeton, Westhide, Egulton, an inn in Hereford, and other lands late of the said Sir John in the county of Hereford. (*2523-5)

205/25. Harry Hammes, one of the Esquires of the King’s Household, vs. John Abrahall and George Scudmore of Irchynfeld. 284/31. Roger, son of John Billingesley, son of Margery, daughter of Agnes, daughter of Nicolas Milde, vs. Roger Skydmore and Agnes his wife, late the wife of William, son of William Spencer. Salop., 1504-1515. (*2587-8) [Whitton, 3 miles NW of Tenbury, Shropshire.]

492/36. John Crompe, of Stretton, vs. Richard Herbert and Johanne, his wife, executrix and late the wife of James Scudamore, esquire. Detention of the said John for debt of the said James lent without specialty had. Herefs., 1518-1529. (*2589)

624/4. Agnes Cavendish of London, widow, vs. The mayor and sherriffs of London. Arrest at the suit of Thomas Baldry, Richard Ferrmore, John Watson upon bonds given by the complainant with Foulke Skydmore and William Ledington, for debt of John Newington, mercer, to Thomas Hynde, now deceased, and the parties first named, executors of William Browne, mercer, at the instance of William Ogle, Master of the Savoy, and on the premise of indemnity. London, 15291532. (*2590-1) I have done some other work on this case. Thomas Cavendish, of Cavendish Overhull, died 1477. He married Katherine Scudamore who died 15 September 1499, and was buried at St. Botolph, Aldersgate, London. Their son Thomas of Cavendish
Overhall, died 1523. His will dated 15 Henry VIII at P.C.C. “23 Bodfelde,” of St. Alban, Woodstreet. Thomas, the younger, married secondly Mary, who was his executrix. She had a daughter Mary who afterwards occupied a tenement called the White Bear in West Cheap and Bread Street, London. (Letters and papers of Henry VIII, v, 606) She was left lands in Kent by her husband. Fulke Scudamore also had an interest in the White Bear. The Cavendishes were ancestors of the Dukes of Devonshire. (See also *2392)

[This Alice Skydmore has never been identified.]

677/11. Gregory Skydmore of Kingston-upon-Hull, surgeon, vs. The mayor and sheriffs of Kingston-upon-Hull. Action of debt by John Orell for a sum long since paid, the quittance for which the complainant has lost. Yorks., 1529-1532. (*2594). [This Gregory not identified.]

1087/70. Thomas Wytham of London, mercer, apprentice to Fulk Skidmore of London, mercer, vs. The sheriffs of London. Action by Elizabeth Stanham for price of velvet sold on her behalf, for which complainant has the buyer's bond. London. 1538-44. (London)

1158/17. John, son and Heir of Philip Scudamore, and of Joan his wife vs. John Burley and Sybyll his wife, late the wife of the said Philip. Detention of deeds relating to the manors of Rowlstone, Llancillo, Howton (in Kenderchurch), and of Gwern-genny (in Kilpeck), and half the manors of Kentchurch, Llanhaithog (in Kentchurch) Radnor alias Grove, Kevenbach (Cefn in Dulas?), and Corras [Cawrose]. Herefs., 1544-7. (*3985-51)

1275/20. Walter Vaughan and Joan, his wife, a daughter and heir of Eleanor Aparry vs. Richard Tewe, their bailiff. Refusal to account for issues of manors of Grove [alias] Radnor, Bredwardine, Wormeton (in Kilpeck), and Moccas, and detention of deeds. Herefs., 1547-51. (*3552-3)
1287/17. William Americk vs. John Americke and John Skidmore. Detention of deeds to a farm called Birch Court. Herefs., 1551-3. (*2960) [This is the John Skydmore of Thruxton who died ca. 1555, about three years before his son William (died 1558). We have no other mention of the Americkes, nor do we know their interest in Birch Court.]

1333/66-7. Thomas Bulstrode vs. Robert Rawson and Anne, his wife, formerly the wife of Andrew Bulstrode, deceased, brother of the complainant. Loans, price of goods and horse-hire paid on behalf of Andrew Bulstrode. (Oxford?), 1553-5. [There can be next to no doubt that Andrew and Thomas Bulstode are the same two men of their names who were brothers of the "old Mrs. Skydmore" living at Chilton, Bucks., as late as September, 1612, and all children of George Bulstrode. This would seem to push back their birth to the general area of 1530 or so.]

1430/83. William, son of John Gynne (Genny), and servant of Nicholas Ligh, of Addington, Surrey, vs. Robert Genny, William Gynny of Great Birch, and others. Messuages and lands in Dewsall, Kilpeck and elsewhere (not named in calendar) in which defendants are maintained by John Scudamore, esq. Damaged. Herefs., 1556-8.

CHANCERY PROCEEDINGS, SERIES C.3

Part 3

After the C.1 series the chancery proceedings divide into two series, C.2 and C.3. The C.3 series comprises 485 bundles of perhaps 100 suits to the bundle. The printed calendar is in the List and Index series, and the entries are much more abbreviated than they are for C.1 and the C.2/Elizabeth and C.2/James series. Very few "stray" names appear in the subject column. Only the plaintiff and descendants have been looked at here. The subject and place columns have not been checked.

79/87. Henry HANKES of Gloucester, vs. ANNE SKIDMORE [of Helme in Ewyas Harold, Herefs. Recovery of cattle, etc. Sybell, wife of Henry Hankes, was a niece of Anne Skidmore. (1558-79) Glos. (*2486)

141/59. John POOKER vs. THOMAS SKYDMORE and MARGARET, his wife. Shaston (Shaftesbury). "The Angel Inn." 1558-79. (Dorset.) Badly mutilated. [We learn more later of Margaret and her first husband. Thomas Skydmore's origin is unknown to me, but may have been Magor, Monmouthshire. This is the first mention of the Skydmores in Dorset yet found.] (*3072)

167/43. THOMAS SCUDAMORE vs. Thomas John APOWELL. Llancillo. (1558-79) Herefs. [The same man from C1/1383/49, son of John ap Jenkin Scudamore.] (*4472)

218/59. THOMAS SCUDAMORE vs. Thomas PARTRYDGE and others. (1579-87) Bucks. [If this man lived in Bucks then we have no other mention of him.] (*3068, see also 4238-40).

239/6. Henry FLETEWOOD vs. RICHARD SCUDAMORE, gent., of the Middle Temple. Hillingdon, copyhold of manor, and Chipping Wycombe. (1591-6) Middx. & Bucks. [This Richard must be the son of the ironmonger of London as Hillingdon is a hamlet in Uxbridge. (*3069, see also 279.)

250/80. HUMFREY SCUDAMORE and MARY, his wife., vs. Arthur WILLIAMS, clerk. Recovery of plate, etc. Middx. (*3450)

266/13. William DUTTON and another vs. SIR JAMES SCUDAMORE, Knt., and others. Standish manor and rectory. 1596-1616. Glos.
289/59. SIR JAMES SCUDAMORE, Knt., and LADY MARY, his wife, vs. Nicholas BASKERVILLE and others. Wedgnock Park and Fernehill Wood. (1596-1616) Warks.

300/20. Michael BYSLIE vs. DAME MARY SCUDAMORE, widow, and others. Sunningwell and Bayworth manors. (1617-1621) (Berks.) Holme Lacy.

COURT OF REQUESTS.

This court begins with the reign of Henry VII and was similar to the Star Chamber which followed. Both were intended to deal with civil (subject vs. subject) matters rather than criminal. This court lasted like the Star Chamber until 1641 and neither court was revived at the Restoration. There are 829 bundles from Henry VII to Charles I which are now fully indexed through James I. For the over 400 bundles from the reign of Charles I there is not, alas, any calendar or index at all.

COURT OF STAR CHAMBER.

This court begins with the reign of Henry VII and was one where subject could sue subject. A number of the early cases dealt with complaints of violence, ejectment from land, or refusal from entry on the land by violent means. It was intended to protect the small landowner and townsman. In time, however, it became a court in which all manner of disagreements were heard. In the time of James I it acquired an unsavoury reputation when its powers were used by the Crown to silence its critics and it was abolished by statute in 16 Charles I. There is only one bundle of proceedings from the reign of Charles I, and there are now adequate indexes to the whole of the suits.

No Skydmore/Scudamore suits have been found in STAC 1 (Henry VII) or in STAC 4 (the brief reign of Queen Mary).

STAC 6 is supplement to Elizabeth I and STAC 7 is an addenda to Elizabeth I.

D.L.1/vol. 4. 17 Hen. VIII (1525-6). JOHN SKYDMORE, the King's farmer, vs. Philip ap William VAUGHAN, and others, all inhabitants of Grosmont town and lordship. Disputed title to common of pasture for cattle on the demesne lands. (Monm.) John ap Rosser was succeeded at Grosmont by a PHILIP SCUDAMORE (see D.L.1/vol.148 below) and PHILIP by a THOMAS AP PHILIP SCUDAMORE, Gent., who was a juror at Grosmont in 1613 all of which confirms the herald's pedigree of this family at Kentchurch Court. It was apparently THOMAS AP PHILIP SCUDAMORE who was swindled by London mercers in his attempt to turn Grosmont into a commercial center (see Court of Requests case elsewhere.)

D.L.1/vol.39. No date, but reign of Philip and Mary. Dame Mary MORGAN, widow, late wife of Sir Richard Morgan, knt., vs. JOHN SCIDMORE, lessee of the demesne lands. Mentions Grosmont lordships, Calpalacs Rivers, Naunte Palags Brook, Abergaveny lordship, Abergavenny mills, and Peverbydell. (Wales).

THE SKYDMORES OF CHETTISCOMBE, DEVON

by Warren Skidmore

The Scudamores, lords of Upton Scudamore in Wiltshire, owed their early allegiance in Devon to the patronage of the Courtenay family (Earls of Devon) in Devon and Somerset. It went firstly to Sir Hugh de Courtenay (1250-1292) of Okehampton, who married Eleanor le Despenser, and then to his son of the same name (ca. 1276-1349). The title of Earl of Devon (of the Courtenay creation) was revived for the young Hugh 1335. He was destined to become a great soldier in the Hundred Years War in service to Edward III, and was one of an elite group of knights selected to protect the King’s body. He was, at the personal invitation of the King himself, made the twelfth founding knight of the Order of the Garter in 1348 at Windsor Castle. After a distinguished career he was buried the following year at Exeter Cathedral. The Skydmores in Devon, a few in reduced circumstances, continued to enjoy the patronage of the Courtenays for several generations.

Sir Walter (I) de Skydenmore (died 1318), of Upton Skydenmore, was the son and heir of Sir Peter (II) Skydenmore (died 1293), lord of Upton Scudamore. This Sir Walter de Kydemor (bearing arms Gu. 3 stirrups Ar.) and Sir Philip de Courteney were companions together in 1309 at a great tournament held at Dunstable in Bedfordshire. Their names are together on a roll of the arms which shows that they came to the field in the same retinue. These tournaments were an early precursor of the soccer matches of today and survived until late in the reign of Queen Elizabeth to celebrate her “accession day.”

On 8 March 1315 (in the 8th year of the reign of Edward II) Sir Walter is said to have held Chettiscombe and West Chevithorne, near Tiverton, of the King. This was a clerical error however, as the name of the tenant-in-chief of the king was Sir Hugh de Courtenay. In the following year Courtenay inquest post mortem correctly reported that at “Chettescoube. Two parts of 1 knight’s fee held by Walter Skydemor which the said heirs ought to hold of the said Hugh and of the said honour,” that is that it was really held in chief by Hugh de Courtenay of his Honour of Plympton. Later it was worth £10 by the year when Edward II gave it on 18 October 1315 (and certain other lands) to his young half-brother Edmund Plantagenet of Woodstock, the Earl of Kent (1301-1330).

Sir Walter died in the summer 1318. He was still living on the octave of St. John the Baptist (1st July) when he made his last important land purchase. For £100 he bought from Nicholas Malemayns two messuages, 108 acres of land, six acres of meadow, and pasturage for eight oxen, two bulls, eight cattle, 25 pigs, and 200 sheep, as well as 13s 4d in rent at Warminster and Bishopstrow in Wiltshire. Several additions were made by his son and grandson to their lands there and by 1372 the estate was known later as the manor of Warminster Scudamore. Sir Walter died shortly before 11 September 1318 doubtless at his seat at Upton Scudamore. His death was not noticed immediately by the exchequer clerks at Westminster for on 8 June 1319 a writ was addressed to Sir Walter Scudamore commanding him to “cause all estreets of the rolls of himself and his associates, as former justices of assizes, of oyer and terminer, and of gaol delivery” to be delivered to them at London.

Sir Walter left a last will and testament, presumably written, which unfortunately is lost to us. In 13 Edward II (1319/20) his son and executor John de Scudemore, clerk (priest), was cited by the king’s court for detaining 40 marks (sic) due from his father’s estate to John de Craule. It appears that his brother-in-law John Beaumont paid the debt owed to Craule, but he had not been repaid by John Scudamore. On 17 August 1329 John de Bello Monte [Beaumont] put in his place Richard de la Hays, another clerk, to prosecute of a recognisance for £40 made to him in chancery by John de Escudemour. Beaufort’s claim still went unpaid and 18 April 1331 he renewed it naming John de Anlaghly, clerk, and Henry Bony to prosecute the execution of the same recognisance for £40 “made to him in chancery by John de Escudemor.”

Nothing is known of Margery, the wife of Sir Walter (I) Scudamore, beyond her name. It is mentioned only once in a suit about a tenement at Clewer in Berkshire brought at the Easter term of 1348 by a grandson after her death.

Children:

i. Sir (III) Peter (dead 1342), his heir, lord of Upton Scudamore.
ii. Sir John, a clerk, the Prebend of Hayes, in Exeter, Devon, of whom further.
iii. Walter, of Great Somerford, Wiltshire, noticed elsewhere
iv. Ralph (probably). A Ralph Skydemor is found in 1332 at a tithing (left unstated) in Tavistock Hundred where he had paid a tax of 12d in a lay subsidy taken there.

Nothing more is known for certain about him, but he probably was the ancestor to the families at Sheepstor and later Bratton Clovelly in Devonshire, noticed hereafter and elsewhere.
v. Alice, who married Sir John Beaumont (1270?-1330) of Shirwell, Devon, noticed below.
v. Eleanor, who was the first wife of Sir Henry Percy of Great Chalfield, Wiltshire.

The Percys had one daughter, Beatrice, a minor in 1359, who married firstly John Belet, but left issue by her third husband Robert Beverly. The Beverlys pressed a claim in 1431 for the possession of Great Chalfield against the posterity of Sir Henry Percy’s second wife, Constance.

vi. Maud (probably) who married about 1314 Sir Edmund de Plescy (1286-1327) of Barnsley, Gloucestershire. On 16 June 1327 Walter de Skydemor, her presumptive father, and Robert Sawoury of Wiltshire, and William Ayet of Hertfordshire, were mainpernors in chancery for Maud, now a widow, who had a license from the new king to marry whom she wanted. Her son Nicholas de Plescy was born about 1317 now became a ward of the Crown and is noticed later. Maud Plescy also petitioned the king to restore her dower in the manor of Barnsley, Gloucestershire, which her late husband had granted in 1322 (some eight years after their marriage) to Hugh Despenser, the elder.

Exeter, Devon

Sir John de Skydemor (or Skodemor), a clerk, was an older son of Sir Walter (I) of Upton Scudamore and Chettiscombe. He was instituted as the Prebend of Hayes in the Castle of Exeter on 5 March 1312/13 with Lady Alianora de Courtenay as his Patron.\(^{15}\)

Lady Alianora was the daughter of Sir Hugh Le Despenser of Ryhall, Rutland (the Justiciar of England), and his wife Aline, the daughter and sole heir of Phillip Bassett, lord of Wycombe, Buckinghamshire. Alianora married Sir Hugh (I) de Courtenay of Okehampton, Devon who died on 28 February 1292. He left his widow Alianora (who lived on until 1328) in control of a part of his estate until his son Hugh (II) de Courtenay (1276?-1340) was of full age.\(^{16}\) The young Hugh, noticed earlier, later was made the first Earl of Devon of the Courtenay creation in 1335.\(^{17}\)

It is possible that John Skydemor’s office had the favour of presentation by Lady Alianora because her daughter Aveline Courtenay had married Sir John Giffard (ca.1287-1322) about a year earlier in 1311. Giffard was hanged at Gloucester for treason in 1322, and later two of her Skydmore cousins from Upton Scudamore who had been Giffard’s adherents at his rebellion and who narrowly escaped that fate themselves.\(^{18}\)

Prebendaries were important as they looked after the income which came from the estates belonging to the Cathedral. The collegiate chapel of the Holy Trinity at Hayes was founded by King Stephen and was sometimes known as the free chapel of Heis which had four prebendaries.\(^{19}\) It is not known how well John initially undertook his role but the Magna Britannia records that “It was reported to Bishop Stapeldon at his visitation in 1321, that the chapel was ruinous, in part roofless, and that it could not used for divine service. It is likely that after this report that John Skydmore, the prebendary, saw it repaired.”

On 16 May 1328 John de Stonford acknowledges that he owed 100s to John de Escudemore to be levied in default of payment on his lands and chattels in Devon.\(^{20}\)

In 1339 the register of Bishop Grandison notes that John, the Prebend of Hayes in the castle of Exeter, also had the custody of the parish church of Okehampton which was the principal seat of Courtenay family. Sir John Skidemor seems to have had an exceedingly long life at Exeter and must have survived until at least the age of 80. At his death Thomas de Courtenay, clerk, the Prebendary of Cutton, was named to succeed him on 13 November 1369. His father, Sir Hugh (III) de Courtenay (1303-1377), the second Earl of Devon, was his patron which suggests both the importance and the income which Skidmore enjoyed during his time at Okehampton.\(^{21}\)

It is interesting to see that John de Skydemor, the Prebend, had John Grandison (who had been made the Bishop of Exeter by the patronage of the Earl of Devon) as his superior after 1327, and that the bishop was after 1335 also the lord of Ewyas Harold in Herefordshire. In 1368 Peter Eskedemore, the lord of Upton Scudamore (which belonged to the honour of Ewyas Harold) paid the 25s in rent that he owed to the honor for Upton Scudamore to John de Gruanson, the Bishop of Exeter.\(^{22}\)

\(^{15}\) The Register of Walter de Stapeldon, Bishop of Exeter AD 1307-1326, G. Bell and Sons, 1892. There is some confusion in the register as Walter de Wereminster is also listed as instituted on 6 April 1313. This is likely to have been wrongly transcribed and should have been April 1312 when John de Sky demor succeeded Warminster.

\(^{16}\) It appears she had some rights of patronage after that as well.

Shirwell, Devon

Alice, a daughter of Sir Walter (I) Scudamore and his wife Margery, married Sir John Beaumont (1270?-1330), lord of what is now Youlston Park, then a hamlet in Shirwell parish. He was the son of Sir Phillip Beaumont (died 1272) and Ermengarda Punchardon. It may be taken as certain that Alice came out of Upton Scudamore for the inquest post mortem of Sir Peter de Escudamor in 1293 confused her with Alice Bavant. Some part of the 24 jurors then said collectively (but in error) that "Alice de Beaumont, daughter of the said Peter, is his next heir, and is of full age." Peter’s next heir was in fact his daughter Alice de Bavant and Alice Beaumont was his sister and not his heir.

It is not known how Alice was introduced to the Beaumonts but it may have been by the Courtenays. Her intended husband had held land that had belonged to Hugh de Courtenay. Her husband John Beaumont was a Member of Parliament for Devon in 1325. He purchased the wardship of Nicholas de Plescy, his wife’s nephew, in 1328 from another Devonshire knight, Sir John de Sully, who had it by a grant from the Crown. The John de Eskidemour, who testified to this purchase, was clearly the Prebend of Hayes. He was was previously indebted to Plescy’s estate for £40, a debt that his brother-in-law seems to have assumed, and on 17 August 1329 John de Bello Monte [Beaumont] puts in his place Richard de la Hays, clerk, to prosecute of a recognisance for £40 that had been made to him in chancery by John de Escudemour.

Sir John died in 1330. His widow Alice was owed £300 by John de Chudleigh, a sum that was due at Easter term in 1338. When he failed to pay it she promptly obtained a sheriff’s order of imprisonment against him. None of Alice Beaumont’s children seem to have produced offspring. Her daughter Joan married James Chudleigh and died childless devising her estates elsewhere.

Sheepstor, Devon

Sheepstor is today a small village on the western side of Dartmoor in Roborough Hundred, seven miles southeast of the early market town of Tavistock. Ralph Skydemor, whowas taxed 12d at Tavistock, Devon in a lay subsidy assessed in 1332 was one of the more prosperous residents. Proximity suggests that he was ancestor to the Skydmores found soon after at Sheepstor.

Sheepstor had been held much earlier by the Combe family. Herbertus de Combe held lands at Shytelescomb “called of Tavistock” from Wido (Guy) de Breteville of Tavistock. In 27 Henry III (1242/3)

30 Thomas Westcote, A view of Devonshire in MDCXXX with a pedigree of most of its gentry, (Exeter,1845).
Herbert de Combe held it as a half a knight’s fee of the Honour of Plympton.
Sir William Pole, the distinguished historian of Devon, set down the lord of Shithestor in 24 Edward I (1295/6) as John Herbert “of Combe.” An account for the Scudamores at Sheepstor can be derived from the few deeds that survive for them and the Elford pedigree of 1620.

John de Scudamore, was the first of his name at Sheepstor. In 19 Edward III (1345/6) he held half a knight’s fee there from the Courtenay Honour of Plympton “which John Herbert formerly held.” It can be taken that when John Scudamore married the unnamed daughter and heiress of John Herbert he was clearly of sufficient stature himself to have married into what was an old landed family. He was known to the Courtenays, and this probably meant that he must have come out of the Chettiscombe family.

Marriage was not a romantic affair. There would have been a signed contract, now lost of course, and as John Scudamore seems to have been without land he probably brought a sum of money to his bride and her family. The fees of the Courtenay Honour (of which Sheepstor was a part) were responsible for maintaining the castle of Plympton which enjoyed great privileges and extended over a great many parishes. The tenants were formerly bound “to keep a turret of Plympton Castle in repair.”

He was succeeded by William Skydmore doubtless his eldest son. He held Sheepstor on 5 March 1377 according to the inquest post mortem taken after the death of Hugh (II) de Courtenay (1303-1377), the second Earl of Devon. William had died before 1390 and was succeeded by his son John.

John Scudamore, “lord of Sheepstor,” gave a charter on 2 December 1390 granting land at Sheepstone to Richard Middleworry. A year later on 15 December 1391 he confirmed to a certain John Sanders land which John Herbert (undoubtedly Scudamore’s grandfather) had previously granted to Sanders. He was succeeded by his eldest son John.

John Scudamore, the fourth Scudamore lord of Sheepstor, on 10 October 1483 gave a confirmation of land at Sheepstor which Herbert de Combe, who he called “my kinsman and ancestor,” had once granted to Ralph de Veteriponte (Vipont). He died without male issue leaving two daughters as co-heiresses:

i. Joan, doubtless the senior daughter took Sheepstor to her husband, John Elford. Their son John Elford succeeded to Sheepstor where he died on 6 February 1517 and was “buried under a faire stone” in the church which has now disappeared.

ii. Dionysia. She married _______ Cole, by whom she is said to have had a son John Cole of Addiscombe, Devon.

Towards the end of the 15th century (after 1483) and after only four generations Sheepstor went from the Scudamores to the Elford family. In 1620 Walter Elford (1576-1648) of Sheepstor presented his evidences and muniments to the Clarenceux Herald who set down “by which it appeareth that his ancestors married the co-heir of Scudamore near 200 years since, by which marriage they became possessed of the manor of Shittistore, alias Sheepstor, which they possess and enjoy to this day.”

The Elfords thereafter quartered the arms of the Scudamores of Upton Scudamore, but with a difference (Gules, 3 stirrups silver) in the right of their descent from Joan Scudamore. The church of Widecombe-in-the Moor, Devon also had the arms of Elford impaling the Scudamore stirrups and leathers.

The stirrups were sometimes differenced in the arms when descending through female descendents of the Elfords as argent or sable.

Sheepstor continued with the Elfords until the death of Sir William Elford, a Baronet, of Bickham, Devon who died without issue on 30 November 1837. Their house at Longstone in Sheepstor was built by 31 The Honour of Plympton was then held by Baldwin (III) Reviers (died 1245) whose eventual heir was Hugh (III) de Courtenay (died 1340), Earl of Devon and lord of Okehampton, Devon.

32 His arms, a bull passant, on a monument erected later are attributed to Bevill in a heraldic manuscript giving the blazons and shield of the family. Elsewhere he is said to have married a Cole, and his son Roger Elford is said to have married a daughter of Adams.
33 Addiscombe may be the Edgecumbe, largely only a farmstead, in Milton Abbot near Tavistock.

Walter Elford in 1633, and it is said to have been “mutilated” by Georgian alterations. It was a farmhouse by 1850 and later was ruinous and abandoned. Almost nothing remains of it today. The fate of the younger sons of the several generations of this family at Sheepstor is not known. A son very probably went to Bratton Clovelly, a parish to be noticed elsewhere. In a lay subsidy taken in 1377 of Exeter a Robert Skydemour, who was a leathemaker, paid a tax of 2d.

Later a John Skydemour is noticed in a roll of the Mayor’s Court of Exeter in 10/11 Henry VI (1432) as apprenticed for eight years of John Colle, deceased. If the young Skydemour was apprenticed at about the usual age of 13 years (and then expected to be admitted as a freeman at 21) this would suggest that he was born about 1419. It seems likely that both Cole and Skydmore came out of Sheepstor.

Skydmores certainly became incumbents to churches where the Courtenays had the right of presentation. Others probably learned useful and profitable trades and settled in Courtenay manors or elsewhere. Some may have joined the naval tradition for which the Courtenay family was known and from the ports that they held like Plympton. A certain Thomas Skydemore of Plympton Earls was accused, with others, by the “provost and commonality” of an affray in the market there between 1418 and 1424. Still another John Skydmore was assessed at Totnes in 1414 and he may also have been a seafarer.

Pucklechurch, Westerleigh and Wick.
The bishop of Bath and Wells is lord there and it is worth £110 10sh 0d. Sir Amyas Pollet [Paulet] is steward there.41

At Westerleigh, William Weston was curate there, has for stipend £6.

Richard Skydmore, lands valued at £4. He had splints & a sword.
Richard Skydmore had a friend and neighbor John Rogers with lands worth £5. Rogers had a sallet & [dagger, canceled] gorget. We have met Rogers elsewhere in the manorial records, and in his will which survives. A splint was armour for the outer arm, sometimes extending down to the back of the hand. Rogers’ sallet was a light, rounded helmet, and a gorget protected the throat.

Elsewhere in the county at Siddington [Langley], page 107r. on the border with Wiltshire we find Edward Skydmore, whose lands were worth £20. He was the youngest son of Philip Skydmore (1416-1488) of Holme Lacy, Herefordshire. Edward Skydmore had no prospects as a younger son, but managed to find a widow in middling circumstances. He married (in or after 1506) Isabel, a daughter and coheirress of Edmund Langley of S Siddington, Gloucestershire. She died on 7 March 1540/1 at the age of 66, leaving posterity named Skydmore who continued at Siddington.

This survey (Select Book 26) has been printed as THE MILITARY SURVEY OF GLOUCESTERSHIRE, 1522, edited by R. W. Hodge, Gloucestershire Record Series VI (Bristol and Gloucestershire Archeological Society, 1993). A somewhat later document (Select Book 27) was taken in charge by Stephen Tomlinson and the staff of the Department of Western Manuscripts of the Bodleian Librarian. It has been microfilmed and a print is at the Gloucester Record Office (not seen). Fortunately neither survey was sent up to London as few of these for the other counties of England remain at the Public Record Office.

The next list of a prosperous inhabitants at Westerleigh is a Lay Subsidy taken for the Hundred of Pucklechurch between 1620-5. The original (E.179.116/485) was copied at the Public Record Office in London. At Westerley, we find the following worthies:

Walter Dennys, generosus [gentleman]
Mrs. Ellender Dennys, vid [widow]
William Llewellinge
Anne Dobson, vid [widow]
William Hollister
Edward Haynes
Henry Rydooe
John Rogers
It is strange not to find James Skidmore taxed here, for he was almost certainly of what was called “subsidy rank.” He probably accounted himself fortunate, however, to have been overlooked and thus avoided paying the tax.

THE SKYDMORES OF WESTERLEIGH, THEIR LIVES AND TIMES, WITH THEIR PROBATES AND A GOOD MANY OTHER SOURCES.

by Warren Skidmore

A great many years ago I collected negative white on black photostat copies of most of the Skidmore probates in the British counties before their civil war. This was an amusement, and I did brief abstracts of all of them. Those from Gloucestershire were used in 1966 for the first typed edition of my Skidmore family history. Now in 2010 I have finally done full transcripts of this part and added notes about the testators from some of the other records that survive for that same period of the county. All of this is intended to fully supplement the last revision of my book on Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore) of Westerleigh and his posterity. Most readers may prefer the story found in the book and not these rather daunting technical evidences which produced it.

Most of the Skydmores and their associates noticed in this long piece lived in the totally different times of the reign of Queen Elizabeth I, the great Gloriana. All of these people grew up knowing what class they had been born into, and they gave deference to their social superiors and expected similar respect from their inferiors. The sovereign was superior to every other person in her realm, and at the bottom of the hierarchy were the endless number of landless paupers and vagrants who also had next to nothing when it came to personal property.

In a rural parish like Westerleigh, the order ascended upward from the cottagers who had a small house and perhaps an acre or two of land. The husbandmen might have ten acres or more to raise a crop and support his beasts, held by a lease or copyhold from the lord of the manor. Next above them were the yeoman, a smaller but significant middle class. Yeoman, in the time of the Tudors, usually held their land by freehold and had an income of at least 40 shillings by the year. They had considerable local status as they tended to be the churchwardens (or sideman) in the church, and also saw that the business of the local manor was properly tended to by the bailiff or steward. The yeomanry also might improve their lot by a second trade in addition to husbandry. At Westerleigh some of the more ambitious families supported themselves as clothiers or by the weaving of cloth often a cottage industry in the Cotswolds. All these people were subservient to the lord of the manor, the local gentry or nobility (if any), and to the incumbent clergyman.

Women of any class inherited a status commensurate to that of their husbands or their fathers. The husbands might turn out to be disagreeable and marriage was seldom a romantic affair. A daughter was expected to provide some kind of dowry from the family to take to her husband, and this hopefully would mean that she might continue to enjoy the kind of life that she had known while she had lived at home. If her husband proved to be disappointing as a provider she had no recourse, and if she survived her husband his will usually ended her support from his estate if she remarried.

Medieval records of men other than the great magnates are hard to find. Robert Skyddemore of Westerleigh probably found and asked for the possession of a stray colt that he found in the parish in 1463. We know a bit more about his presumptive grandson Richard Skydmore who is found there in a military survey taken for the whole of England in 1522. This survey was an ambitious scheme to collect statistics on both the military strength of England and the wealth of its more important residents. The musters in 1522 listed only those men who were largely freeholders and Parliament demanded 2sh for every £1 they were worth. Richard Skydmore had lands and goods valued at £4, and possessed splints and a sword that could be used in the defense of the realm.\textsuperscript{45} This muster was followed promptly by a crafty new lay subsidy to tax these same freeman. The subsidy has not been seen, but it has now (2010) been announced for publication.\textsuperscript{46}

All the residents of a rural parish at this period were born into membership of the Catholic church, and the incumbent there in 1522 was the curate William Weston. After the time of Henry VIII those who still true to the old Catholic faith concealed their religious sentiments as they would be classified as recusants if they failed to attend the local Protestant service on Easter or refused to accept the new faith. They were also expected to tithe, to celebrate the feast days properly, and to see their children properly christened and their kinfolk buried. Any sort of village gossip about moral transgressions might find it way to the religious “bawdy court” and a citation ordered the offenders to appear before the court. A particular problem was illegitimate children who had to be supported by the parish unless the father was known.

The same religious Consistory Court had the responsibility for the handling of wills and probates. In Gloucestershire it has been estimated that only about 10% of the diocese left a proper will. Happily it can be shown that the Skydmores exceeded that estimate. The administration on an intestate required that an inventory be first made of his property and submitted to the court. Alas, all of these seem to have been lost before 1670 in the county but do survive for the Bristol diocese. If the deceased owned property outside the diocese where they resided then the probate had to be sent up to the Principal Probate Registry of Canterbury. Primogeniture was the general rule, and the bulk of a man’s estate (after the widow had been provided for and his debts paid) went to the eldest son. Younger sons by necessity sometimes managed to marry well or find a wealthy patron, or had been apprenticed by their father or elder brother to learn a really useful trade.

The importance of the lords of the manor can not be overlooked. Looking back again to 1522 we find that Thomas Wolsey (who went on to bigger things) was the bishop of Bath and Wells and was the lord of the manor of Westerleigh. Sir Amyas Paulet (1457-1538) of Hinton St. George, Somerset had secured in 1493 the influential post of High Steward of the estates belonging to the bishopric. For many years thereafter Paulet (and later his son) visited all of the bishop’s manors on rotation where he held periodic courts. All of the men in the manor (which was then commensurate with the parish) were expected to attend the “views of frankpledge” courts or be amerced (fined) for not appearing. Decisions were made at the court for the common good of all of the residents but sometimes these actions were to the detriment of an individual tenant.

It has been said that one the most common offenses presented at manorial courts were matters of drainage. A swamps or pool had to be drained and ditches had to “scoured.” to divert a stream that flooded another man’s house or crops. If a tenant put an unfair number of his cattle or sheep out to pasture on the common this had to be remedied. Paulet (and his successors or deputies) adjudicated all these problems and the petty crime in the manor, but his most important duty was to find tenants when there was vacant land, and then collect the income from it the tenants owed to the bishop.\textsuperscript{47} John Skydmore (born about 1510 and described as an “able archer” in 1542) was probably one of the unnamed free tenants who paid £2 13sh 10d in rent at Westerleigh in 1552. He is probably also the John Skydmore who was buried at the Abbey Church of St. Peter and St. Paul at Bath on 20 October 1570 since the abbey was also in the care of the same bishop of Bath and Wells who was the lord of Westerleigh.

Gloucestershire (and Bristol) are favored when you look at an inventory of their surviving local records.\textsuperscript{48} There is an account roll taken in 1510/1 by a reeve of Westerleigh (not seen) bound with the accounts of a part of the manors held by the Adrian de Castello, then the bishop of Bath and Wells.\textsuperscript{49} Of even greater value Gloucestershire societies have done printed copies of lay subsidies and the splendid muster of able bodied men in 1608 that survives for the entire county. That part for the parish of Westerleigh of this muster is printed below amounted to a virtual census for every adult male living their in 1608. They men are listed with their occupations and made to fit into several categories, firstly of age (about 20, about 40, or 50 to 60). Then there are four categories of stature, tallest, middle, lower, or meanest. They are then described by what their stature would best fit them to do, “to make a pykeman,” “to make a musketyer”, “to serve with a calyver,” (and lastly of the meanest) “fit for a pyoner or of little other use.”

All of these manors are now parishes in Somerset except for Westerleigh in Gloucestershire. More can be learned about all of them in Phyllis M. Hembry’s The Bishops of Bath and Wells, 1540-1640, Social and Economic Problems (London, 1967), Pucklechurch (which then included two later parishes of Westerleigh and Wyke formed from it) were acquired from the monks of Glastonbury in the reign of Henry I.

Finally in 1608 it was shown which men were “trained soldiers” or “subsidy men.” Some of the trained soldiers probably had served the late Queen Elizabeth on her efforts to put down the rebellion in Ireland. These men (and boys) were paid, but we never have a record of their names except for the royal commanders. The subsidy men were the adults who paid the tax [subsidy] when the crown demanded it from the substantial laymen of every town or parish. Lists of the subsidy men however were kept and forwarded onto the barons of the Exchequer where they sometimes survive but probably most were lost.

The subsidies collected in the time of the Tudors were not based on a subject’s income but rather largely on the value of his “unmoveable” possession of land with its houses, gardens, orchards or shops. They were also assessed on their “goods,” those visible moveables like brass pots, pewter, tableboards, or other furnishings within the house (where a bed was usually the most valuable possession). The “taxors,” who set down the sums owed, were usually a worthy man or two of the parish or hundred, and this did not allow very much property (moveable or not) of any value to be concealed.

A few other homey details of the period can be extracted from the records. Barley and apples were plentiful and this produced an enormous yearly supply of beer and hard cider, but diets were slim between early winter and late spring. We know a good deal more about their houses because Acton Court, the Tudor house remodeled by Sir Nicolas Poyntz (1535-1585) at Iron Acton, survives and has been subjected to a ten year project of conservation. Some of the timbers of the early range of the house were cored and tree-ring dating shows that they were felled as early as spring 1535. Sir Nicholas also acquired the manor of Westerleigh (worth £40 16sh 2d) from William Barlow, the bishop of Bath and Wells, on 8 December 1552. Poyntz later sold the manor to John Roberts (1520-1587), an Alderman and Mayor of Bristol, and the Court Book of Westerleigh in the Bristol Record Office has innumerable references to the Skidmore family. In addition Jane, the daughter of the same Sir Nicholas Poyntz, married Sir John Seymour (died 1599), who was lord of Frampton Cotterell but who also had 18 or 20 acres of pasture in Westerleigh which adjoins.

There are two other rolls for Pucklechurch Hundred (which included the tithing of Westerleigh) for courts held on the Tuesday, before the feast of St. Valentine, 26 Edward III (1357) Ref. DD/SAS BA 1, and 23 October, 13 Richard II (1394) Ref. DD/CC 131910/5, but neither mention a Skydmore. There are numerous other sections of composite rolls for the Wells Chapter between 1427 and 1640 which include Pucklechurch entries but have not been seen. An extremely useful later Court Book for Westerleigh, 1625-1653, survives at the Bristol Record Office.

LAY SUBSIDY FOR WESTERLEY, 1581.

This subsidy is of considerable interest to the family, although Richard Skydmore was clearly not yet of subsidy rank in 1581 and his father (who might have been) had died ten years earlier. Richard is first noticed two years later in 1583 when Joan Fowler of Wapley named him as one of the overseers of her will. She was assessed at Wapley in 1581 on £3 in goods for which she was assessed 5 shillings.

The two collectors for this southern part of the subsidy were Sir Thomas Porter and Thomas Thockmorton, esquire. It is interesting to find that the Thomas Thockmorton (1539-1607) of Tortworth was the maternal grandfather of the first viscount Scudamore. Moreover he was accused in 1589 of provoking a riot against Nicolas Poyntz [of Iron Acton] and Thockmorton was also then said to have used his position as a subsidy commissioner (and as the captain of a trained band) to impress men for the campaign in Ireland. It is impossible to know, but perhaps some of the Skydmores who were “trayned soldyers” in 1608 had gone out to Ireland as boys or young men at the insistence of Sir Thomas Thockmorton.

52 Public Record Office, E.101/58/24. This is taken from an old photostat copy for the whole of Pucklechurch Hundred which included the tithings of Pucklechurch, Syston, Coleaston, Wyck, and Westerley. Only Westerleigh parish has been transcribed here. Archers are self-explanatory, but Billmen were adjudged as able to fight with a halberd or broadsword. This muster listed men only between 16 and 60.

53 This subsidy (Select Roll 82) was set down on May 10th in the 23rd year of the reign of “the lady queen” (1581). A copy of the roll survives at Berkeley Castle but it includes only the six hundreds in the southwestern part of the county (Berkeley, Grumbold’s Ash, Thornbury, Henbury, Pucklechurch, and Barton). It was transcribed by volunteers, digitized by Dr. Ray Wilson, and is now posted (with the returns for the four other parishes of Pucklechurch, Cold Aston, Siston, and Wick in Puckechurch Hundred) on the website of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society.

54 Those with goods worth less than £3 were not taxed.

55 I have a photostat of the will of the very unhappy Dame Mary, wife of Sir James Scudamore and Thockmorton’s daughter, partly in her own hand which I hope to transcribe for an Occasional Paper.

Notes. In addition to the Skidmores found at Westerleigh there were two men from that place working in adjoining parishes:
At Barkely Burrowe, John Skidmore, weaver, 2. ca.
At Wapley and Codrington, Thomas Skidmore, 1. m., servant to Symon Smith.
It is curious that no John Cooke is found at Westbury-upon-Trym although he married the widow Annes Skidmore there in the same month that the muster was set down.

A short list of the prosperous inhabitants at Westerleigh is found in a Lay Subsidy taken for the Hundred of Pucklechurch between 1620-5.

NOTES. It is strange not to find James Skidmore taxed at Westerleigh for he was almost certainly of what was known as “subsidy rank.” Possibly he was caught at Frampton Coterrell (which adjoins) where he left posterity.

NOTES. Richard Skydmore, the infant baptized on 11 March 1637 went almost immediately with his mother to Boston, Massachusetts and died, a bachelor, by 1661 at Norwalk, Connecticut. William Prigg, who signed this transcript as a churchwarden, was perhaps his grandfather.

There is unfortunately a long eight year gap after 1629, the period when the younger sisters of this Richard were likely to have been born.

Transcripts survive for the years 1607/8, 1608/9, 1609/10, 1612/3, 1617/8, 1620/1, 1621/2, 1622/3, 1623/4, 1625/6, 1628/9, 1629/30, 1637/8 (above), 1640/1. Many of these years (from March 25th until the same date in the following year) are in poor condition. There is one undated list which is undoubtedly from about 1637 since Samuel Smyth signs as the curate while William Syford and William Musley are churchwardens, and William Prigge and Thomas Rudge appear as sidemen.
SKYDMORE PROBATES ABOUT WESTERLEIGH IN GLOUCESTERSHIRE

The text of the wills printed below has been transcribed as precisely as possible adding only an occasional bit of punctuation. There were no dictionaries and the spelling is phonetic by the clerks who never wasted expensive paper or vellum when a common word could be contracted or omitted.

Master of September 1608. Westerleigh, Richard Skidmore unable in body hath one musket furn[ished]. He was probably over 60 years of age and born before 1550.

If William Skidmore ever filed chancery suites to recover the money owed his father they have not been found indexed at the Public Record Offices.

The Administration of the goods of WILLIAM SCUDAMORE, late of Westerleigh in the diocese of Gloucester, deceased, was granted to JOHN SCUDAMORE, the natural son, and then to JAMES SCUDAMORE of Westerleigh, yeoman, and to JOSEPH WHITEWOOD of Mangotsfield, yeoman, 30 November 1615. Acquittance was given on 18 September 1617 to JOHN SCUDAMORE, of Bath in the diocese of Bath, of the administration on the goods of WILLIAM SCUDAMORE, deceased, late of Westerleigh in the diocese of Gloucester.

NOTES. This is the only administration found, and the only probate recorded as a Scudamore. His children were remembered in the will of his niece Elizabeth Skidmore, next below.

Master of September 1608. Westerleigh. William Skidmore Warburner. [aged about 40] a tr[ained] sub[sidy man]. What his uncommon occupation involved is unknown, but he may have been charcoal burner.

In Wittness whereof I have hereunto put my hand & Seal the Eighteenth day of September Anno Dni: 1614. Signed & sealed in the presence of us, The marke of [+] ELIZABETH SKYDMORE. THOMAS MORRIS, WM RIDER, PETER HAWKSWORTHE

NOTES. Elizabeth Skydmore was buried on 18 September 1614. No date of proof is shown on her will. Her unnamed mistress in 1614 was Susannah Wynward who had married Sir John Stafford as his second wife on 26 October 1607. Susannah was the daughter of George and Elizabeth (Gibson) Stonehouse of Little Peckham, Kent and Radley, Berkshire, and she was previously the widow of John Wynward. Her father was one of the Clerks of the Green Cloth to Queen Elizabeth, while her Wynward husband had been a Groom of the Chamber to the Queen. Item. I give to the MARY SKIDMORE who died in 1614, a spinster of Marlwood Park in Thornbury, Gloucestershire. This was a postscript to the Occasional Paper, no. 29, Lady Mary Scudamore (c.1550-1603), courtier. This paper (no. 35) suggests that Elizabeth Skydmore must have known the mother of Sir John Stafford who served Queen Elizabeth at court at the same time as Lady Mary Scudamore. Both papers are posted on the Skidmore family website (www.skidmorefamilyhistory.com).

NOTES This will is miserably written and an exact transcript (including finally “tools of iron,”) took a considerable amount of time to transcribe. On the reverse side of this will is written in a better hand: “De[b]tts owed by Mr. James Skidmore to Mr. Hobbs of Cowley in ye Countie of Somerset fowtereene pounds.” No date of proof is shown.

Muster of September 1608. Westerleigh, James Skidmore husbandman, 3 [aged between 50 and 60] m.[of middle stature fitt to make a musketyre] a tr[ained soldier].

Although Thomas Skidmore was literate in happier days, his will at 79 is signed only with a large and tremulous “ T ” and he owned at least one book according this document in a day when they were seldom valued in inventories.

WILLIAM x PRIGG, his marke. Witnesses to this will & testament ROBERT ALLSOPP, JOHN PRIGG, RICHARD HOLLISTER, THOMAS x PRIGG.

NOTES. Proved at Painswick, 5 February 1645/6. William Prigg was aged about 40 in 1608, the son of a Thomas Prigg who died testate in 1599 leaving a widow Margaret. She left an imperfect will in 1616 leaving ten shilling each to two favored grandchildren William, son of Henry Allsop, and to Joan daughter of Thomas Prigg. All of her other grandchildren (unfortunately not named) were left six shillings, six pence. There were no witnesses, but Hugh Simons and Henry Allsop [clearly a son-in-law] were made overseers.

The parish register is missing, but ELLINOR, (“wife of William Prigg”), was buried on 24 July 1628 according to the bishop’s transcript for that year. She was the mother of his elder children. Thomas (bapt. 4 January 1617/8), William (bapt. 4 July 1621), and Richard (bapt. 22 February 1623/4). Elinor undoubtedly was also the mother of William’s still earlier children Samuel, Sarah and probably Ellen (or Ellinor), born say 1605-10, who followed her husband Thomas Skidmore to Massachusetts. The earlier transcripts are largely missing and their christenings can not be found. William Prigg’s younger daughter’s Elizabeth (bapt. 1637) and Hannah (bapt 2 August 1640) belong clearly to his later marriage to a second wife ELIZABETH, who survived him.

Ellen Skidmore, probably belonged to this Prigg family. The Priggs much later improved their lot at Westerleigh. Thomas Prigg in 1698 gave the church there a large silver flagon and plate, and on an oval table against the east wall of the chancel of the church is a monument to the memory of a Richard Prigg, Gentleman. He died in 1723 aged 63 bearing arms Argent, lion rampant regardant azure, between 3 Trefoils.

Muster of September 1608. Westerleigh, William Prigge, husbandman, 2 [aged about 40] ca [of lower stature fitt to serve with a calyver] t[a]neyd soldier.

An earlier William Prigg, living in the time of Bishop John Clerk (1523-1541), was a victim of the extortions of John Brugge who was, to the bishop’s great slander, the bailiff at Pucklechurch. This hundred then included Westerleigh parish where Brugge had seized sheep and cattle from William Hobbes and William Prigg worth 40 marks wrongly calling them escheats.61 This William Prigg may very well have been an ancestor to the descendants of Thomas Skidmore (1604-1684) of New England.

THE SKYDMORE FAMILY OF CHEWTON MENDIP, SOMERSET, AND EYAM, DERBYSHIRE

by Warren Skidmore

These notes are based on an earlier account of the families in the 17th century at Taddington, Derbyshire and at Wellow and Chewton Mendip in Somerset first published in May 1991 in a very small edition of my book Thirty Generation of the Scudamore/Skidmore Family in England and America. It came as a considerable surprise to find, after Colonel William F. Skidmore started to sort out the various branches of the family by comparing their DNA that the Derbyshire family came beyond doubt out of the family in Somerset.

There is nothing more difficult for a family historian to prove than a removal. When I cast about trying to find the kinship between the two families, Chewton Mendip in Somerset soon appeared to be the most likely. It was encouraging to find that two rather uncommon given names, Arthur and Simon, were both used there and in Derbyshire at the proper time. Final proof was the discovery that Chewton Mendip in Somerset and Eyam in the Peake district of Derbyshire were the two largest producers of lead in the 16th century. An improved method of smelting the lead ore was developed in Somerset, and there was soon after a sizable migration of men who had mastered this new technology to Derbyshire.

If now seems clear that the senior branch of the family was at Eyam and that Taddington was a cadet branch, and that both of these large Derbyshire families were associated with lead mining. The case was now proven to my satisfaction.

Mrs. Linda (Skidmore) Moffatt has already announced her intention to do a major history of the family in Derbyshire. She is the founder and principal researcher for the Skidmore Family History Group in England. She has transcribed many of the British census records, and found that the Derbyshire family is currently the second largest Skidmore family in England. Her chief deputy enrolled in this project is Velma Skidmore of Manhattan, Kansas, the wife of Dr. Edward Skidmore, and the mother of several Skidmore sons. She read and made notes from the books on lead mining quoted later, and did the still bigger and more difficult job of deciphering the Chewton Mendip parish registers and the Taddington transcripts, both surviving but in disastrous condition. In England, Linda Moffatt spent four days at the Derbyshire Record Office, and has done an intensive search of the Eyam parish register (now transcribed and available on a CD) and sorted out the references to the family in the Taddington registers which are also in very poor condition.

My own contribution to this new project has been minimal. I have combined and revised my original notes from Dunkerton, Chewton Mendip, Eyam, Taddington, and Sheffield which were published earlier in my Thirty Generations.

I must also single out the help I found in the work done several years ago, but new to me, by Dr. Glen Trezza of Boston, Massachusetts who descends from the Skidmore family and several other early families once found at Eyam. Many of his useful comments on several early Derbyshire families can be found posted on the internet.

62 The Somerset product was rated as inferior to “the best leade in England which was Peake Leade in Derbyshire” according to the Lansdowne Mss. 31, no. 62 (folio 164) at the British Library, a reference found and quoted by J. W. Gough in The Mines of Mendip, (Revised edition, New York, 1967) 178.

63 The largest is Mrs. Moffatt’s own family from Kingswinford in Staffordshire. Her immense history of that family, done almost entirely by her own labor and at her own expense, was published in 2004 as Skidmore Families of the Black Country and Birmingham 1600-1900. [Out of print, transferred to www.skidmorefamilyhistory.com. (LM)].
This article should be considered as an advertisement for the forthcoming book by Mrs. Moffatt. It will no doubt be better organized and contain most (if not all) of the Derbyshire family living in 1901 with a full index. Descendants must await further bulletin from her.64 (WS)

The family at Wellow descends from a John Skydemor who was living at Dunkerton on 25 April 1441 when he was amerced [fined] 4d. for default of rent on a tract of copyhold land he held [presumably at Carlingcott] in Dunkerton according to a view of frankpledge taken that day. His origin is currently unknown.3 This revision begins with:

ROBERT SKYDMORE, the elder, of Carlingcott in Dunkerton, Somerset, was born about 1540, and was left a minor at the time of his father’s death in 1554.4 He had an estate at Carlingcott which he still held in 1609 from his nephew Thomas Skydmore, the heir of his elder brother, on extremely lenient terms paying only an annual rent of £1. His lease, presumably made in 1561 for 99 years, had a further 61 years to run and his son Robert was named by the terms of the lease to succeed him there. Robert Skydmore was living as late as 9 June 1609, a very old man, when he is mentioned in the inquest post mortem as a tenant of his nephew Thomas. Robert Skydmore, the elder, had issue doubtless with others,5

1. ROBERT, his heir, of whom further.
2. William, of High Littleton, Somerset. He was a husbandman and copyholder at Peters Cloudbill in High Littleton, where he left a will dated 10 June 1632. He had died before 31 January 1632/3 when an inventory was taken of his estate, and left issue,
   1. Francis, the executor of his father in 1633.
   2. Elinor, who married and had two unnamed children who were each left a lamb in the will of their grandfather William Skydmore.
   3. Mary. She was unmarried in 1632 and was to have, according to the terms of her father’s will, the lease of his land at Peters Cloudbill. She appears to have died soon after leaving a will written in 1632 at Hallatrow, another hamlet in High Littleton. Her will was unfortunately lost in the German bombing of Exeter in 1942 and its provisions are unknown.
3. Tomasin. She married Laurence Hedges of Bunnet [Burnett], Somerset on 19 May 1606.
4. Margaret. She was buried on 11 January 1607 as the daughter of Robert Skidmore “the elder.”

His heir,

ROBERT SKIDMORE, the younger, of Carlingcott. He was a churchwarden at Dunkerton as early as 1603, and is last noticed there when he was assessed in the Lay Subsidy of 1628.65 He had issue, perhaps with others,

1. Robert (perhaps). He may be the man of this name who was exempt from the Hearth Tax in 1665 as he was “not rated to Church or [was] poor by reason of his poverty.” He was exempted again in 1670 and 1674.
2. James, buried 24 December 1609.
3. James, born about 1611. He was apprenticed to William Hulett, a merchant taylor, of Fleet Street, London, on 25 September 1626 for seven years and was admitted a freeman on 11 April 1636. He died at Limehouse in Stepney, called “a citizen and a merchant taylor” leaving a will (signed as James Scudamore) dated 11 May and promptly probated 13 June 1656.66 It remembers his wife Joane, his brother Thomas, and his brother’s two children Thomas (to whom he left £5 and two fowling pieces [guns] and Elizabeth Scudamore. His widow Joane may be the Jane Scudamore who married Hugh Lewis in 1657 at St. George’s, Southwark.
4. Thomas, noticed next above. He may also have lived at London.
5. Joseph, baptized 18 September 1615 (twin). He married Joan [_______] who was buried at Marksbury, Somerset as his widow on 19 February 1678/9, where their three daughters had been christened. He was also exempted from paying the Hearth Tax in 1670-4. Had issue,
   1. Sara, baptized 3 September 1643.
   2. Hester, baptized 24 November 1644.

64 Now available at www.skidmorefamilyhistory.com as Skidmore Lead Miners of Derbyshire and their Descendants (LM).
65 He was also a churchwarden, as known, in 1607, 1609, 1613 and 1623.
66 Public Record Office, PROB 11/256. His will was witnessed by John Minthorne and Sir Ralph Outlaw.
3. Mary, baptized 4 January 1645/6 and buried on 19 July 1647.
1. Mary, baptized 18 September 1615 (twin), buried 11 February 1615/6.

THOMAS SKYDMORE, the first of his name at Chewton Mendip, was born perhaps about 1565 a son of Robert, the elder, of Dunkerton. He was probably drawn to Chewton (which is hard by Dunkerton) since in the late sixteenth century lead was mined intensively only at two places, in the Mendip Hills in Somerset, and in the Peake District in Derbyshire. Thomas Skydmore married and had issue christened at Chewton Mendip, but seems to have died either elsewhere or intestate. No mention has been found of him in the surviving index to probates, or in the file of early copies of the wills lost in 1942 collected by the Somerset Record Office. Such very negative information as we have suggests that he (and perhaps his wife) might have died in Derbyshire. He did have issue however, christened at Chewton Mendip.67

1. Joan [Johane], baptized 1 July 1588. Probably died young.
2. Simon, baptized 1 November 1590 (twin). He was buried 21 October 1595.
3. ROBERT, of Chewton Mendip, baptized 1 November 1590 (twin), of whom further.
4. ARTHUR, baptized 4 August 1593, probably the first of his family to settle at Eyam, Derbyshire, of whom later.
5. Richard buried 16 October 1595.
6. THOMAS (probably), of Taddington, Derbyshire, to whom we will eventually return.
7. A son [illegible, but probably SIMON], baptized December 1600.68
8. Mary, baptized 11 October 1601. She is probably the lady of this name buried 11 April 1626.

The eldest surviving son,

ROBERT SKIDMORE, was baptized 1 November 1590 (a twin) at Chewton Mendip. He had a lease for three lives of a certain messuage there (containing only a half acre) from Philip Bridges of Stone Easton on 17 June 1619. At the time of his death in 1634 he was a copyholder at Stock Hill in Chewton Mendip with a house “newly builded by me.” He married Mary, perhaps a daughter of [_______] Lane, who apparently survived him. His will dated 1 May (and proved 2 July) 1634 gives his occupation as “mineral man,” and named his brother-in-law William Lane as one of the overseers of his estate. He was buried in the churchyard at Chewton Mendip on 20 May 1634. Had issue,

1. Thomas, baptized 22 January 1612/13. He was buried 4 May 1616.
2. Mary, eldest surviving child. She was baptized 29 January 1616/7 and was living on 17 June 1619 when she (as the first child then born) was named as the third party with her parents in the tripartite lease for three lives from Philip Bridges. She died an infant soon after.
3. Mary, baptized 15 September 1620. She married Morgan Hopkins on 5 February 1641/2.
4. JAMES, probably the eldest surviving son, of whom further.
5. Lewis. He was a blacksmith and lived first at Nailsea, Somerset (where he owned two houses), but died at Almondsbury, Gloucestershire. His will is dated 31 July (and proved at the Prerogative Court of Canterbury on 17 October 1677) when probate was given to his sister Elinor Hulbard, the executrix named.
7. Elinor, baptized 3 November 1622. She married Edward Hulbard [Holbert] of Weston, Somerset.

His eldest son,

JAMES SKIDMORE, of the Burrough in Wedmore, Somerset. He was a minor at his father’s death, and he and his brother Lewis were “to be put to be apprentices” according to their father’s will. He married firstly Jane Hooper by whom he had issue, a son, 67 Extracts from register of Chewton Mendip (1554-1689) have been made by Mrs. Velma Skidmore of Manhattan, Kansas, using microfilm (no. 1526507) from the Family History Library at Salt Lake City. The earliest registers are in wretched condition. They were read by Mrs. Skidmore through 1689 (an enormous chore), together with what survives of the bishop’s transcripts for the parish. There are extracts from the register, found earlier at the Society of Genealogists in London.

68 This name is impossible to read, but the surviving smudges look more like Simon than any other likely alternative.
1. James, baptized 19 May 1650 at Wedmore. He died young. James Skidmore, the elder, then married secondly Christian Taylor on 3 February 1652/3 by whom he had issue (the first three christened at Wedmore,
2. James, baptized 18 November 1653. He was living in 1677 when he was remembered in the will of his uncle Lewis Skidmore.
3. Robert, baptized 31 January 1654/5. He was buried at Wedmore on 7 November 1657.
4. Lewis, baptized 2 April 1657. He was living in 1677.
5. Thomas, living 1677.
6. Mary, living 1677.
James Skidmore seems to have disappeared from Wedmore after 1657, and no probate has yet been found for him.

The second son of Thomas Skydmore, the elder, of Chewton Mendip,

ARTHUR SKIDMORE was baptized there on 4 August 1593. He appears to have been the first of his name in Derbyshire where he became a lead miner at Eyam. The miners in Somerset, as noticed earlier, had devised a superior method of smelting lead with a fixed ore hearth on the ground. This greatly improved productivity and profits for the owners, and an increasing number of Somerset migrants, Arthur Skidmore among them, took the new process up to Derbyshire and did not return.69 He died at Eyam, untimely it would seem, before 15 July 1629 when an inventory totaling £30 6sh 4d was taken of his estate by John Sheldon, Thomas Wilson, and Thomas Cowper of that place.70 The administration on his estate was granted a week later on 22 July 1629 to his widow Anne (or Annis) Skydmore, and Simon Skydmore of Eyam (doubtless his brother) became her bondsman. Anne Skydmore remained Arthur’s widow and was buried at Eyam on 2 April 1654. They had issue three children, minors at their father’s death,
1. THOMAS. He was ancestor of a large family at Eyam, to whom we will eventually return.
2. Ellen. She married Francis Thornley of Eyam on 8 October 1638 and was buried as his wife on 28 June 1657. Thornley married secondly Elizabeth Chapman, a widow, and had a number of children by his first wife who died of the plague at Eyam in 1666.
3. Mary. She married George Parks (died 1701), a widower of Wardlow.

The third son of Thomas Skydmore, the elder, of Chewton Mendip,

THOMAS SKYDMORE, THE YOUNGER, probably later of Taddington, Derbyshire. He married Agnes Von [perhaps Vaughan?] on 24 November 1617 at Chewton Mendip, who is probably the Agnis Skidmore buried there on 6 April 1626. In 1578 the manager for George Talbot (1522-1590), the sixth earl of Shrewsbury, reported that he was smelting about 54 loads of lead a week from Shrewsbury’s mines at Taddington and Brassington.71 Thomas Skydmore seems to have become an early communicant at the chapel of St. Michael and All Angels in the western part of Taddington, Derbyshire. His presumptive son Richard Skydmore, who died in 1660 or 1661, requested in his will to be buried inside the church at Taddington “as near conveniently be to the burial place of my Anncestours.”72 He left presumptive posterity born at Taddington, no doubt with others,

69 David Kiernan, The Derbyshire Lead Industry in the Sixteenth Century (Derbyshire Record Society, volume XIV, 1989) 171-2. It was said in 1581 that “The beste leade in England is Peak leade in Derbyshire, The second [best] is made at Mendiff nere Bristoll.”
70 Appraised were his purse, apparel, a grey mare, two kyne, a heifer, a weaning calf, saucers, basins, kettles, pots, sheets, blankets, chairs, and an acre of grass. His inventory also mentions debts due from Thomas Willson and John Andrews.
71 The sixth earl, and his father Francis Talbot (1500-1560), the fifth earl, were intimates of the Skydmores at Holme Lacy and Kentchurch Court in Herefordshire, and also of Sir Philip Scudamore (ca. 1545-1611) of Burnham in Buckinghamshire. Philip had loaned money to the sixth earl, a difficult man, and was repaid. Shrewsbury, whose seat was at Shffield Castle, had bigger and better interests than his lead mines elsewhere. It is most unlikely that he knew any particulars about the Skydmores in Derbyshire, or connected the name with his associates in Herefordshire. See also G. R. Batho, Gilbert Talbot, seventh earl of Shrewsbury (1535-1616); the great and glorious earl, Derbyshire Archaeological Journal, vol. XCIII (1973), 23-32. The seventh earl was the last of the Talbots who maintained an interest in lead mining.
72 The parish register of St. Michael and All Angels in Taddington begins in 1642/3. It has been seen by Mrs. Linda (Skidmore) Moffatt of the Skidmore Family History Group (along with much more), on a four day field trip to the Record Office at Matlock. The register is most curiously set down for some years with the entries arranged in one chronological list, with the symbols “B, M & S” (for Bapisatus, Matrimonis Conjuncti, and Sepulta) in the left margins. The bishop’s transcripts

1. RICHARD, of Taddington, of whom further.

2. ARTHUR, of Wardlow, Derbyshire, of whom later.

The elder son,

RICHARD SKYDMORE, was apparently born about 1625. He became a substantial yeoman later at Taddington where he purchased land in 1658, and requested to be buried there inside the church in his will. It was dated 5 May 1660, but was not proved until 6 August 1661. He mentions his “groves and meares of ground” in his will, and it is clear that if he did not mine lead himself he did own some seams that were otherwise worked. Richard Skydmore was survived by his wife Elizabeth (who was buried on 23 January 1664/5 at Taddington), and the six children remembered in his will.73

1. RICHARD, the elder son, of whom further.
   2. John, of Taddington. He was left £20 (but no land) in the will of his father. He married Margery [_______] by 1661, and was living a husbandman at Taddington in 1685 where he was perhaps the only surviving son of his father. He was buried in January 1668/9 at Taddington, having had issue,
      1. Elizabeth, baptized 2 February 1661/2. She married George Lomas on 7 April 1687 at Tideswell, Derbyshire.
      2. Mary, baptized 19 May 1664.
      3. Nathaniel, of Tideswell, baptized 18 November 1666 at Taddington. He married firstly Joan Harrison (who was buried at Wormhill Chapel in 1714) on 23 November 1699 at Tideswell. He had by her, a son,
         1. Edward, baptized 8 September 1700 at Tideswell.
         2. Mary, baptized 8 July 1716.
         3. Nathaniel, baptized 13 May 1726. He was buried at Tideswell on 16 March 1727 as a son of Nathaniel Skidmore.
         5. Martha, baptized 23 June 1729.
      4. Margaret, baptized 14 March 1669 (posthumous), called a “daughter of Margery Skidmoor, widow.” [She may have have married George Oldfield at Tideswell on 4 May 1690.]
         1. Elizabeth. She married [_______] Oldfield, and was left £10 in the will of her father, which was to be paid to her within three years of his death.
         2. Margaret. She was left £10 in the will of her father, and her children (unnamed) were left 20sh in the will of their grandfather.
         3. Helen. She married [_______] Knowles, by whom she had a son Thomas Knowles remembered in the will of his grandfather.
         4. Dorothy. She married Edward Rowland in 1645.74

The elder son,

RICHARD SKIDMORE, of Taddington, He was left his father’s house and lands at the Shippons, and in addition (after the death of the widow) a house and lands called Staley House, and still another house and lands purchased from a Mr. Eyre. He had deeds at Taddington in 1666 and 1668, and was assessed on two hearths in 1670.75 He was buried there on 22 November 1675. His widow Margaret Skidmore was buried at Taddington on 8 October 1684, and an administration on her estate was granted 3 March 1684/5 to her son John Skidmore. They had issue,

1. Richard, baptized 10 June 1656 (as a son of Richard Scidmore and “Margardta’ uxoris”).
2. William. He was buried an infant on 4 April 1657.

73 See the NOTES to this paper for a full abstract of his will.
74 The Rowlands had a daughter christened the same day (2 February 1661/2) as Elizabeth, a daughter of her brother John Skidmore and his wife Margery.
75 Derbyshire Hearth Tax Assessments, 1662-70, edited by David G. Edwards. (Derbyshire Record Society, 1982), 20. The usual tax was on a single hearth.
3. George, baptized 22 November 1657. He had a base [illegitimate] son William by Alice Stafford who was baptized 5 February 1678/9 at Taddington. George appears to have died, perhaps elsewhere, between 1679 and 1685.
   1. William, perhaps known as Stafford, of whom nothing more is known.
4. John, baptized in November or December 1658. He married Mary [______] who was buried on 20 February 1723. He was living, a husbandman at Taddington in 1685 apparently his father’s eldest surviving son, and was buried there on 13 November 1727. They had children christened at Taddington,
   1. RICHARD, baptized 10 October 1689 He and his younger brother called (in Latin) in the transcript as “two sons” of their father but not twins were both christened on the same day. He was buried 4 April 1742 leaving posterity not traced here.
   2. Thomas, baptized 10 October 1689.
   3. John, baptized 5 April 1692.
5. Simon, baptized in February 1660 (or March 1661) at Taddington. He married Helena _____, whose family name is unknown. He is probably the Simon of Taddington whose will (not seen) was dated 26 May 1733 and proved at Lichfield. They had issue, christened at Taddington,
   1. Elizabeth, baptized 9 August 1684 as a daughter of Simon and Helena, his wife. She was buried 6 July 1685.
   2. Margaret, baptized 6 February 1686.
   3. Thomas, baptized 2 March 1691.
7. Arthur, baptized 18 September 1664. He married Mary Moul at Bakewell (but probably both of Taddington) on 11 June 1688.

The second son of Thomas Skydmor[e], the younger, of Taddington,

ARTHUR SKYDMORE, of Wardlow, Derbyshire whose christening has not been found. He paid £1 at Easter Roll in 1658 and was assessed on one hearth between 1662-70. He married an unknown wife by whom he left at least two sons at Wardlow,

1. Richard Skidmore of Wardlow. An unidentified “Skidmore de Wardlow of Hope dist[ric]t” was buried in 1685 at Great Longstone, Derbyshire who could be either this Richard or his brother Nicholas. Also unidentified is an Alicia Skidmore of Wardlow (presumably the wife of one of the brothers) who was buried on 14 April 1690 also at Great Longstone. This Richard Skidmore was ancestor to the proprietors of the business firm of Skidmore Framework Knitters at Ashford, Derbyshire. He had issue, christened at Tideswell, where only the father’s name was given in the register at this time,
   1. Thomas, baptized 23 December 1673.
   2. RICHARD, baptized 22 October 1676. He married and left posterity, not presently traced further.
   3. Joshua, baptized 18 May 1679.77

A second son,

NICHOLAS SKIDMORE, of Wardlow. He had issue christened at Tideswell, by an unknown wife,

1. Samuel, baptized 4 January 1674. [He is perhaps the man who married Ann Bagshaw at Bakewell on 22 November 1703.]
2. Ruth, baptized 16 July 1676.
3. Henry, baptized 22 December 1679.78

It is now necessary, at last, to return to the fourth son of Thomas Skydmore, the elder, of Chewton Mendip, who left a numerous posterity at Eyam, Derbyshire.

76 The March 1661 date is taken from the International Genealogical Index which does not name the parents.
77 This Joshua Skidmore left eventual posterity whose DNA does not match that of the earlier family at Eyam.
78 Mrs. Linda Moffat suggests that he may be the man of this name who settled at Folkingham, Lincolnshire.
SIMON SKIDMORE, [probably the illegible son of his father christened in December, 1600] who went to Eyam along with his brother Arthur, and was left 20sh in the will of his brother Richard of Taddington in 1660. He married Elizabeth Eyre at Bakewell on 8 September 1619, where they are called “both of this parish.” She survived her husband by about three months and was buried at Eyam on 13 June 1663, while Simon Skydmore had been buried at Eyam on 14 March 1662/3. They had (as known) three children,

1. George, of Eyam. He married Katherine Simson (perhaps Samson?) on 12 May 1653, and was buried on 22 December 1666 at Eyam. His wife was buried there as “old Catherine Skydmore, widow,” on 13 September 1696. He had issue by her,
   1. Simon, baptized 5 February 1653/4 at Eyam. He married Alice, the daughter of John Taylor, on 25 January 1703/4 at Eyam. He had clearly died before his brother John, and must be the Simon Skydmore buried at Eyam on 2 January 1722. His widow Alice Skidmore was remembered with five guineas in the will of her brother-in-law John Skidmore in 1728. He left issue, christened at Eyam,
      1. Simon, baptized 6 April 1704. He was married on 15 June 1727 at Whittington, Derbyshire, to Mary, the daughter of Zachary Robinson, who was buried there on 29 September 1755 according to the parish register. Simon Skydmore was left four guineas by his uncle John Simon Skidmore. He survived his wife and was buried on 26 January 1764 at Eyam, having had six sons and one daughter.
   2. John, baptized 4 July 1706. He was married on 12 June 1730 (at Carsington in Derbyshire) to Ellen Crocker. John Skidmore had a house, garden, bed and table as specified in the will of his uncle John. He had four sons and two daughters.

2. JOHN, baptized 25 March 1654/5 of whom further,

3. Anne, baptized 15 June 1656. She married her kinsman Arthur Skidmore (as his second wife) about 1680, and was living in 1728 (called Anne Skidmore) when she was left a guinea in the will of her brother John Skidmore (who also remembered her son Samuel Skidmore).

4. Richard, baptized 2 October 1658. He was buried an infant on 27 June 1659.

5. Elizabeth, baptized 9 June 1660. She was buried an infant on 21 August 1660.

6. Ezra, baptized 13 October 1661. He was buried on 27 June 1662.

7. George, baptized 1 March 1663. He married Elizabeth Fox on 6 November 1687 at Eyam and was buried there on 27 April 1691. Had issue,
   1. John, baptized 13 October 1688.
   2. Elinor, baptized 6 April 1690. She was buried at Eyam on 15 April 1691.

8. Mary, baptized 15 October 1665. She married Thomas Ellis on 6 September 1691 at Bakewell, Derbyshire. She was living in 1728 when she and her daughters Mary Ashford and Helen Parkin are remembered in the will of her brother John.

2. Mary, buried 29 March 1633 as “a daughter of Simon Skydmore.”

3. Anne, buried 20 March 1645 as a daughter of Simon and Elizabeth Skidmore.

The second son,

JOHN SKIDMORE, baptized 25 March 1655 at Eyam. He married Elizabeth Dakin (who was buried as his wife on 12 July 1692) on 27 April 1679 at Eyam. He was buried 15 March 1727/8, “aged 73” in the churchyard at Eyam called a pauper, but left however a substantial will dated 7 March 1727/8 that was proved at Lichfield on 11 April 1728. As a widower with no surviving children it gave legacies to his sisters and a number of nephews and nieces. He had issue, all of whom died before their father,

1. George, baptized 24 October 1680. He was buried on 31 March 1687.
2. Thomas, baptized 24 June 1683. He was buried as “the son of John Skydmore” on 28 July 1806 at Eyam.
3. Anne, baptized 7 March 1685/6. She was buried on 15 September 1690.
4. An infant, buried 1 August 1688 at Eyam.

It is now necessary to return to the only son of Arthur and Anne Skydmore,

79 There is a monumental inscription for her which gives her date of death as 10 October 1755 “aged 55.” Dr. Trezza points out in his comments that parish registers are invariably more accurate than tombstones.

80 His will is abstracted briefly in the NOTES.
THOMAS SKYDMORE, of Eyam, born about 1615-20. He married Anne Allyn, a daughter of Anthony Allyn, who survived him, on 31 August 1640. Eyam suffered heavily from the great plague of 1666 which is said to have been introduced into the parish in a box of materials sent up from London to a tailor at Eyam. A servant who opened the box complained that the contents were still damp and was told to put them by the fire to dry out. He was the first to die, and had infected the tailor’s family from whom the distemper spread to the entire community. The widow Skydmore was buried at Eyam on 24 June 1666, a few days after the deaths of her daughter Mary and her son Anthony had died of the plague.81 Thomas Skydmore was buried earlier at Eyam on 4 August 1657, having had nine children,

1. ARTHUR, of whom further.
2. Richard, baptized 25 December 1642. He was buried an infant on 12 January 1642/3.
3. Mary, baptized 15 March 1645/6. She was buried an infant on 21 May 1647.
4. Mary, baptized 19 March 1648. She was buried on 17 June 1666 of the plague as a daughter of Anne Skydmore, widow. Her mother followed her in death a few days later.

6. John, baptized 21 March 1650/1. He was buried 11 September 1670 at Eyam.
7. Thomas, baptized 11 April 1652. He was buried an infant on 8 November 1653.
8. Francis, baptized 2 October 1653. He was buried an infant on 18 May 1656.
9. Anthony, baptized 27 April 1656. He had his name from his maternal grandfather, and was buried on 12 June 1666 a victim of the plague.

The eldest son,

ARTHUR SKYDMORE, of Eyam. He was baptized on 23 May 1641, and died there on 8 November 1694. He married firstly Elizabeth Walker of Eyam on 15 April 1667, by whom he had,

1. Thomas, baptized 28 November 1669 as “a son of Arthur Skydmore.” He was buried on 7 January 1675/6.
2. Anne, baptized 17 March 1672. She was buried on 10 July 1684. [She is called a daughter of Arthur and Elizabeth in the register, but Elizabeth was later struck out and Anne inserted (in error).]
3. Arthur, baptized 10 March 1675.
4. Elizabeth, buried an infant on 9 October 1676 as a daughter of Arthur Skidmore.
5. Elizabeth, baptized 5 May 1678. She was buried on 30 June 1678 “aged 1 month.”

Arthur Skydmore married secondly Anne Skydmore by 1678, a kinswoman (born 15 June 1656 and a daughter of George Skydmore) who was buried on 6 February 1730/1 at Eyam. He had by her seven additional children christened at Eyam,

6. George, baptized 8 June 1679. He was buried on 14 October 1702 as a son of Anne Skydmore, and was clearly named for his maternal grandfather.

His only surviving son,

SAMUEL SKIDMORE, of Eyam, baptized 27 September 1685. He married first Dorothy Baddaley of Stoney Middleton, Derbyshire on 8 May 1715, who seemingly died soon after in childbirth. He married secondly Elizabeth (christened 22 September 1695 at Hope, Derbyshire), a daughter of Martin Wilson (and his wife

81 An excellent account of the suffering in the parish will be found in William Wood’s History and Antiquities of Eyam; with a minute account of the Great Plague which desolated that village in the year 1666. (3rd edition, 1859)
82 A groove was the local name for a shallow mine, and Arthur presumably died in a mining accident.
Elizabeth Poynton, of Little Hucklow on 25 October 1716 at Eyam. He was left six guineas in the will of his uncle John Skidmore who died at Eyam in 1728. Elizabeth Skidmore survived him, and was buried as a widow and pauper on 14 October 1762 at Eyam. He had issue, christened at Eyam,

He married Anne (baptized 11 April 1708), a daughter of Francis Townsend of Bretton, Derbyshire, and previously the widow of Thomas Stephenson of Stoney Middleton, on 1 April 1743. Thomas Skidmore was 14 years her junior. His burial is not found, but his widow married thirdly George Townsley (who was about 40 years younger than Anne Townsend. Thomas Skidmore had by her two daughters, 87 Joshua Annable Skidmore of Wakefield, Yorkshire made his will on 20 March 1838. It gave an annuity to his mother Elizabeth, and provided for his wife Sarah and their infant children. He appears to have been a wine merchant.

THE OVERLAND NARRATIVE OF TRAVEL IN 1855 TO UTAH, BY WILLIAM LOBARK SKIDMORE, THEN TEN YEARS OF AGE.

This autobiography of Bishop Skidmore is well known to his descendants, and certainly will be of interest to the great international family of Skidmores. It ends here happily with a young boy having a delicious slice of bread and butter for the first time after a long diet of roots and weeds at an impoverished pioneer settlement in Utah. The boy lived a long and useful life as “a pioneer, farmer, actor, father, bishop, patriarch, and community leader” and died at Richmond in Cache County, Utah on 11 November 1933. There is a splendid full-length biography of the man published privately in May 1997 by his great grandson, Lyman W. Condie, Junior. A copy can be found in the Church Office Building in Salt Lake City for those who would like to know still more about this adventurous boy and a fine man.88 (WS)

I was born September 22, 1844 in the City of Philadelphia, Penn. My memory reaches back to my home on an avenue which branched off from a street where draymen hauled great loads of freight into the city. I was much interested in watching them pass by, and soon received the title of the Little Red Curly Head.

I began attending school when six years of age, and was baptized into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by my brother Henry when I was eight years old. I was baptized in the Delaware River.

In April, 1855, with my mother and other members of the family, we started for Utah.89 We went to Pittsburgh by rail, then down the Ohio and up the Missouri to Atchinson [Atchison], Kansas, where we had our first experience of camp life. It rained for several days which made it very unpleasant for us. My brothers soon bought some cattle and an outfit, and we joined Captain John Hindley’s Company for the journey across the plains. It fell to my lot to provide the fuel with which to cook our food. Since no wood grew on the plains, I would take a sack and gather up dry buffalo chips to fry our bacon and bake our bread. Often the wind would blow the lid off the pan, and some of our food would be seasoned with sand and ashes. This annoyed the women until all of us would have to laugh.

We had no fresh meat except when someone killed a buffalo. What was not eaten immediately was cut into strips and dried in the sun. At one time we saw a band of Indians coming toward us, and the captain gave orders for the train to stop. All who had guns were ready to defend us. When the Indians saw that we were ready for them, they became friendly and wanted to trade buckskins and moccasins for sugar and salt. My brother Henry’s wife was young and pretty, and the Chief wanted to trade a pony for her. Sometimes we would stop for a day to rest and shoe the oxen and make necessary repairs. One day when the Captain was riding by, he told my brother, Henry, that our family was one of the best of the train and never caused him any trouble as did some of the others. At a place called Ash Hollow, the road was very steep. Mother with two girls had to walk and were left behind. Darkness came on, and they thought they were lost and were about to give up when they saw our camp fires. They were very tired and hungry when they reached camp, but no trouble came to them. We had 88 His father, Charles Beet Skidmore, was a cutler from Sheffield, England who emigrated to Philadelphia to work for the Disston Saw Company. An account of his family will be found at www.skidmorefamilyhistory.com.

89 Later insertion in another hand with corrections: The mother, Harriet Henrietta Schrader Skidmore, the oldest son Henry, his wife and daughter Harriet, and another son, Samuel, who settled in Salt Lake City, Utah, and a daughter, Rachel, made up the party who came to Utah. The father, Charles Breet [Brett] Skidmore, a son George, and a daughter Mary were left in Philadelphia but Mary and her husband Charles Lutz were married there in 1860 and later joined the rest of her family in the Salt Lake Valley. George and his father remained in Philadelphia. They did not join the Church.
tried to play a joke on them by filling the wagon with service berry bushes, but when we saw their plight we were sorry.

When we neared the Rocky Mountains, we met a company from Utah on their way east. They advised us to go back with them, saying that the grasshoppers were so bad in the Salt Lake Valley that they had eaten everything up and we would starve. We were not convinced by what they told us, and so we continued our journey. We reached Salt Lake City on October 3rd, after a journey of five months by ox teams.

We soon learned that the grasshoppers were pretty bad and had destroyed most of the grain in the valley. The winter was very severe, cold with deep snows. We could get but little and had to live on corn meal and molasses. When spring came, we dug segos and roots to live on. In May 1856 I went to live with Beason Lewis who offered to take me as his son, and it would relieve mother of one to feed and clothe.

I went to live on a ranch 12 miles west of Salt Lake City which belonged to him. His business was in the City. His wife Elizabeth Ryan Lewis lived on the ranch, and her husband would come as often as he could as he was much interested in our welfare. On the ranch were two log cabins; we lived in the one that had two rooms. We lived in the north room and Stillman Pond and family lived in the south room. James Imlay and family lived part of the time in the other cabin. Most of the time Mrs. Lewis and I were the only persons on the ranch which was a long way from any other settlers. There were many rattlesnakes and often while all alone I would hear them rattle and then I knew they were near enough to spring at me with open mouth and I hurried away from there to escape their poison. Sometimes the wolves would steal the new born calves. The Indians would come often which I did not like at first. They came to us and begged for biscuits. We were good to them and they were friendly. After living there some time, I was glad to have the Indians come and I learned to talk to them to pass away the time.

When only 11 years old it became my duty to take care of the mules that were used to haul the United State mail 1000 miles from the States to Utah. The mules were very thin and worn from the fast driving across the plains and Beason Lewis had a contract with the government to take the mules and get them in shape to be used again. They were placed on good feed to fatten up and gain strength and another group of mules taken from the ranch in good condition would be used to pull the mail from the west to the east. I took care of the mules and kept them in the hills nearby. One morning I rode a horse to drive them to water. In going up a hill, the saddle slipped back and the horse got scared and kicked the saddle and me off. My head struck a rock and I was stunned; I don't know how long I was unconscious. I caught a little lazy pony and drove the mules to water. When I got home and Mrs. Lewis saw the blood dripping down my back, she was alarmed. We were all alone, no one near us for miles. I got off the horse and she bathed my head with water and took off my bloody shirt. The wound was not deep and I soon recovered. That was an accident that might have caused my death; the scar remained for a long time, and I knew that some power protected me.

At the time of the Echo Canyon war in the spring of 1858, all the people moved south and we moved with them to Spanish Fork. I herded cows on foot most all of that summer. I took my little dinner bag each day. The Indians would come on horseback and take the herd boys dinners but I was lucky. I hid mine. The Indians were good to me and I think being redheaded with sore lips and freckled face they thought I was one of them and belonged to a strange tribe.

The army passed peacefully through Salt Lake City and camped on the west side of the valley at the mouth of Bingham Canyon so we went back home. I was glad to get back to the ranch in the late part of the summer. One day Beason Lewis said to me, “Will, I am about to sell the ranch and move to Cache Valley. Will you go with us?” After thinking about it for some time I answered, “Yes, I will go.” I had been on the ranch 3-1/2 years and had learned to love the place so there was sadness mingled with joy at leaving. The fall and winter of 1859-60 we lived in Salt Lake City and I went to school. I also was prompt in going to meeting. I had the privilege at different times of listening to remarks made by Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Jedediah M. Grant, and the Apostles. I never got tired of hearing them; their words were powerful. I have not forgotten them though it has been a long time. Their counsel has been a guide to my life.
In April 1860 I went with Beason Lewis and family to Richmond in Cache Valley. We had a wagon and horses and an ox team and wagon – a few cows and sheep. I drove the cows and sheep on foot. We were nine days coming from Salt Lake City and were glad to arrive at our destination. We had much hard work to do, the first to plow the sod land. It being very tough, we had to use four oxen to break it. The plows were made of scrap iron by blacksmiths, and harrows were made of wood with wooden teeth. We planted a few acres of wheat. Ditches had to be made from Cherry Creek to water the crop when we finished planting. We had to go up a high steep mountain which we named Nebo to get house logs and fence poles. There was a cold spring of clear water that we drank from before going up the mountain, and we were always glad to get back for a drink as the weather was warm and no water on the mountain. It is now 68 years since I went up Nebo, and as I look up at the mountain as we stand in the street on the north side of the Richmond Tabernacle, there is a bare mark plainly to be seen. It has been made by water flowing down the steep drag road made by getting the logs out. When the house logs were on the building lot in the fort, next came the building of our houses with dirt floors and sod roofs. A few settlers hauled logs they got up Cherry Creek to Logan to the first sawmill in the valley and had them sawed into lumber for their houses. After toiling all day, we had to take turns standing guard to keep Indians from stealing our horses. The worst trouble we had with Indians was in Smithfield. An Indian had been accused of horse stealing and was made a prisoner, but he broke loose and started to run; the officer shot and killed him. His tribesmen fled up Smithfield Canyon with revenge in their hearts. They met two white men coming down the canyon with loads of logs, and the Indians shot and killed them and then escaped by horseback into the canyon. I have often thought that the Indian charged with stealing had not committed any bloodshed and it would have been better for him to escape than for our friends to have been killed.

One of the first buildings to be erected was a meeting house built of logs with a dirt roof. We were fortunate to obtain enough lumber to give this building a floor. It was about 30 feet long and 20 feet wide and all community dances and entertainments were held there.

Beason Lewis lived up to his contract and gave me all the advantages that other boys had at that time. I lived with him for 12 years and a great part of my clothing was made by Mrs. Lewis. She spun the wool into rolls and into yarn, dyed it and put it in the loom and wove it into cloth and the cloth into clothing... Once I was hungry. When I was nine years old mother gave me to Uncle Beason Lewis. For some time I had not tasted bread as wild roots and weeds cooked was my bill of fare. When Uncle Beason took me to his house, Aunt Betsy cut off a big slice of bread, spread it thickly with butter and gave it to me. That was the sweetest, best food I ever ate in my life.

TWO SCUDAMORE BROTHERS - - AND THEIR GRAND DELUSION

An account of Frank Scudamore (1875-1950) and his brother Alfred Scudamore (1877-1945) can be found under Wellow, Somerset in my book Thirty Generations on the Scudamore/Scuddmore CD-ROM. It does not include any mention of the brother’s belief that they were entitled to untold wealth as the sole heirs of several different branches of the Scudamore family. These newspaper clippings from 1930 tell an interesting story. Frank Scudamore seems to have eventually given up on claiming Upton Scudamore and Holme Lacy, but he was still pursuing an estate at Dead Mill in Swainswick as late as 1949. He employed a firm of London solicitors who wrote him on 2 September 1949 from 71, Lincoln’s Inn Fields, that after a look at the evidence, “your side of the family has no interest therein.” (WS)

TWO WEST COUNTRY WORKERS CLAIM A FORTUNE

LINK TO VAST FORTUNE MISSING

ROMANCE OF A BATH MAN

TWO CLAIMANTS NOW LIVING IN COTTAGES.

“EVENING WORLD” EXCLUSIVE NEWS

Two brothers, one a house decorator in Bath, and the other a salesman in Devizes, claim to be the missing heirs to hundreds of thousands of pounds worth of property in Wiltshire, Somerset, and Herefordshire. Mr. Frank Scudamore, of 35, Dafford-street, Larkhall, Bath, and Mr. Alfred Scudamore of High-street, Devizes, told me today they are convinced that their claim is undeniable, telephones an Evening World reporter from Devizes.

The villages they assert belong to them are Upton Scudamore, Norton Bavant, Sutton Veny, Bishopstrow, Corsely, and Norridge. They also claim the Dead Mill estate at Swainswick, and the historic mansion and land at Holme Lacy, Herefordshire.

TWENTY YEARS SEARCH

I spent three hours in Mr. Alfred Scudamore’s little sitting room at Devises today while the brothers showed me dozens of genealogical trees, copies of wills, and records of births and deaths to explain the grounds on which they are basing their claim.

It was hard to believe that these two working men sitting in front of the fire were claimants to a vast fortune.

90 There was a later story in the Chronicle and Herald for 25 September 1937, noticed but not reprinted here.
Mr. Frank Scudamore, who is 54 years old, is a house decorator in Bath. His brother is two years younger and is a salesman.

“Our claimed is the result of 20 years hard work in collecting the necessary information,” said Mr. Frank Scudamore.

THE MISSING LINK

“I spent all my spare time examining the church records and documents, family vaults and wills, while Alfred helped by Mr. Charles Jennings of Devises, pieced together the information I had collected.

“We have traced our descent back to 1086 when our ancestors came over with William the Conqueror. William gave the land at Upton Scudamore to Sir Walter Scudamore. It passed out of his hands for a time but Henry II restored it to the family.

“Sir Walter was the son of Sir Alan Scudamore of Holme Lacey, Herefordshire.

“Our claim to that particular estate in Hereford will be completed when we find the missing link in our ancestry. That link is believed to lie in the old register of the church at Wellow near Bath.

“There is no other link missing to their claim to the Wiltshire property and the land on Dead Mill estate at Swainswick.

Mr. Alfred Scudamore told me that thousands of pounds worth of land and property are represented in their claim.

“It says in a book in the Bath reference library that the Scudamores were wealthiest family in England at one time” he said.

“Yet my brother and I have to scrape along to live, and our grandfather died in the workhouse.

NO MORE CLAIMANTS

“We have only to connect up two families by the link that we believe lies in the Wellow church records to prove our claim.

“We also want to find a missing will of John Griffin Scudamore who died in 1811 to determine details of the property to which we say we are entitled at Swainswick.

Both the brothers assured me that no other claimant stands in their way.

“There is only one alive,” said Frank. “He lives in Swansea it is a brother of our father. He has already said that he has no intention of claiming any part of the property.

“Our descent from the missing heir to the estate is clear, and we are determined for our own sake and for the sake of our relations to press forward with our claim.”

The propery which is claimed is under the care of trustees until ownership is proved.

It includes in addition of the six Wilshire villages and Holme Lacey, the Bruton Hospital, Sexey’s School, Bruton, and the Manor House at Swainswick.

The Manor House is built on the site of what is said to be the home of Bladud, the mythical King of England.

BATH Sunday

Lack of financial backing is holding up the two brothers Scudamore, of Bath and Devizes, in their claim to be the missing heirs to large estates in the West of England.

“We could take immediate action if we had the money behind us,” said Mr. Alfred’s Scudamore, when I saw him in his little home in Dafford-street, Bath, today.

“I know our claim is sound and I confirmed it yesterday when I visited a distant relation in Hereford.

“Our claim to the Wiltshire and Bath property has no flaw in it, but we still want to find the missing link which will entitle us to the land at Holme Lacey near Hereford.

LOADS OF DOCUMENTS

“Our kinsman told me that two wagon loads of documents from Kent Church, Holme Lacey, were taken to Somerset House during a lawsuit in 1812 and I am hoping that the birth certificate we want is among them.

“Searches are also being made at Holme Lacey.

“We have only to prove that Thomas Scudamore, who was buried at Wellow in 1718, was the husband of Millicent Scudamore who died at Weston, Bath, in 1692. Our line of ancestry will then be complete.

“My brother and I are already convinced that this is so, but we must have the documentary proof.

“Our belief was confirmed yesterday by finding that the arms of the Scudamores at Holme Lacey, bore the three stirrups, the armour, the crown, and the motto of the Scudamore family, which is also in the church at Upton Scudamore, Wiltshire.

“The motto is Scuto Amoris Divini.

“Our kinsman in Hereford said that he always believed that the missing heir to the property was alive. He has promised to help us in any way possible.

“He showed us a chart to prove that he can trace the Scudamore family back to the year 988.”

Mr. Scudamore told me that he had seen one of the trustees of the land which he claims at Swainswick, and put his claim before him.

“My brother and I told him that we should take steps to seize the property if our claim were disregarded, he said.

Mr. Scudamore has received many letters from people who have read the “Evening World” account of the brother’s romantic claim to a fortune. Many of them have offered to help by supplying information.

“A relation of mine has written to say that she believes she can supply the missing link in our chain of ancestry,” said Mr. Scudamore.

[Third story, February 4, 1930]
BATH, Monday.
Mr. Frank Scudamore of Bath, one of the West Country claimants to the estate of the Scudamore family told me today what he intended to do with the money and property if the claim was successful.
Mr. Scudamore and his brother Alfred, who live at Devizes, claim the Scudamore estates in Somerset, Wiltshire and Herefordshire.
“My brother and I hope to be able to provide work for unemployed men when we gain possession of the estate, Mr. Frank Scudamore said to me.
“We have both lived our lives with only the necessities of life, and they have sometimes been hard to find, and naturally we can understand the feeling of others who are poor.
“I hope we shall soon be in a position to give them a helping hand.

CREST MOTTO

Mr. Scudamore has been given a book which explains the origin of the motto “escu amoris divin,” which appears on the Scudamore crest.
It means “with the shield of love divine” and the name Scudamore is composed of the two words-“escu d’amour” - shield of love.
The motto has been been fulfilled by descendants of the family through the ages, for they have given money and service to church-building and other good works.
The name Scudamore has been perpetuated in musical circles, for Scudamore organs have been installed in many churches in all parts of England.
This Scudamore pipe organ was invented in 1290 by Sir Peter de Scudamore, High Sheriff of Wiltshire and Dorset.
The first was placed in the chancel at St. Mary’s Church, Upton Scudamore, Wiltshire, and it was followed by others in churches at Bottan near Westbury, Wiltshire, Clavedon Court, near Bristol, Mells, Somerset, and Horningsham, near Warminster.

[South Wales claim to West Fortune]

WOMEN DESCENDANTS OF A SOMERSET BARONET

“EVENING WORLD” SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

CARDIFF Tuesday
Two South Wales women have put forward claims to part of the fortune of land and property in Wiltshire, Somerset and Herefordshire, to which two West Country brothers assert they are the heirs.
The Southwest claimants are Mrs. Mary Jane Jones of 27 Little Frederick-street, Cardiff, and Mrs. Georgina Fisher of 20 Mill Parade, Newport.
Mrs. Jones, who is 77 years old, told me today that her grandmother was a Miss Scudamore before she married and Mr. George Holland and went to Wincanton, Somerset, where she died.
The estate which the women and the two brothers Mr. F. Scudamore of Bath, and Mr. A. Scudamore of Devizes are claiming is that of the late Sir John Scudamore, who died at Batheaston early last century. It is now under the care of trustees until ownership is proved.
SIX VILLAGES
The property is worth hundreds of thousands of pounds and includes six villages in Wiltshire, Holme Lacey mansion and land, Herefordshire, the Bruton Hospital, Sexeys School, Bruton, and the Manor house at Swainswick.
A will purporting to be that of Lady Scudamore who is believed to have survived her husband came into the possession of Mrs. Jones’ family but it has been lost.
“I had four sisters and the will was given to my eldest sister who has been dead 31 years. But we are descendants of Sir John Scudamore,” said Mrs. Jones.

CLAIM INQUIRIES
Mrs. Jones husband, Mr. Charles Jones, was formerly employed by the Cardiff Corporation, but has now retired on a pension. The two sisters are making inquiries with a view to establishing their claim.

Worry has taken its toll of the health of Mr. Frank Scudamore, of Bath, who with his brother Alfred, of Devises, claim to be the missing heirs to the property.

Mr. Scudamore has been compelled to stay at home and rest.

The worry of the claim, and my own work as a decorator, had been too much for me,” he said, when I called at his house in Dafford Street, Larkhall today.

The warm glow of the coals burning in the grange lit up the pale face as he told me how the “Evening World” publicity had led him one step forward in his investigations.

THEORY PROOF

“Mrs. Piper, of 14 Herbert-road, Oldfield Park, Bath, saw the account of our claim and wrote asking me to see her,” he said. “She is my aunt and I went to her house on Sunday. She told me she had always believed that the Thomas Scudamore who was buried at Wellow was the husband of Millicent Scudamore whose body lies in Weston churchyard, Bath.

“It would prove our theory of the missing link in our ancestry, but we must have documentary proof. I am writing to Somerset House to ask for it.

PLAN TO ESTABLISH RIGHT INVESTIGATIONS FOR 20 YEARS

BATH Wednesday

Claims of two South Wales women to be entitled to part of the Scudamore estate in the West of England are denied by the Bath and Devizes brothers, who state they are the missing heirs to the property.

I discussed the matter with Mr. Frank Scudamore, the elder of the two, and he reasserted that he was the only surviving direct heir to the estate.

“Mrs. Mary Jones, of Cardiff, and Mrs. Georgina Fisher, of Newport, are probably relations of mine,” he said, “but they are not in the direct line of descent which would entitle them to claim the property.

NO OTHER CLAIM

“We have spent 20 years investigating our ancestry and my brother and I are convinced that there is no other valid claim.

“The women in Wales are no doubt descendants of my own ancestors, but there are so many relatives living that it is hard to trace them all.

“Our investigations have only dealt with those members of the family who might be regarded as possible heirs, and our claim is straight as a ram-rod.”

Mr. Scudamore is waiting to see his brother Alfred of Devizes, before he decides or any plan of action to establish his claim. ****
The following four papers relate to the family of Thomas Skidmore [1] the pioneer. LM Occasional Papers, no. 20.

THE ORIGIN OF JOAN SKIDMORE (1612?-1667) OF FAIRFIELD & HER SISTER ANN SANFORD OF MILFORD, CONNECTICUT.

by Warren Skidmore

The parentage of Thomas Skidmore’s second wife Joanna has long been a mystery. She was the widow of a Nathaniel Baldwin who had died in 1658 at Fairfield, Connecticut and had seven children by her two previous husbands, four by Richard Westcott and three by Baldwin.91 On 19 June 1667 Joanna Skidmore made a will at Fairfield in which she describes the covenant made between herself and Thomas Skidmore at the time of their marriage. They had agreed that she would keep £20 of her former husband’s estate “at her dispose” and to this was to be added another £20 if she should die before her Skidmore husband. Before her death she had spent £2 and she now left the remaining £38 to be divided equally among her seven children. Her sons John and Daniel Westcott were named executors of her will and they were to have the improvement of these legacies until her other children came of age or married. William Ward and John Burr were named overseers, and Ward and Josiah Harvey were the witnesses. Joanna was able to write, at least in a small way, for her will is signed “Joan Sk.”

Their marriage seems to have been harmonious. Thomas Skidmore was given (or assumed) the administration of the estates of both of her former husbands. As early as 14 February 1664/5 John Weed of Stamford (who had married Joanna Westcott, a daughter named for her mother) gave a receipt to his “father-in-law [stepfather] Thomas Skidmore” for his wife’s share of her father’s estate. This was the first in a long series of documents at Fairfield settling the Westcott and Baldwin affairs as Skidmore’s stepchildren came of age.

Joanna Skidmore’s will was not recorded until February 1677/8, but she seems to have died a few days after it was signed in June 1667. She was attended in her last illness by Governor John Winthrop, Junior who was (in addition to his administrative talents) the most sought after physician in New England. Still preserved is his case book in which he made brief notes on his patients and prescriptions. From it we find that at the time of her last illness Joanna was aged 55 and had a younger sister Ann (1624?-1682) who had married Robert Sanford (1615-1676) of Milford by 1643.92 Winthrop did not mention their parentage which has been recently discovered. It was believed for a time that the sisters were the daughters of Jeremy Adams (1604-1683) but a close attention to the records shows that Ann Sanford was not his daughter.93

The marriage in 1639 of Richard Westacot & Johan Pain (Johanna’s first husband) was found in the register of the church at Braunton, Devon.94 From this entry it was easy to identify Thomas Paine, of Milford, Connecticut as the father of the sisters. He is said elsewhere to have come 91 She is called Joan in the inventory taken of Baldwin’s estate on 19 October 1658. The best account of her seven children can be found in Donald Lines Jacobus’ History and Genealogy of the Families of Old Fairfield (Rutland, Vt., 1930), III, 660-2.

92 See Grover Merle Sanford’s The Sandford/Sanford Families of Long Island, Their Ancestors and Descendants (Gateway Press, 1975), 11. This account of Robert Sanford of Milford, Connecticut is exemplary, but the author also had failed to identify the father of Robert’s wife at Milford.
93 Jeremy Adams died on 11 August 1683 at Hartford. His will mentions a grandson Zachary Sanford, but he was a grandson only by his marriage to Sarah Willett (a daughter of Sarah Adams by her husband Nathaniel Willett). See Robert Charles Anderson, The Great Migration Begins, Immigrants to New England, 1620-1633 (Boston, 1995) I, 11.
94 The Braunton register begins in 1538. The marriages are extracted in Boyd’s Marriage Index, 1538-1840, now available (for a fee) from OriginsNetwork.com. The christenings and burials of Braunton have not been seen. Richard Westcott is said to have been born in 1612, a son of John Westcott of Bishop Tawton, Devon.
from Devon, and the discovery can be confirmed as certain since Thomas Sanford, Junior (1644-1695) later married his cousin Elizabeth Paine.

Thomas Skidmore married for a third time after Joanna’s death. His new wife Sarah was the widow of Ralph Keeler who had died at Fairfield in the fall of 1672. Sarah Keeler was the daughter of Robert Howes, of the parish of St. Martin Orgar, a member of the Fishmongers Company and a freeman of London. Sarah Howes was previously the widow of Edward Treadwell of Huntington, Long Island (by whom she had six children) and of Edward Whelpley and Ralph Keeler of Fairfield. On 8 May 1651 Edward Treadwell (her first husband) had sent a letter of attorney addressed to his wife’s brother John Howes, identified as the “Minister of the Word of God” at [Earls?] Barton, Northamptonshire” concerning the estate of their deceased brother Jonathan Howes, one of the sons and orphans of the late Robert Howes.

After his third marriage Thomas Skidmore still continued to take an interest in the welfare of his Westcott and Baldwin stepchildren, and he and Cornelius Hull of Fairfield gave several deeds jointly as the administrators of Nathaniel Baldwin. On 20 June 1677 he gave an important deed to his stepson Daniel Westcott, not for Daniel’s inheritance, but instead a life interest in all of Thomas Skidmore’s own land. It included his home lot of 2 1/2 acres in Fairfield with his dwelling, barn and orchard (excepting that part previously deeded to his stepson-in-law William Read), seven acres in the “new field,” and tracts at the “great meadow” and at Sascoe Neck. Thomas Skidmore was now about 73 and this seems to have been all of his real properties at Fairfield. They were conveyed to Westcott with the stipulation that he was not “to enter upon the said parcels until the expiration of the natural life of Thomas Skidmore, Senior.” On 3 January 1681 Westcott resold a part of this land to his half-sister Deborah Baldwin and her husband William Reed, and this deed again notes that it was not to be recorded until after the death of Thomas Skidmore, Senior.

Joanna Skidmore died at Fairfield and it may be taken as certain that she was buried there in Burial Hill on the south side of Concord Street. The town abounded with native stone, but the early gravestones have either all crumbled away or been covered with the deposits of time.

95 Thomas Skidmore was her fourth (and last) husband.
96 London Record Office, Orphans’ Court of the City of London, Deeds 9/214. The Treadwells were living in 1651 at Easthold near Southold on Long Island “within the jurisdiction of Newhaven.” The will of Robert Howes of St. Martin Orgar was proved on 30 January 1636 at P.C.C., PROB 11/170.
When I first took an interest in my Skidmore family in 1941 I found soon after that their were a number of descendants of the Whitehead family that believed that they also had a Skidmore ancestor. Some thirty years earlier Emily Hawley (1855-1937) had written in her Skidmore family history in 1911 “that the wife of Daniel Whitehead of Hempstead, Long Island was without doubt Jeanne Scudamore of England, and a sister of one of these pioneers, I am inclined to think of Thomas Scudamore [Thomas Skidmore I (1605-1684)] of Huntington, L. I.”

Hawley had copied her confused pronouncement from John Cornell’s genealogy of his Cornell family. Reverend Cornell (1839-1926) was an exemplary historian. He added an appendix, “The Whitehead Lineage” to his Cornell history where he said (with no cited authority) about Daniel Whitehead: “He married Jeanne Skidmore.” He correctly listed Whitehead’s children but attributed all of them to Jeanne Skidmore. Cornell did know that this Jane had married John Ingersoll of Huntington as her second husband, and had children by him born as late as 1680. This made it biologically unlikely that Jane was in fact also the mother of Maj. Daniel Whitehead, Jr., who had been born in 1645 some 35 years earlier, or of his younger brothers.

Cornell was for his day a very careful and honest genealogist. He traveled to the office of the Surrogate’s Court in Manhattan and made an exact transcript of the will of Richard Cornell of Rockaway from the recorded copy, and was then delighted to find the original will written in 1693 was still there and in good condition. As for Daniel Whitehead, he also dismissed the idea that he was a brother of the Samuel and Stephen Whitehead of New Haven, a notion which is now totally discredited.

Jeanne Whitehead was not a Skidmore. Her family was not correctly identified until 1970 when an abstract of the inventory of Daniel Whitehead’s estate at Newtown, Long Island was found and published. It mentioned “a cow given to his son Adam by his grandfather Ireland.” Harry Macy, Jr., promptly saw the original inventory which added a bit more: “One cowe which was a calfe ten yeres ago it being then given to his son Adam by his grandfather Ireland.” This made it certain that Whitehead had married Jane Ireland by 1659 and that their son Adam was probably born by that date as well.

Daniel Whitehead had married Jane [Jeanne], the eldest daughter of Thomas and Joan Ireland of Hempstead as his third wife, by whom he had four additional children. Adam (ca. 1660-1681) was clearly the eldest. He died a young man at the end of August in 1681 leaving a small estate. The administration of it was granted to Adam’s father-in-law [stepfather] John Inckison [Ingersoll].

Ingersoll was ordered to distribute the estate to Adam’s brother Thomas Whitehead “he being under twenty-one,” and to two unmarried sisters Jemima and Elizabeth Whithead both under eighteen. Two years later Jonathan Lewis gave his receipt for Jemima’s part of Adam’s estate since she had now become his wife, and on 12 January 1682/3 Thomas Skidmore II (1627-1683?) confirmed a deed which his son Thomas III had given a day earlier to Jonathan Lewis for a house and home lot with 17 1/2 acres of land at Freshpond Neck in Huntington.

Jane Ireland, as Whitehead’s widow, had married John Ingersoll of Huntington about 1673 as her second husband. She had four more children by Ingersoll whose births are recorded in the Huntington Town Records. Since Jane Ireland was the mother of four Whitehead children born soon after 1660, and her four Ingersoll children were born from 1674 to 1680, it would seem that she was a second wife born soon after 1640 and was much younger than her Whitehead husband. When she died is unknown, but she was living as late as 29 July 1695 when she and her son John Ingersoll deeded eight acres (bounded by Simon Ingersoll) to their half-brother Thomas Whitehead.

Thomas Skidmore III of Huntington continued his interest in Jane Whitehead’s posterity. On 15 December 1702/3 he petitioned for and was granted the administration on the estate of Simon Ingersoll who had died at Huntington on 8 January 1702. It seems probable that it was the several items of Skidmore-Whitehead transactions that led Cornell (and then Hawley) to wrongly think that Jeanne Ireland, the third wife, was a Skidmore. With adjustments in time and sequence the evidence can be just as convincing for the identity of Whitehead’s first wife as a Skidmore.

There are some other bits of documentary evidence which were unknown to Rev. Cornell. We first learn of Daniel Whitehead in New England on 16 May 1647 when Susannah Hudson of Boston wrote to John Winthrop, Jr., at New London asking him to “stop [collect] 14 shilings for mee for Daniel Whithed which is in Tomas Chidnor’s handes.” This can certainly be taken as at least a suggestion that Whitehead was then the son-in-law of “Tomas Chidnor” [Thomas Skidmore I (1605-1684)] of New London.

It is possible that Daniel Whitehead was at Hempstead, Long Island by 1644 since he is listed later as one of the early fifty Proprietors there. However the first book of records for Hempstead covering the supposed decade from 1643-1653 was badly mouse-eaten as early as 1704 and has since completely disappeared. He was certainly at Hempstead by 1647, and his presumptive brother-in-law Thomas Skidmore II (1627-1683?) had already followed him there by that year from Connecticut.

Susannah, the wife of William Hudson a prominent merchant at Boston, presumably did eventually collect the 14 shillings from Skidmore owed to her husband for the purchase of goods made perhaps at Boston by Whitehead, for his accommodation at Hempstead. This relationship is substantiated by an enormous number of records that show that the Skidmores and the Whiteheads

The letter was endorsed by John Winthrop, Jr., “Goody Hudson, about 14s.” On 29 June 1646 Rev. Thomas Peters wrote to Winthrop from New London that “we shall be about 50 souls at the arrival of Goodman Skidmore.”

107 On an undated list (probably from 1657) Thomas Skidmore II was recorded as already owning six gates [pasturage rights] at Cow Neck in Hempstead. He had thrown in his lot with an English group of 50 proprietors (including Whitehead) that settled there earlier. The English had organized the town of Hempstead in 1644 despite the fact that Long Island was governed by the Dutch. See George D. A. Combes, “The fifty original Proprietors of Hempstead,” The Nassau County Historical Society Journal (vol. 29, Summer-Fall, 1969), 24-37.
behaved for several generations in a truly “cousinly” fashion, and that Whitehead’s first wife was a Skidmore, and the mother of his older set of three sons mentioned in his will in 1668.\footnote{Maj. Daniel Whitehead died in 1704, and remembered his brother David Whitehead in his will. David was still living in 1709 when he was wounded in the thigh and lost the use of one hand from “the wilful shot of William Albertus.” Nothing more has been learned about their brother Jonathan living in 1668.}

His first wife was dead before 30 January 1663\footnote{For everything likely to ever be known about Armitage see Robert Charles Anderson,, The Great Migration: Immigrants to New England, 1634-1635 (Boston, Great Migration Study Project, New England Historic Genealogical Society, 1999), I, 76-81.} when Thomas Armitage “with the advice & consent of my son Daniel Whitehead” had sold all of his housing and lands at Oyster Bay to John Townsend. The given name of the Armitage daughter who was the second wife of Daniel Whitehead is also unknown, but her age can be roughly estimated as she had a brother who a student at Harvard College in 1660 (hence born about 1640) and also an elder sister who had married James Pine of Hempstead (judging from the probable ages of his children) by 1650.\footnote{His grandson, still another John Skidmore, married Mary Whitehead, a granddaughter of Maj. Daniel and Abigail (Stevenson) Whitehead. There also were a number of other Skidmore-Whitehead marriages, all cousins in a somewhat more remote but ascertainable degree.}

Armitage had come to Boston on board the James which was still at anchor at Bristol, England on 27 May 1635. His marriage has never been found on either side of the Atlantic, but if it was in New England it seems impossible that this unnamed Armitage daughter was the mother of Maj. Daniel Whitehead, Jr. (1645-1704) or his younger brothers. She is not known to have left any issue.

John Skidmore (1643-1680), was a younger son of Thomas, Skidmore I. He and his probable nephew Daniel Whitehead, Jr. were about the same age, and both lived at Jamaica where they were mentioned as associates innumerable times in the town records. Major Whitehead became a man of considerable influence, a magistrate, a ranger-general, a patentee of Jamaica, and was still later, more importantly, a representative to the New York Assembly.\footnote{Minutes of the Town Court of Newtown, Long Island, 1656-1690 (1940), 192. Harry Macy, Jr., thinks that Whitehead was born later and he checked this record on the Family History Library microfilm 0484026 and found that it was copied correctly. However this does not guarantee that it was accurately set down by the clerk. If Whitehead was born as early as 1603 nothing is yet known about the over 40 years of his early life in England.} On 13 February 1677/8 John Skidmore “being now sick of the small poxe” made his will and named Daniel Whitehead as an overseer “to see that this my will is punctually performed.” His wife had died just previous to this date, probably of the same complaint, and his three eldest sons were given leave to choose their own masters with the approval of the overseers of his will. He recovered however from his complaint, but this will was still called out for probate in 1680. Later his eldest son John Skidmore (1663-1741), then of full age, gave a receipt to “Mr. Whitehead” on 9 March 1685/6 as having had his interest in his father’s estate.

A final note. Daniel Whitehead, Senior, is said to have been born in England about 1603 based on an entry stating that he was “Aged about 65 yeres” in 1668.\footnote{Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore), 1605-1684, of Westerleigh, Gloucestershire, and Fairfield, Connecticut; his ancestors, and descendants to the ninth generation. (Fifth edition, 2005), 586.} His father, still another John Skidmore, married Mary Whitehead, a granddaughter of Maj. Daniel and Abigail (Stevenson) Whitehead. There also were a number of other Skidmore-Whitehead marriages, all cousins in a somewhat more remote but ascertainable degree.
EDWARD AND SARAH (HOWES) TREDWELL OF LONG ISLAND

by Warren Skidmore

[Sarah Howes, whose ancestry is here displayed, was the third wife (and eventual widow) of Thomas Skidmore of Fairfield, Connecticut. Edward Treadwell (1607-1661), her first husband, was at Ipswich, Massachusetts, in 1637. After his death she married Edward Whelpley, and then Ralph Keeler who had died at Fairfield in the fall of 1672. Thomas Skidmore (who she survived by less than two weeks) was her fourth husband. (WS)]

The Orphans’ Court of the City of London, the records of which are preserved in the Corporation of London Record Office, was responsible for protecting the interests of the orphaned children of London citizens and kept a close watch on administrators and executors as well as on the upbringing of the orphans themselves. There are gaps in the Court records, particularly during the period of the Interregnum (1649-1660), but certain Court Deeds survive from that time, one of which (No. 9/214) is of American interest.

This is a declaration by John Howes that he had received a letter of attorney dated 8 May 1651 from Edward Tredwell of Easthold near Southold in Long Island within the jurisdiction of Newhaven, and Sarah his now wife, sister to the said John Howes, authorizing him to receive monies due to them in the right of Sara following the death of her brother Jonathan Howes, one of the sons and orphans of Robert Howes, late citizen and fishmonger of London.

The declaration is accompanied by a bond to the Chamberlain of the City of London dated 18 September 1651 signed by John Howes, Minister of the Word of God at Barton, Northamptonshire, and Samuel Cooper, citizen and fishmonger of London.

The will of Robert Howes of St. Martin Orgar, citizen and fishmonger of London, is listed as proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury in 1636 (f.6).
POWER OF ATTORNEY FOR THE SALE OF THOMAS SCUDAMORE’S TENEMENT AT WESTERLEIGH, GLOUCESTERSHIRE, 1640.

This document is not dated, but it follows immediately after one of 25 June and before another of 5 July 1640 in the notebook kept at Boston, Massachusetts, by Thomas Letchworth, Esq. His notebook is the daily record of the work done in the office of the only professional lawyer in the colony. The full text of the notebook was published in the Transactions of the American Antiquarian Society (volume VII, 1885). It appears that Thomas Scudamore paid 1sh 6d to have this document properly written out, a sum that could not have been spent to better advantage from our point of view. Most of the Skidmores, Scidmores, or Sidmores in the United States can claim a descent from this man, family no. 1 in the Westerleigh book on the CD-ROM. (WS)

Joseph Smith  Daniell Whitehead  John Hinds” FULKE DAVIS OF EAST HAMPTON AND JAMAICA, LONG ISLAND.

[I have long suspected that Fulke Davis of East Hampton, who left a large family, was the father of Susannah, wife of John Skidmore of Jamaica. The circumstantial evidence is most convincing, but final proof positive will probably elude us. Thomas Skidmore, Senior, was at East Hampton as early as 1668-71, but by this time his son John Skidmore and Fulke Davis had both settled at Jamaica. I went to extravagant lengths to see the original records at East Hampton (listed below) hoping that some mention might be made of Fulke Davis’ wife, whose uncommon Christian name could not be read but apparently started with the letter “B.” She is mentioned repeatedly in the East Hampton records, but always called “Goody” Davis and not with any given name. It seems certain that John and Susannah Skidmore’s only daughter Abigail (orphaned young) was brought up by Davis kinfolk at Brookhaven. She in turn gave her only known daughter the marvelous name of “Belliharen.” For some other bits and pieces of the puzzle see John Skidmore (family no. 4) in my book on the Westerleigh family. The case below adds nothing to prove my theory, but it does show that our ancestors did embarrassing things and got into trouble because of them. It would be very nice to find a Fulke and a Belliharen marrying before 1639 somewhere in England or Wales. (WS)]

June the 8th 1654.
Daniel ffayerfild being examined by us John Mulford Thomas Baker and John Hand accuseth ffulke Davis for that the last yeare the sd Daniell beinge servant to Joshua Garlickle hee being sent by his master one day to helpe ffulke Davis to weede corne on ye Eastern Playne where hee sayth ffulke Davis and he both did not weede above the Quanyt of one Rowe of Corne all the day he saith yt after they had beene at worke a little while they sat downe to pipe it and ffulke Davis came to him and would put his hands into Daniels breeches to feel his members and also pulld out his owne members and would have had Daniell to handell his but Daniell refused to let him put his hand into his breeches and also to touch his touch his members whereupon hee caught his necke under his arme and held him and thrust his hand into the sd Daniels breeches and handled his members untill hee forced his seede to come from him and thus hee did three tymes the same day and would have done it oftner but the sd Daniell saith that hee would not let him ffor hee had made him sore wth handlinge him on his members soe much and Daniell saith that when ffulke Davis pulled out his owne members that hee was afraied to medell with him and alseoy yt his members was slimy and he had wiped it wth the leaves.

THE 1737 INVENTORY OF JOHN SCIDMORE OF HUNTINGTON, LONG ISLAND

[The inventory of John Scidmore of Huntington, transcribed here, was one of a lot discarded as trash by the Surrogate’s Court in New York City many years ago. Fortunately they were rescued by some historically-minded citizen who saw that they eventually got to the New York Historical Society. This John Scidmore (no. 6 in the Westerleigh book) was the wealthiest Skidmore in the colonial period, but he must have parsimonious to a fantastic degree. There is absolutely nothing in his inventory to suggest that he and his family lived in relative comfort suitable to their station. No silver, no china, no looking glass, no great Bible, no riding carriage, a single candlestick, and apparently only wooden trenchers to eat from (in the semi-darkness?) He did have six jades. (A jade was an old worn-out horse of little value, and not a green gem on colonial Long Island.) He had a good deal of saleable livestock, and considerable cash (probably all loaned out at 8% interest as his will suggests). He also had a sixth interest in a tract of 3625 acres about Commack, Long Island -- a tract that would be worth millions if it had survived undivided until today. Everything suggests that he (and a part of his sons and grandsons after him) were eccentrics. (WS)]

INDENTURE BY JOSEPH SKIDMORE, TO HIS ELDEST SON SAMUEL, ABOUT THE ESTATE OF HIS UNCLE THOMAS SKIDMORE.

This valuable indenture made by Joseph Skidmore (family no. 12 in the Westerleigh book) was never recorded but survived on Long Island among the papers of a descendant of his son Samuel Skidmore (no. 26). We now know that Joseph’s uncle Thomas Skidmore (no. 5) went into the “Southern Province” of Pennsylvania where he settled in Lower Dublin Township of Philadelphia County. (WS)

“This Indenture, made this 31st day of December, in the year of our Lord Christ one thousand and seven hundred and seventy-two, by JOSEPH SKIDMORE of Township of Huntington, Suffolk County, on Nassau Island, in the Province of New York on the one part, and his son SAMUEL SKIDMORE of the same town, county, Island and Province of the other part, witnesseth: that whereas there was formerly one JOHN SKIDMORE, who settled within the Township of Huntington, aforesaid, who had several brothers, all younger than himself, and one of them by the name of THOMAS SKIDMORE went into the Southern Province viz: Pennsylvania or Mary Land, or in some of those Adjacent parts and purchased and Possessed an estate in Lands, and after a series of time the said THOMAS SKIDMORE died possessed thereof and leaves no Lawful issue as is reported; therefore according to the course of the law of England, if the descent be not impeded or obstructed by some intermediate devise or conveyance, the estate of said Thomas SKIDMORE ought collaterally to descend to his eldest Brother, John Skidmore deceased, or to his heir JOSEPH SKIDMORE the grantor.

Now this Indenture further witnesseth that the said JOSEPH SKIDMORE for and in consideration of the sum of five shillings of good current money of the Province aforesaid to him in hand paid by the said SAMUEL SKIDMORE, the receipt whereof the said Joseph Skidmore doth hereby confess and acknowledge, and for divers other good Causes and Considerations him thereunto moving, the said JOSEPH SKIDMORE, hath given, granted, bargained, sold, alienated, released, and confirmed to the said SAMUEL SKIDMORE (nowin his actual possession, being by vertue of a bargain and sale to him thereof, made for one whole year by Indenture, bearing date the day next before the date of these presents and by force of the Statute for Transferring of uses into possession) and to his heirs and assigns forever; The Equal Moiety or half part of the Messuage or Messuages, houses, buildings, lands, meadows, or Rights of land, either divided or lying in Common which was formerly in the possession of said THOMAS SKIDMORE, situate, lying, and being in the Lower Counties or southern parts of Pennsylvania, or within the Government of Mary Land, or in either of any of these Adjacent parts with all the Orchards, etc., etc.
RALPH SKIDMORE OF HAMPshire COUNTY, A CASE HISTORY.

by Warren Skidmore

[This article was published in the Allegheny Regional Ancestors, vol. 6, no. 1 (Spring 1997) pages 10-12. (WS)]

I first came across the name of Ralph Skidmore of Hampshire County way back in 1943 in a (then) recently published list of Virginia soldiers in the Revolution.\(^{113}\) He had enrolled in Dunmore's War in 1774 and served under Captain David McClure and Lieutenant Francis McClure presumably from Hampshire County. Ralph's name appears on a list of men who were paid at Pittsburgh in 1775 after Point Pleasant, and on still another roll of the survivors paid finally at Romney in Hampshire County. The men on this later list mostly transferred over to service in the Revolutionary Army, and Ralph Skidmore served soon after in the 12th Regiment of the Virginia Continental Line.

It was clear, early on, that he was not kissing kin of my Skidmores who had come into Virginia through the gap at Harper's Ferry in 1749. However I was still curious to know where he fitted into the family even so. In 1943 I was was into Sherlock Holmes in a big way, so to unravel his story I put on my deerstalker cap, assumed a proper British accent, polished up my four inch magnifying glass, and starting looking through the records of several of the earlier American colonies. Eventually I found that almost everything remembered, said, or on record about Ralph proved to be a misapprehension, an error, or a deliberate falsehood.

His family believed that he was born in London, England, lost both of his parents in childhood, roamed the streets with a lot of other Cockney orphans, was sold as an indentured servant to Virginia for $1.00, and survived to finally (and more importantly?) marry some relative of the plantation owner.\(^ {114}\) A highly romantic tale you think? In fact, like a good many stories that come down to us as hearsay, there are some large kernels of truth in this account of Ralph's early years! It does seem likely, however, that this story does combine bits of the lives of both Ralph (born 1734) and his eldest son William (born c.1768).

The earliest known official record that Ralph generated was his enlistment on 30 March 1758 by Captain Thomas Arrowsmith on Staten Island to serve in the French and Indian War. He reenlisted in 1759 and 1760 and 1761. His age on the muster rolls varies between 19 and 21, but this has to be understated unless he married as a youth of 15. In point of fact it now seems certain that he was a few months shy of 24 years of age at the time of his first enlistment. Ralph Skidmore told his captain that he had been born on Staten Island (which was duly recorded), and this untruth consumed a good deal of time to prove that there was simply no father to be found for him there at the proper period. He was also listed as a laborer, varying in height from 5' 7 1/2" to 5' 9" and with a brown complexion, brown eyes, brown hair, and much of this is likely to have been true.\(^ {115}\)

An unofficial record shows that he had married Hannah Owin as his first wife at the other end of Long Island on 31 September 1755. We have this from a private list of marriages kept as a kind of hobby by William Salmon (1684-1759) of persons who lived in and around Southold in Suffolk County, Long Island.\(^ {116}\) What happened to Hannah Skidmore for the four years that her husband was off with the army is unknown, but it seems likely that she had either died before his enlistment or they had parted company. We hear nothing more of her.

When Ralph Skidmore removed to Hampshire County is unknown. He turns up with a wife Mary and at least three known children who were probably born between 1768 to 1775 at a place or places unknown.

Still a very useful book, but Lloyd Dewitt Bockstruck’s Virginia Colonial Soldiers (Baltimore, 1988), 143-4, has a distinct advantage in listing the men in the companies at Point Pleasant together under the names of their captains.

Ralph Skidmore made absolutely no impression on the Hampshire records, not even an appearance as a witness. He never acquired any land, so he may have had some useful trade other than agriculture. Checking his neighbors in the tax lists suggests that he and his sons after him lived about the mouth of the South Branch where it empties into the Potomac River. Nothing more is known of Ralph after the war and he may very well have died while in the Revolutionary army.

As for his children, William (the eldest), was born about 1768. He was bound out briefly as a young boy to Peter Peters until 14 June 1778, and then afterwards was to serve Isaac Dayton -who may have been his uncle temporarily absent from the county. He appears on the first list of tithables of Hampshire County in 1787. On 28 April 1790 both he and his brother Ralph appear on a muster roll of the Hampshire County Militia in Captain John Blue's company. William went soon after to Mason County, Kentucky, where he married Mary Criswell on 23 July 1792. They were living in 1799 in Shelby County, Kentucky, and are enumerated in the 1810 census of Henry County, Kentucky. He had died there by March 1814 when his estate was appraised. His widow Mary was the head of a family as late as 1830 in the Lower Division of Henry County. They had a family of eleven children, including seven surviving sons (all of whom save one in turn produced large families). We need not deal here with the posterity of Ralph Skidmore, Senior, since a full history of the family is promised by Timothy M. Blomquist, a descendant.

Ralph Skidmore, Junior, the second son, was born about 1774. He was added to the list of tithables in Hampshire County in 1792 at the age of at least 16. On 28 April 1790 both he and his older brother William appear on a muster roll of the Hampshire County Militia. He married (undoubtedly in Hampshire County) Mary Ross, a near neighbor, who survived him. He was living as late as 1800 in Hampshire County, but went to Monongalia County for a time, and then to Ohio. He served there from Greene County in the War of 1812, but by 1820 he and his wife were living in Wayne County, Indiana, with their five daughters all aged 16 to 26. He had gone by 1834 to St. Joseph County, Indiana, with his son-in-law Theophilus Case and may very well have died there. In the census of 1850 Polly Skidmore was living aged 73 with her daughter Nancy Tweedy and her husband in Edgar County, Illinois. Mary Skidmore, aged 82, died in November 1859 in Simms Township, Edgar County, Illinois.

William and Ralph Skidmore appear to have at least one sister, Cresey, who went across the Potomac to marry William Fisher on 8 September 1803 at the Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church at Cumberland in Allegany County, Maryland. The Fishers disappear soon after.

It is time now for the grand denouement, the last few paragraphs of the mystery where you haven't peeked since you know that all will be made perfectly clear to Doctor Watson by your sham Sherlock! Eventually (while looking for someone else) I found the origin of Ralph Skidmore at New London, Connecticut, where I had not thought to look for him. He was not, genetically speaking, a Skidmore at all! His mother, Elizabeth Scidmore, was a daughter of Joseph Tooker (by his wife Mary Ogden?) and the first wife of Joseph Scidmore of Huntington, Long Island. She was a member of the First Church at Huntington in 1726, but sometime after this date she deserted her husband and went across the Long Island Sound to New London, Connecticut. Joshua Hempstead (1678-1758) of New London most fortuitously recorded the gossip about her in an entry in his diary on Sunday, 7 July 1734: 'Joseph [widow] Skidmore died yesterday in childbed with her 3rd child by Ralph Fergo. She was the wife of one Skidmore of Naharagansett and had Eloped from him and Ralph Fergo having no wife took her in."  Part of Hempstead's facts are basically correct, but Elizabeth was not a widow and her Skidmore husband did not live in Rhode Island. She had issue, as known, by Ralph Fargo (who had been born in 1693),

1. A child, perhaps born about 1730 of whom nothing else is known.
2. Benjamin, "son of Elizabeth Skidmore" (no father is mentioned), was baptized on 25 June 1732 at Groton, New London County. Nothing more is known of him, but he may possibly have been brought up by another family whose name remains to be found.
3. Ralph, presumably the child born at New London, New London County, on 16 July 1734, the subject of these notes.

It is both curious and confusing that Ralph was never known by the name of his real father or that of his mother's family. Instead he had the name of mother's estranged husband.

No probate has been found for Ralph Fargo, and his son Ralph seems to have been sent to Long Island perhaps to live with the Tooker family. His grandfather Joseph Tooker, Senior, settled late in life at Elizabeth, Essex County, New Jersey, where he left a will dated 31 December 1753. It provided for the unnamed children of his deceased daughter Elizabeth.

Ralph Skidmore married secondly Mary [Dayton?] who was living his widow in Hampshire County, (West) Virginia 1784 when she appears on a tax list taken by Michael Cresap (who lived on the north side of the Potomac where it is joined by the South Branch). There are several clues that suggest that she might have been a Dayton from Long Island. Ralph Skidmore had seven half brothers and sisters at Huntington. Peter Skidmore, the youngest of these, was still about eight years older than Ralph. He married Mary, a daughter of Hezekiah Dayton, as his second wife. It is probably too much to expect that Joseph Skidmore (whose will was proved in 1773) would take any interest in his wife's son born on the wrong side of the blanket. It is possible, however, that some part of his children (who were certainly more prosperous than Ralph Skidmore) may have been kind enough to do so. Possibly they found him a new wife and perhaps even a new home with a kinsman in Virginia.

Mary (Dayton?) Skidmore disappears after this date and may have remarried. It is certainly tempting to identify her as the relative of the plantation owner remembered by descendants, possibly Isaac Dayton? And of course we now know that our orphaned Ralph did not come from London, England, but New London, Connecticut. Possibly his completely enigmatic history will offer a clue or two for others trying to make some sense out of another unprovable hearsay story.

DESCENDANTS CALLED SKIDMORE OF RALPH FARGO AND ELIZABETH TOOKER OF NEW LONDON COUNTY, CONNECTICUT

Linda Moffatt 2017

This family descends from Elizabeth Scidmore of New London, and they are not genetically speaking, Skidmores at all. Elizabeth Scidmore was a daughter of Joseph Tooker (by his wife Mary Ogden?) and the first wife of Joseph Scidmore of Huntington, Long Island. [See Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore) 1605-1684, of Westerleigh, Gloucestershire, and Fairfield, Connecticut, (2nd edition, 1985), pages 33, 57-8.] A complete history of this family has been promised by Timothy M. Blomquist of Farmington, New Mexico.

125 Joshua Hempstead, Diary of Joshua Hempstead, from 1711 to 1758 (1901), reprinted 1970.
126 She is said (correctly) to have borne Peter Skidmore 15 or 16 children, and to have had a brother Spencer Dayton of St. George’s Manor. The Daytons were numerous or Long Island, but the name was previously unknown in Virginia. I am not familiar with any major effort to untangle this family in Connecticut or on Long Island.
ELIZABETH TOOKER, the wife of Joseph Scidmore, was a member of the First Church at Huntington in 1726. Sometime after this date she deserted her husband and went across the Long Island Sound to New London, Connecticut. Joshua Hempstead (1678-1758) of New London most fortuitously recorded the gossip about her in an entry in his diary on Sunday, 7 July 1734: “Joseph [widow] Skidmore died yesterday in childbed with her 3rd child by Ralph Fergo. She was the wife of one Skidmore of Narragansett and had Elop'd from him and Ralph Fergo having no wife took her in.” Hempstead's facts are basically correct, but Elizabeth was not a widow and her Skidmore husband did not live in Rhode Island. She had issue by Ralph Fargo (born 1693),

1. A child, perhaps born about 1730. No further record.
2. Benjamin, “son of Elizabeth Skidmore” (no father is mentioned), was baptized on 25 June 1732 at Grotton, New London County. Nothing more is known of him.
3. RALPH, presumably the child born at New London, New London County, on 6 July 1734, of whom further.

The 3rd son, FGO [1] RALPH SKIDMORE was presumably the child born 6 July 1734. No probate has been found for Ralph Fargo and his son Ralph seems to have been sent to Long Island perhaps to live with the Tooker family. His grandfather Joseph Tooker, Sr., settled late in life at Elizabeth, Essex County, New Jersey, where he left a will dated 31 December 1753. It provided for the unnamed children of his deceased daughter Elizabeth. Ralph Skidmore is first mentioned in a private list of marriages kept by William Salmon of persons who married in and around Southold, Suffolk County, Long Island. From this we learn that he married 1stly Hannah Owin on 31 September 1755 on Long Island. He married 2ndly Mary (perhaps Dayton) who was living his widow in Hampshire County, (West) Virginia, in 1784 when she appears on a tax list taken by Michael Cresap. Mary Skidmore disappears after this date and may have remarried. (The early marriage bonds of Hampshire County are lost.) Ralph Skidmore was enlisted on 30 March 1758 by Captain Thomas Arrowsmith on Staten Island to serve in the French and Indian War; he reenlisted in 1759, 1760 and 1761. His age on the muster rolls varies between 19 and 21, but this has to be understated unless he married as a youth of 15. He is reported to have been born on Staten Island, but this is also patently an error for there is no father to be found for him there at the proper period. He is listed as a laborer, varying in height from 5' 7 ½" to 5' 9" and with brown complexion, brown eyes, and brown hair. He is doubtful the man of his name who enrolled in Hampshire County, (West) Virginia for service in Dunmore’s War in 1774 under Captain David McClure and Lieutenant Francis McClure. His name appears on a list of men who were paid off at Pittsburgh in 1775, and on another list of men paid at Romney in Hampshire County. The men on this latter list mostly transferred over to service in the Revolutionary Army and we find Ralph Skidmore serving soon after in the 12th Regiment of the Virginia Continental Line. Nothing else is known of him after this and he presumably died in the service before 14 June 1778 when his son was bound out in Hampshire County. Had issue probably by his second wife,

2. 1. WILLIAM, of whom further.
3. 2. Ralph, born about 1774. He was added to the list of tithables in Hampshire County in 1792 at the age of at least 16. On 28 April 1790 both he and his older brother William appear on a muster roll of the Hampshire County Militia. He married, presumably in Hampshire County, Mary Ross who survived him. Ralph Skidmore was living as late as 1800 in Hampshire County and in 1802 in Monongahia County, West Virginia. He disappears from the tax lists thereafter and was in Ohio by 1807. He served in Ohio (probably from Hamilton County) in the War of 1812 in Captain Thomas Seton's company from 5 February to 12 August 1813 and later in Captain Henry Zumalt's company. In 1820 he was living with his wife Mary in Wayne County, Indiana, with five females aged 16 to 26 in his household all presumably his daughters; no sons are known. Ralph Skidmore, aged 60-70, and his wife were living alone in Washington Township, Wayne County in 1830. He went by 1834 to St. Joseph County, Indiana. with his son-in-law Theophilus Case and may have died there. Neither he nor his wife are found as the head of a family in 1840. In 1850 Polly (aged 73) was living with her daughter Nancy Tweedy and her husband in Edgar County, Illinois; she is identified in the census as a native of Hampshire County, Virginia, as was her daughter Nancy. Mary Skidmore, aged 82, died in November 1859 in Simms Township, Edgar County, Illinois. Had issue, 1. Sarah, born 15 October 1793 in Virginia. She married Theophilus Case (born 1789, died 1846) on 24 December 1812 at Williamsburg, Clermont County, Ohio. He was drafted soon after in the War of 1812 in Captain John Faris’ company and was taken prisoner at Detroit. Discharged on 24 September 1812 at Fort Maulden in Canada, he returned home and was living in 1830 near Ralph Skidmore in Washington Township, Wayne County, Indiana. He had two land grants in 1837 in Warren Township, St. Joseph County, Indiana, where he died on 25 July 1846. His widow was living in 1850 at Bristol in Washington Township, Elkhart County, Indiana, and had moved by 1856 to Cadiz Township, Green County, Wisconsin, with her son Samuel Skidmore Case. In 1871 she applied for a pension in the right of her husband and was then living at Shreve, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Ohio. She died on 19 September 1876 at Bristol, Elkhart County, Indiana.

2. Margaret, born 1798 in Virginia. She married Jonas Sleeth on 2 March 1814 in Greene County, Ohio. They had moved by 1830 to Shelby County, Indiana, where she was living in Marion Township, his widow, in 1850.

3. Mary, born 1800 in Virginia. She married John Henderson (born 1811) on 5 March 1828 in Wayne County. He was a shoe and last maker according to the 1850 census. They were living with their six children in Elbridge Township, Edgar County, Illinois, in 1860, but had lived earlier for brief periods in Fayette and St. Joseph Counties, Indiana.

4. Nancy, born 1802 in Virginia. She married Samuel Tweedy (born 1799, died 1853) on 15 February 1821 in Wayne County. She was living, his widow, in 1870 in Elbridge Township, Edgar County, Illinois. [Her husband was a brother of Robert Tweedy (born 1796, died 1873) of Stratton Township, Edgar County, Illinois, who married 2ndly Katherine (Skidmore) Downing who was not related. See HUNTINGTON COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA (noticed elsewhere).] Samuel Tweedy is buried in the Old Baptist Cemetery in Eldridge Township.

5. Julianna, born 1807 in Ohio. She married Aaron Mercer (born 1799, died 1862) on 28 April 1823 in Wayne County, Indiana. They were living in Greene County, Ohio, in 1860.

6. Cresey (probably). She married William Fisher on 8 September 1803 in Allegheny County, Maryland. They were married at the Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church at Cumberland by Thomas Larkin who made the return on the marriage license.

The elder son, FGO [2]. WILLIAM SKIDMORE, born about 1770. He was bound out as a young boy to Peter Peters until 14 June 1778; after this he was to serve Isaac Dayton (who may have been his uncle). He was added to the list of tithables in 1790 and on 28 April 1790 both he and his brother Ralph appear on a muster roll of the Hampshire County Militia in Captain John Blue’s company. William went soon after to Mason County, Kentucky, where he married Mary Criswell on 23 June 1792. Peter Skidmore is unusual among the Negroes who bore the surname in the early 19th century. He is the first black Skidmore whose history from the cradle to the grave can be recovered from the surviving records. He was succeeded by a number of other unrelated black families who took the name of their Skidmore masters after the Civil War in several of the states of the Confederacy. Alas, the posterity of Peter Skidmore seems to be extinct but blacks of the name with roots in the old South still flourish.

PETER SKIDMORE alias FLEET was born a slave to Isaac Skidmore at Huntington, Long Island, about the year 1780. He remained as his servant until he was about ten when he was sold to Gilbert Fleet taking Fleet as his surname for a time. In 1800 Peter Skidmore (the name he used thereafter) and his wife were living as free coloreds at Flushing in Queens County where Peter was probably employed as a boatman. He would appear to be, by elimination, the Peter Skidmore who served in the 64th and 93rd Consolidated Regiments of the New York State Militia from Queens County in the War of 1812. In 1817 he was in New York City, a boatman, living on Chrystie Street near Broome where he remained until 1823 when he moved to 44 Hicks Street, Brooklyn. He was there through 1829 and then disappeared until the 1840 census when his family was enumerated twice as free blacks. They are first found in the Tenth Ward of Manhattan, and then a few weeks later at Flatlands in Kings County, New York. At the latter place he is enumerated in the column for those employed in the navigation of canals, lakes, and rivers. Peter may have settled at Flatlands as an employee of Timothy Skidmore (a son of Isaac of Huntington) who was with his sons interested in boating about the Bay. He is probably the man mentioned in Henry R. Styles' History of Kings County (page 194): “In 1842 the [Peter?] Skidmore family living on Ruffle Bar, concluded to remove their house, in sections, to a new site on the shore of Dooley's Bay, Barren Island. The house was accordingly taken down piecemeal, and most of it carried across the bay and piled up near its future site. The moving was not quite concluded on the day appointed. On the foundation of their old home had been left the wooden ceiling of an upper chamber, in one piece or section. During the night a violent storm drove the tide up to an unprecedented height; and, in the morning, when Jacob [sic] Skidmore arose he was surprised to find that his chamber-ceiling had been brought over by the tide, from Ruffle Bar to Dooley's Bay, without injury.” In 1843 and 1844 Peter Skidmore was back in Manhattan at 63 Norfolk Street where he is identified as “colored” and a whitewasher. His surname is badly mis-stated but he is probably the man aged about 70 who died on 23 October 1847 in New York City. The death record notes that he was born on Long Island and that his remains were removed from the city for burial. Peter Skidmore married 1stly Mary (who was 19 when she married him). They had a large family about whom a good deal can be learned from the records of the Overseers of the Poor at Huntington, Long Island, and the New York City vital records. He married 2ndly Sarah Ederson on 20 February 1821 at the Willett Street Methodist Church. Had issue by his first wife,
1. Charity, born 1801. She was living “in ill health” at Huntington on 29 June 1829. She died soon after at 122 Chrystie Street in New York City described as aged 31 and born on Long Island. Services were at the Asbury African Church.

2. Ann, born 1813. She is probably the black person of her name “aged 60” in the poorhouse at Flushing in the 1860 census.

3. Bathsheba (also known as Bast or Elizabeth), born 1815. She was married (as Betsey) to Jacob Townsend by the Reverend Marmaduke Earle at Oyster Bay.

NOTES.

GEORGE SKIDMORE, who may have been black and the father of Peter Skidmore, first appears in the New York City directory for 1815, a boatman, living on Delancy Street at Corlear's Hook in the 13th Ward. He is there in 1816 (on Broome Street) at Corlear's Hook and then disappears. It is perhaps significant that Nathaniel Skidmore, a son of Peter Skidmore's former master at Huntington, also first appears in New York City in 1815.

SARAH SKIDMORE, aged 90 and a mulatto, was the head of a family in 1850 in the 13th Ward of New York City. She died aged 95 on 1 October 1856 at 63 Norfolk Street in the 13th Ward. Peter Skidmore died earlier at this address and Sarah may have been his mother.

RHODA SKIDMORE died 22 December 1799 aged 52 at Huntington, Long Island, according to her tombstone. Her will at Riverhead identifies her as a mulatto. Another RHODA SCIDMORE, born about 1832, was a black servant in 1860 in Huntington in the household of Elizabeth (Scidmore) Rogers. She was the widow of Lemuel B. Rogers and a daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Samuel Scidmore of Huntington.

STEPHEN SKIDMORE (free colored) was the head of a household in the 1840 census of Oyster Bay. He was over 55 and his wife was aged 36 to 55. In 1850 he was living in the Flatbush Alms House aged 54 and described as a pauper. His widow may be the SILVA SKIDMORE, a black domestic aged 80, living in 1870 at Oyster Bay.

MARIA SKIDMORE and Charles Townsend, coloured, were married at St. George's, Flushing.

JAMES SKIDMORE, a black aged 15, was a servant to Robert R. Boyd, merchant, in the Sixth Ward of Brooklyn in 1860.

JAMES SKIDMORE, aged 28, and a mulatto, was living at 393 Broadway in Brooklyn in 1880. His wife Elizabeth (age 21) had been born in the West Indies, and they had a son John T. Skidmore (age three). His widow had apparently married ______ Farelly by 1900 and she and her son John G. Skidmore (born February 1876) were still living on Broadway.

RICHARD SKIDMORE, “ a colored man,” died 1 March 1840 aged about 50 at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County, New York. He left no father, mother, brother, sister, nephew or niece living. He left his entire estate to Henry B. Southworth who was named executor of his will.

SAMUEL SKIDMORE, was born about 1795 in New Jersey. Free colored, he was enumerated with a wife age 24-36 in the 1830 census of Cornwall Township, Orange County, New York. They are not found there (or elsewhere) in the 1840 census. In 1850 he was living, a laborer but not identified as black, at Cornwall in Litchfield County, Connecticut; his age is given as 37 and his wife Hannah was 27. Hannah seems also to have been enumerated, aged 30, in 1850 as a servant in the household of Luke Wood at Peoria, Peoria County, Illinois. [Luke Wood was living in Cornwall Township, Orange County, New York, in 1840.] Samuel Skidmore was a day laborer in Deerpark Township back in Orange County in 1860. Also living in his household in 1860 was Sarah A. Skidmore (aged 29) and Carrie Skidmore (age 1).
THE LOYALIST SKIDMORES OF ESSEX COUNTY, NEW JERSEY

by Warren Skidmore

[This piece was done for the Footprints magazine at the request of the editor. (WS)]

Scidmore descendants (from the upstate New York family) who subscribe to Footprints may be interested in some new discoveries on two of their New Jersey great-uncles. I have previously dealt with their eldest brother John Scidmore, Jr., who was born on 29 June 1716 at Fresh Pond, Huntington, L.I., a son of John and Susannah (Smith) Scidmore, Sr., and died on 7 December 1784 at Saratoga Springs. Nothing is known for certain about the younger John Scidmore's personal sentiments in the American Revolution, but we do know beyond any doubt that he fathered four sons with Whiggish reputations who served in the Albany County Militia during the war.

Alas, the Revolution divided families in much the same way that the Civil War did later in the border states. All of John Scidmore's brothers were Tories. His youngest brother Zophar Scidmore (1744-1822) remained at Smithtown, L.I., and refused to sign the Association Oath to support the Continental Congress in May 1775. It is amusing to see that Zophar's granddaughter, Estelle Emma (Scidmore) Doremus (1830-1905), was an early and enthusiastic member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She claimed (in error) the service record of the Saratoga County Zophar Scidmore for her grandfather. She was for many years Regent of the large New York City chapter, and looks properly elegant in turn of the century pictures decked out in sash and supplemental bars. It was abuses such as this that drove the Daughters to demand better proof of both service (and descent) from prospective members.

Samuel Scidmore, his brother, had been born by 1730 at Huntington, Suffolk County, Long Island, and was killed at the Battle of Eutaw Springs, South Carolina, on 13 September 1781. He married Naomi (surname unknown) who was still his widow in 1791 when she was a sponsor at the baptism of her grandson Samuel Skidmore (who was born on 6 January 1791). She was widowed a second time and was living (the widow Baldwin) as late as 1814.

On 21 March 1745/6 John Scidmore, Jr., of Huntington, Long Island, yeoman, sold to Samuel Scidmore 2 3/4 acres of land "west of the highway from Fresh Pond Landing" for £29. The price suggests the land was improved by a substantial house or had some other attractive attribute. No deed has been found from Samuel Scidmore selling this tract, but he did at some undetermined date and moved to New Jersey.

In their father's will dated 24 June 1758 both John and Samuel Scidmore are cut off with a token 10sh each. Both had removed from Long Island some years earlier, and John, Jr., had recently arrived in Dutchess County, New York, where he was living in 1758 on the Clements Place in Beekman Precinct. Samuel was at Second River (now Belleville) in Essex County, New Jersey. Samuel Scidmore's son John was born no later than 1760 at Belleville according to the records of the Acquackanock Reformed Church of Passaic (which shared a minister with the Reformed Church of Second River).

Samuel Scidmore was a sponsor at the baptism of Samuel Spier (Speer), a grandson (born 22 July 1772), according to the register of the Acquackanock Reformed Church. He was a householder with one cow at what is now Belleville (then a part of Newark Township) according to the tax list of Essex County taken in February 1780, although he was probably away with the British army. A Loyalist like his brothers, he was serving in Major Thomas Bowden's company of the Second Brigade of Brigadier-General Oliver Delancey's Brigade at Savannah, Georgia, but is noticed on a bimonthly muster taken on 28 November 1779 as being "absent in New York." He and his brother Smith Skidmore were transferred immediately afterwards to Captain Robert Drummond's company of the Third Battalion of New Jersey Volunteers where his brother Smith was already a Sergeant. Captain Drummond lived at the time at Acquackanack (now Passaic) in Essex County, New Jersey, and had recruited volunteers throughout the county. Samuel and Smith Skidmore were both present at musters taken of the company between 24 February and 24 June 1781 in the Ninety-Six District of South Carolina.

Samuel Skidmore was killed at the Battle of Eutaw Springs in what is now Berkeley County, South Carolina, on 8 September 1781. The 2000 experienced British and Loyalist troops there were under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Alexander Stewart, and encamped near Nelson's Ferry on the Santee River. Stewart's forces included Lieutenant Colonel John Harris Cruger's New York and New Jersey Volunteers. After a spirited battle the British troops began to reform, and Cruger's men found refuge in the thick walls of a two-storied brick mansion with a paraposed garden from where they poured a deadly fire on the rebel Americans. The American forces (under Nathanael Greene) pursued the enemy into the British camp which was filled with supplies of food and drink. The Americans (as hungry as they were thirsty) pillaged the camp and swilled down the British rum they found there, and their line soon deteriorated into an undisciplined mob. Stewart was able to reform, recapture two British guns, and win the day. The British army was mauled, however, and Samuel Skidmore was among the severely wounded who died a few days later.

He had been taxed again in July 1781, and curiously (after his death) in February 1782 and (for the last time) in July 1782. No probate has been found for him, but we do find that his widow Naomi married Elias Baldwin, a widower, on 14 April 1800 in Essex County. She survived her second husband, and as the widow of Elias Baldwin (her Christian name is not stated) was taxed in Newark Township last in 1814.

Samuel and Naomi Scidmore had at least four known children:

i. Hannah. She married Moses Tharp by 1770. He died in 1799 in Paterson Township, Essex County, New Jersey.

ii. Naomi. She married Reyier Speer by 1772. He was living in 1830 in Acquackanock Township, Essex County, New Jersey.

iii. Sarah. She married John Cossart (Cusaart) by 1777.

iv. John, born by 1760. He married (1) Catherine, a daughter of Herman and Janet (Van Eydesteyn) DeGraw, on 12 July 1783, and (2) Leah, apparently the only child of Cornelius and Leah (Cadmus Helms (who survived him). John Scidmore had issue by both his wives and had died just previous to 10 October 1821 when an inventory was taken of his estate in Saddle River Township, Bergen County, New Jersey.

Smith Scidmore, a brother of Samuel, has until recently been completely unknown. He made no impression on the records on Long Island and clearly went out to New Jersey as a young man. He served as a Sergeant in Captain Robert Drummond's company of the Third Battalion of New Jersey Loyalist Volunteers, and he and Samuel Scidmore are both found in the service of the King at Savannah, Georgia, on a muster role set down on 29 November 1779. Far better records are found of the British troops than survive for the Americans. The Scidmores are found on bimonthly British musters taken in February, April and June of 1781 in the Ninety-six District of South Carolina, and in April and June of 1782 in Major Drummond's company at Charleston, South Carolina. Sergeant Smith Skidmore is noticed in the December 1782 muster, and is last found on 23 February 1783 with Major Robert Drummond at Dutch Kiln, Long Island, apparently awaiting evacuation. Drummond sailed away with the British army and died on 31 January 1789 at London, England, far from his New Jersey home. Alas, some further news of Smith Scidmore remains to be discovered. He apparently did not return to New Jersey, nor is he found among the Loyalists who settled in Canada. So far as is known he never married.

The discovery of Smith Scidmore is important as it tends to substantiate the family name of his mother Susanna. She has always been accepted as a Smith since this name was remembered by Mrs. Doremus and other early members of the Smithtown family. She can not be fitted into the well-known "Bull Smith" family of that place, but may very well belong there. John Scidmore, Jr., lived briefly in New Jersey, since his son Zophar (the true Revolutionary soldier) in his pension application states that he was born on 30 June 1755 in that state before his family moved to Dutchess and then Saratoga County in New York. No mention has been found of John Scidmore at Belleville (or elsewhere in New Jersey) but this place may be taken as his likely abode pending the discovery of some other better evidence.
“ELIZA SCIDMORE, PAINTING THE TOWN PINK”

For a life of Eliza Ruhamah Scidmore (whose work has brought so much pleasure to the nation) see the Westerleigh book (daughter of George Bolles Scidmore). It is regrettable (as this recent article in the Washington Post for Monday, 1 February 1999, points out) that she is now forgotten. It would be a great project for some Scidmore with a bit of time to petition the Park Service to see that a memorial is put up to her in the Tidal Basin at Washington D.C. (WS)

“It was only after my return from a first visit to Japan after seeing the old cherry trees, in their glory, that any idea moved me,” Eliza Ruhamah Scidmore later recalled it. “It was in the first year of President Grover Cleveland’s first administration.

That was 1885. A Washington travel writer with a taste for adventure and an eye for aesthetics, Scidmore had just taken an Asian voyage memorable in part for the delicate beauty of the cherry trees she had spied in a Tokyo park. She had fallen in love with both the trees and the sensibility they seemed to evoke among the Japanese. “Except Fujiyama and the moon, no other object has been theme and inspiration of so many millions of Japanese poems as the cherry blossoms,” Scidmore wrote: “Wouldn’t Washington, so long derided as a deathly and rancid swamp, benefit from such a blossoming?” Five years after her return, images of Japan still fresh in her mind, Scidmore sensed an opportunity.

Responding to complaints that malaria and yellow fever were rising from the Potomac lowlands, Army engineers pumped mud from the swamp, thus creating an artificial peninsula - - what would become eventually the 724-acre East and West Potomac Parks. Scidmore told the man in charge of the grounds, as she recalled it in a 1926 memoir published in the Washington Sunday Star, “that since they had to plant something in the great stretch of raw, reclaimed ground by the river bank to hide those old dump heaps ... they might as well plant that most beautiful thing in the world - - the Japanese cherry tree.”

Thus began an extraordinary struggle, stretching over several decades, that ultimately yielded one of Washington's most distinctive attractions, the cherry trees that bloom annually in Potomac Park, drawing tourists from around the globe to witness their brief glory. Since 1934, the city has staged a festival in their honor, although the fragility of the blossoms and their unpredictable timing usually conspire to thwart festival and blooms from coinciding.

None of it would have happened but for the incredible determination of Eliza Scidmore, a woman unmemorialized in the city's official histories.

When Scidmore first proposed importing cherry trees for the new peninsula, the man in charge just “listened amicably and sent me on,” she wrote. Undeterred, she carried pictures of Japanese cherry trees to Col. Oswald Ernst, a buildings and grounds superintendent for the city, and made a plea for something of spring beauty down in the waste space at the foot of Seventeenth Street.

“He listened patiently and seriously to my fairy tales,” Scidmore wrote. “Nothing more. Nothing happened.”

Ernst’s successor, a Col. John M. Wilson, confronted with the same photographs and the same earnest pleas, offered her a practical-minded refusal. As she recalled it, Wilson declared, “When the cherries are ripe we would have to keep the park full of police day and night. The boys would climb the trees and get the cherries and break all the branches.”

“But these cherry trees do not have any cherries. Only blossoms,” Scidmore ventured. “What? No cherries? Huff! What good is that sort of a cherry tree?”
Undaunted, Scidmore began asking “annual dollar subscriptions from every traveler I could think of who had seen the Sakuras [cherries] in their glory in springtime in Japan, with special reference and appeal to those who had sipped the Emperor's champagne at the Palace Spring Garden parties."

Scidmore hoped the subscriptions would buy 100 trees every year. “In 10 years, there would be a great showing in Potomac Park - - a rosy tunnel of interlaced branches along the river's bank.”

Then came good luck - - William Howard Taft’s inauguration. Scidmore knew the Tafts had lived for several months on a Yokohama bluff and knew cherry trees well.

As soon as the Tafts were in residence, the intrepid tree promoter sent Helen Taft a note “asking for her approval and aid in getting an avenue of Japanese cherry trees planted in Potomac Park.”

Presto! Three days later, on April 7, 1909, the first lady wrote back, thanking Scidmore, and adding: “I have taken the matter up and am promised the trees.”

Helen Taft, like all the previous occupants of the White House, had other reasons for wanting to do something about the place. According to biographer Carl Sferrazza Anthony, she was hoping to transform the capital city's blight. She described Washington as “a mosquito-infested swamp, rendezvous of tramps, and a hiding place for criminals.”

Once caught up in the idea, Taft added her own touches to the project. She aimed at shaping the Potomac banks in the manner of Luneta, a flower-filled park in Manila, which she had come to know when her husband was governor-general of the Philippines. She instigated building the Hains Point bandstand and changing the name of the Potomac bank road from “the Speedway” to Potomac Drive.

Not long after, Jokichi Takamine, a chemist and a friend of Tokyo Mayor Yukio Ozaki, came to Washington to tell Mrs. Taft formally of a gift of 1,000 trees from the city of Tokvo. But Takamine, who picked up a substantial part of the cost of the trees, thought 1,000 would not be enough. “In fact,” he said, “I had better give 2,000 trees. She will need them to make any show.” The first 2,000 trees, shipped in 1910, were infested with scale, insects, larva “and what not,” according to Scidmore. They were burned. Takamine took the news in stride, quipping, “I believe your first president set the example of destroying cherry trees.”

Undaunted, Takamine sent for 3,000 more. In 1912 they arrived in Seattle, where they were received by David Fairchild, another lover of cherry trees and a friend of Takamine. (Fairchild had planted 300 cherry trees around his Chevy Chase house and some at nearby schools as early as 1908. Many are still there.)

The second shipment was closely inspected and found to be insect-free. On March 27, 1912, Helen Taft and the Japanese ambassador's wife, Viscountess Chinda, planted the first trees between the drive and the Tidal Basin. Fairchild and Scidmore attended the ceremony.

Scidmore said she “got a word in for having a row of Yoshino, the earliest blooming variety, planted along the Tidal Basin where they might be reflected in the water, as becomes certain Sakuras. A whole 1,200 of the 1,800 Yoshino were put there. A few cherry trees were planted in the White House grounds, one in Lafayette Square, and some given to Rock Creek Park. Some 1,500 trees were crowded in rows in a sort of a nursery reserve at the corner of 17th and B streets.”

Besides battling for the trees, Scidmore was an accomplished travel writer, author of seven books and a board member of the National Geographic Society. After she died in 1928, her ashes were buried in Japan at the request of the Japanese government.

And around the Tidal Basin the trees flourished, both in the ground and in the hearts of Washingtonians. They were so cherished that when, in 1938, Congress voted to remove some of the trees to build the Jefferson Memorial, men and women representing D.C. clubs marched on the White House in protest. “Clubwomen who molest workmen transplanting Japanese cherry trees to make way for the Jefferson Memorial may be transplanted themselves,” wrote the New York Times, reporting the demonstration with a touch of levity.

If they chained themselves to the trees as they threatened, President Roosevelt said, “The cherry trees, the women and their chains would be gently but firmly transplanted in some other part of Potomac Park.”

The plans eventually went ahead, and some trees were safely transplanted. Today, National Park Service official Earle Kittleman counts 3,700 cherry trees around the Tidal Basin, in East and West Potomac Parks and the Washington Monument grounds, though only 150 to 200 of them are thought to be the original ones.

Plaques mark the place on the Tidal Basin where Helen Taft and the Japanese ambassador's wife planted the first two trees, which survive today. Eliza Scidmore is not mentioned. “Life is short, like the three-day glory of the cherry blossom,” says the Japanese Proverb
The following 11 papers relate to the family of Joseph Skidmore [24] and his wife Agnes (Caldwell).

THE JOSEPH SKIDMORE FAMILY OF PENDLETON COUNTY, VIRGINIA

by Warren Skidmore

[This brief article was published in the recent Pendleton County, West Virginia, Past and Present (1991), on page 213. (WS)]

Joseph Skidmore, who settled in Pendleton County in or soon after 1749, was born about 1706 in Murderkill Hundred, Kent County, Delaware, the only son of Joseph and Rebecca (Miller) Skidmore. The elder Joseph was a grandson of Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore) who came from Westerleigh, Gloucestershire, to Cambridge, Massachusetts, in 1636. The young Joseph married (by 1730) Agnes, the daughter of Andrew and Margaret (Train) Caldwell, who survived him by many years and was living in Pendleton County as late as 1792. Joseph Skidmore sold Fisher's Delight, a plantation he had inherited from his father, in 1736 and moved his family to what is now Washington County, Maryland. In 1742 Joseph Scidmore was a petitioner for the formation of what became All Saints' Church in Frederick, Maryland. About 1749 he moved from there through the gap at Harper's Ferry to what is now Rockingham County where the family camped for a time on Skidmore's Fork while Joseph and his sons went over the mountains looking for a promising site for their new home. He decided on a fine tract at Ruddle where he built a log house and mill soon after. The house still survives although it has been sided over and is now much enlarged and altered. The original buhrstone from his mill was used many years ago as a foundation for a chimney added to the house.

In 1753 he and his wife Agnes made a trip back to Maryland to sell Monican, their plantation there, having made the decision to stay in Virginia. There is good evidence that Joseph and his family stayed in Pendleton County during the bloody years of the French and Indian War when most of the other pioneers fled back to the relative safety of the Tidewater or the Carolinas. When new settlers flooded into the county after the war he had accumulated a fine selection of the very best land in the county to sell them. He never acquired any large tracts of several thousand acres but instead (frequently in partnership with Daniel Harrison) patented the very best of small parcels of river bottom land that could be easily cleared and developed.

His mill ground grain for the troops in the French and Indian War, Dunmore's War, and the American Revolution as the accounts paid by the House of Delegates sitting at Williamsburgh show. In 1775 Mrs. Annes Skidmore was paid for "diets" [meals] served to the militia as they passed up the South Branch Valley on their way to Point Pleasant.

He and his partner Daniel Harrison were devout members of the established church and Harrison built a chapel of ease on his plantation near Dayton, Virginia. Joseph and his family worshipped there whenever a traveling Anglican clergyman stopped on his rounds of the Virginia frontier.

Joseph Skidmore's Bible (printed in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1756) and his Book of Common Prayer are included in the inventory of his estate made on 19 June 1778. Also included were his "spectacles," a number of slaves, household goods, and plantation tools.

Joseph and Agnes Skidmore had 11 children who survived to adulthood. Joseph, the eldest, also lived near Ruddle and left a large family by his wife Elizabeth Phares. James married Sarah McDonald and settled in Botetourt County. Sarah married Jonas Friend and died at Friend's Fort in Randolph County. Captain John was wounded twice at Point Pleasant and served throughout the American Revolution. He was a Gentleman Justice in both Augusta and Rockingham Counties, and the first President of the Pendleton County Court in 1788. He married Mary Magdalena Hinkle and raised a large family in a fine brick house which he built on the South Branch. Edward married Deborah Dawson and died in what is now Nelson County, Kentucky. Elizabeth married Jacob Friend and lived about a mile above Franklin. Rebecca married Gabriel Kile (Coil), a soldier in the Revolution, who had a land grant in the Virginia Military District of Ohio. The moved there and both died in Jasper Township, Fayette County, Ohio, at advanced ages. Thomas married Eleanor Ingram and died in 1807 in Randolph County. Samuel married Ruth Marsdon, and left posterity in Georgia and Mississippi. Margaret married Lt. Col. Gavin Hamilton and was living, his widow, in 1811 in Clark County, Kentucky. The youngest son Andrew married Margaret Johnson. A notorious Indian fighter in his youth, he lost his right index finger at Point Pleasant. He was buried in 1827 in the Skidmore Cemetery at Sutton, Braxton County, the last survivor of this family.
“GRANNY” [AGNES] SKIDMORE, A NURSE-PRACTITIONER BY 1769 IN VIRGINIA.

by Warren Skidmore

Next to nothing is usually known about the subservient wives of the early settlers on the Virginia frontier. I did know a bit about Agnes (Caldwell) Skidmore before I made my first long visit to Virginia in pursuit of family history in 1951. I spent a day in the courthouse at Rockingham County, and then that evening I was able to use a daybook kept at Felix Gilbert’s store in that county with hundreds of charges from 1774-1777. It was owned by Mrs. John T. Harris of Harrisonburg who very kindly set up a card table in her living room and let me spend several hours making pencil notes from it. I set down a long list of things that could not be made at home which were purchased by the Skidmores at Gilbert’s establishment. It included hemp, blankets, salt, beeswax, kgs, girths, shears, pots, kettles, wire, hammers, thimbles, hats, shoes and (surprise) quantities of rum imported from the West Indies. However my major new discovery was to find in the daybook that Mrs. Ann or “Granney Skidmore,” whose charges were entered in both names, appeared to be the only nurse-midwife (who was then known familiarly with the epithet “granney”) who dealt at Gilbert’s store.

Agnes Caldwell Skidmore, a daughter of Andrew (1675-1751) and Margaret (Train) Caldwell of Kent County, Delaware was born about 1706, but on the Wicomico River in Somerset County, Maryland. She went to Delaware about 1715 where Andrew Caldwell later farmed a plantation called The Exchange. Her father became one of the most influential men in Kent County, and her brother Major Andrew Caldwell (ca. 1704-1774) represented the county in the General Assembly of Delaware for 12 years from 1745 to 1757. Agnes (known also as Annes or Ann) married Joseph Skidmore (1706-1778) of Murderkill Hundred in Kent County, Delaware. He had been left an orphan in childhood, but survived and managed to marry well to Agnes before 7 August 1730.

128 It started with a tedious drive through northern West Virginia over roads that had hundreds of sharp 90 degree turns laid out years earlier by county surveyors to avoid crossing through any poor farmer’s corn patch. I finally arrived at Philippi in Barbour County where I had an indifferent meal at an eatery with a “White Only” sign on the door. I eventually got home several days later after stopping at several other courthouses, lastly at Fincastle in Botetourt County. The county clerk there told me that while he was a Virginian he still highly approved of my Republican senator, Robert A. Taft, son of the former president. He was pleased to hear that Senator Taft’s office had sent me several years earlier a pass to the Senate Gallery which I occasionally used when I was at college in Annapolis, Maryland. There were then no McDonald’s or fast fooderies, no motels, and only very occasionally a set of drafty “tourist cabins” to accommodate the traveler. (Different times, different mores, now happily largely forgotten.)

129 I had learned of this ledger from John W. Wayland who had printed some useful extracts from it in his History of Rockingham County (Dayton, Virginia, 1912) 64. Alas this daybook (which I would love to find and fully transcribe today) can not now be found. The Skidmore extracts printed here in the Appendix mention still other volumes (called Ledgers F and G) of what was once clearly a long series of the financial records of the store between 1769-1774. Alas, all of these daybooks now seem to be totally lost.

130 This was back in the dark ages before photocopiers.

131 A Dictionary of Americanisms on Historical Principles, by Mitford M. Mathews (University of Chicago Press, 1951) 731. Local usage also sometimes transformed the noun granney into a verb as “she grannied yore mother when you was born,” an example quoted by Mathews.

132 The town of Woodside below Dover now stands on this tract together with the old Caldwell burying ground. See the long article “Notes on the Caldwell Family of Kent County, Delaware” by Mary Couper Williams, (Genealogical Society of Pennsylvania) vol. VI, no. 2 (March, 1916).

On 18 June 1736 Joseph Skidmore, now styled a yeoman, sold Fisher’s Delight (a small plantation that he had inherited from his father) for £70. Driven by ambition he left shortly after his wife’s confinement for what is now Washington County, Maryland.\(^{134}\) Agnes joined her husband soon after in Maryland where the majority of her 11 children were born. They stayed there for a time, but then went by way of the gap at Harper’s Ferry up the Shenandoah to what was then the old Augusta County in Virginia.

Joseph Skidmore set out immediately on a search the area that became Pendleton County where he entered surveys of an enormous lot of the choicest bottom tracts which promised easy development. One of the best of these, containing 54 acres on Lick Run near the present crossroads at Ruddle in Pendleton County, he kept for himself where he built a profitable gristmill. His home there, originally a log cabin, was hard by the mill and enlarged several times. About 1840 the original house was sided over for the last time, and the burl stone from the mill used as the foundation for a chimney added to the house. It can still be seen embedded in the sod, and an old photograph taken of the house as it looked after 1840 still survives.\(^{135}\)

The only mischief that the Skidmores are known to have suffered at the hands of the Indians was here at this log cabin and was remembered by Delilah (Skidmore) Cogar (1827-1919), a great-granddaughter of Agnes Skidmore. According to her the Skidmores lived on a small run and one day when Agnes was home alone a party of Indians appeared and stole a hog which had just been dressed and was hanging up outside the cabin. Agnes (who Mrs Cogar described as “a large spare-made” woman) sat down on the floor and cried while the Indians looked in through the cracks of the house and laughed at her.

The Skidmores did all of their trading at Felix Gilbert’s store at Peale’s Cross Road about five miles southeast of Harrisonburg.\(^{136}\) He was in business by 1765, but his trade was in a small way until he went off to London and came back to Virginia with a fine stock of goods to please the local planters. In addition to his emporium, he also ran an inn and tavern here that drew a heavy patronage from a wide area about the Shenandoah Valley.\(^{137}\)

Gilbert and Joseph Skidmore, Senior had one trait in common. Both were members of the Church of England, this in an area where the majority of the population was either Scotch-Irish and Presbyterians, or German and Lutherans. Gilbert was one of the most active members of the local Established Church. In 1761 he and John Buchanan were chosen as wardens of the Augusta Parish Vestry and they ordered a parish register book, a Bible, and two prayer books (now lost) to be used by the incumbent and what must have been a small congregation.

In addition to the account book I saw in 1951 there was an earlier one for the 1768 and 1769 for Gilbert’s emporium that found its way to the local historical society.\(^{138}\) From it I found that in 1769 Granny Skidmore purchased a quantity of ginger for which she earned in turn a credit for her sale to Gilbert of a surplus supply of the root of the ginseng plant. Presumably this was dug up in the forest about Ruddle. Ginseng was highly prized in China (where it did not grow) and it is possible that some of her hoard of the root was eventually exported.

\(^{134}\) According to Susannah (Skidmore) Harper her father, [Captain] John Skidmore, had been born eight days earlier in Delaware.

\(^{135}\) Moments in Time; a Pictorial History of Pendleton County (1988) 128.

\(^{136}\) This was then where the roads from Swift Run Gap and Brown’s Gap come down around the mountain and cross the Keezletown Road. These roads are now U. S. Route 33, and State Route 276.

\(^{137}\) There are predictable entries for people from what is now Rockingham County, but also from present day Pendleton, Randolph, Albemarle, Culpeper, and Greene Counties, as well as travelers and from several other unidentified places. Wayland also noticed elsewhere that George Washington stopped at “one Gilbert’s” at Peale’s Cross Roads on 30 September 1784. Jonas Friend, a son-in-law of Granny Skidmore, purchased eight kegs of rum from the Indies which he carted back to his fort near Elkins in the Tygart Valley for the entertainment of his guests.

\(^{138}\) This earlier daybook was previously unknown to me, and I remain indebted to Glenn Huffman of Harrisonburg, Virginia, for an old undated newspaper article of extracts from it headed “Roster of Many Early Rockingham Settlers from Old Account Book, by P. C. Kaylor, president of the Rockingham Historical Society” found in a local newspaper. I digitized and annotated the Kaylor clipping and then published it as “Felix Gilbert’s account book, 1768-9” in the Allegheny Region Ancestors, vol. 8, no. 2 (Summer 1999). The original book (with a missing back and a loss of the index from A-O) was formerly in the possession of the historical society, but it has not been seen since the society moved several years ago and is also presumed to have been lost.
It is clear that she was a medical practitioner in a small way, and that her talent extended beyond midwifery and childhood complaints. Ginger was then the best known remedy for stomach complaints, and ginseng had a reputation as a general tonic but also (probably undeserved) as a great restorative of masculine vigor.

Americans living on the frontier in the 18th century did not have access to a doctor, and most probably could not afford his fees even if they had. There were not many trained physicians in early America and the majority of them practiced their skills in the cities along the Atlantic seaboard. However in many of these rural communities there was frequently a resident, usually an aging matriarch who had several children of her own, who assisted their neighbors in childbirth and with some other simple treatments of common complaints.

There are not many written records that survive about early American grannies. Mostly they sat by patiently waiting for nature to complete the birth. They confined their activities largely to comforting mother, and then finally tying the umbilical cord. Also, on occasion, they went so far as to christen an infant to save its soul when its death was imminent.

Agnes and her husband seem to have separated perhaps as early as 1768. Joseph Skidmore and a part of his children moved before the Revolution to South Elkins in what is now Randolph County where they were among the earliest settlers in the Tygarts River Valley. Joseph and his youngest son Andrew Skidmore attempted, unsuccessfully, to dam up the river at South Elkins to power a new mill. If we believe Andrew Skidmore he went there at the age of 18, and this would put their removal in 1768. What is certain is the quality of the land they claimed, and that Joseph Skidmore was again among the first to stake out several potentially useful sites for profitable resale when the community grew.

Agnes, up to now a dutiful wife, had followed her husband from Delaware to Maryland, and then to a hard life in frontier Virginia. Clearly she now rejected still another removal to an even more dangerous and difficult life. Joseph Skidmore then deeded his old mill and home-place to his son Samuel Skidmore on 26 August 1772, and presumably Samuel agreed to support his mother there in her old age. This seems to have been an amiable agreement until Samuel Skidmore died untimely in 1780 leaving a widow and a minor sonting as his heirs. Agnes Skidmore made a determined effort after his death in a suit “Skidmore vs. Skidmore” to have her dower set off in the Mill Run property by her son’s executors.

She kept a relationship with her family back in Delaware. In 1774 her nephew Jonathan Caldwell was the captain of a company called the “Blue Hen’s Chickens” in the Revolution in the Delaware regiment commanded by Colonel John Haslet (ca. 1757-1777). He promptly became something of a local celebrity. Word of Caldwell’s exploits reached Agnes in Virginia and she saw a grandson, Jonathan Caldwell Friend, named for her nephew.

Agnes Skidmore survived her husband for many years. She put in a claim at a court held for Augusta County on 18 January 1775 for supplies furnished to the militia a few months earlier on their way to the battle at Point Pleasant. Mrs. Ann Skidmore was paid “By Sundry p[er] Au[dit] £1.17.2 Ex.” This entry is not itemized but it may have been for diets (meals) served to her son’s company of militia before they left for the battle at Point Pleasant.

She was not mentioned in her husband’s will (who had “a negro wench” that took care of his household), while she stayed apparently by agreement at her more comfortable home at Ruddle. She was probably delighted 139 Ginseng grows in deciduous forests, and the plants (identified by the bright red berries) were dug up in the autumn. The roots are frequently over-harvested, and ginseng is now protected as an endangered species in several states.

141 Apparently unsuccessfully. It descended soon after to her infant grandson Samuel Skidmore (1779-1852), later a doctor in Georgia, who sold it after he attained his majority to his cousins Levi and Isaac Skidmore of Pendleton County. It 1823 the property was owned by their brother James Skidmore, by then the largest landowner on the county, and it appears in the tax list of 1823 called the Old Mill Place.
142 I have dealt with Colonel Haslet (who was also a medical doctor) earlier in an Occasional Paper, no. 24, “The Inventory Taken in 1762 of the Shop and Medicines of Dr. John Skidmore at Dover, Delaware.” Haslet had started the study of medicine as an apprentice to Dr. Skidmore long before the Revolution.
143 Captain Caldwell was a son of her brother Joseph and Mary (Jenkins) Caldwell. For Jonathan Caldwell Friend (1774?-1856), a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Skidmore) Friend, see Heritage of Braxton County West Virginia 1995 (Heritage Book Committee, 1995), 149. There are some errors in this account, and his family in Braxton County seem to have not known about Friend’s namesake in Delaware. to have been there in 1777 which was a particularly bloody year on the frontier. Her son, Captain John Skidmore, was sent out at the head of a company of men recruited in Pendleton County to protect his kinsmen and the other early settlers in the Tygart Valley.\footnote{Including his father, his sister Sarah (wife of Jonas Friend), and his brothers Thomas and Andrew Skidmore.}

Agnes Skidmore was living as late as 2 January 1792 clearly over 80, but presumably still “spare-made” and of good mind, when the Pendleton County Court ordered that a deposition about a lawsuit be taken from her. She was buried there on the home-place at Ruddle. There are two old graves here. One that could still be traced in 1951 (when I was there) was several yards south of the house with a small field headstone. It was remembered by the owners as the grave of “a Skidmore woman.” A foot-stone had recently disappeared then, but the grave facing to the east could be easily traced. The other grave, some distance from this, had been plowed over in 1951. It was said to be the grave of Mary Elizabeth Hartman, the young first wife of Reverend John George Dahmer.\footnote{Reverend Dahmer married Nancy, the daughter of Captain John Skidmore, as his second wife. They are buried elsewhere.} Mrs. Dahmer may have been taken on as a companion to Agnes Skidmore who probably was not living alone at this date.

Felix Gilbert was a determined Loyalist during the Revolution, and Andrew Skidmore (Granny’s son) accused him with “speaking Treasonable words that tend to encourage sedition on the Western Waters.” He was accused of influencing a Tory uprising that had to be put down by the Augusta militia, and was convicted by the new Rockingham Court at their second sitting in May 1778. It was the verdict of the court that Gilbert should post a bond of £1000 to insure his good behavior.\footnote{Freeman H. Hart, The Valley of Virginia in the American Revolution 1763-1789 (Chapel Hill, North Carolina, 1942) 104. Hart also cites the Felix Gilbert account books in his bibliography. It is to be regretted that no one has ever attempted even a brief account of the numerous Loyalists in the Virginia Valley, good men, now forgotten.} He abandoned his business ventures in Virginia soon after, and went to Washington in Wilkes County, Georgia where he died, still called a merchant, in 1801.

POSTSCRIPT. It is a pity that the purchasers at the vendue sale were so badly stated that they could not be recorded as the sale probably attracted a large audience and would have given us another useful list of the very first settlers in the Tygart Valley. Much of the estate was not itemized here; all of the plantation tools, the Negro man Chark, and the best (apparently only) bed and its furniture which were directly given to his son
Andrew did not need to be accounted for and are missing.

Andrew Skidmore had £80 8sh as his 15% "Executors Commission" but it is not clear what happened to the rest of the money realized. It apparently did not go to Joseph Skidmore, Junior, who as eldest son would have been heir-at-law under the old British law. [Thomas Jefferson was instrumental in having this point of law reformed so that the widow and all his children had an interest in an intestate’s estate in Virginia.] The widow later testified to this in Pendleton County, but there is nothing to suggest that her son Joseph Skidmore, Junior (or the widow and her other children) benefitted in any way from Joseph Skidmore’s estate.

It also is extremely curious that Joseph Skidmore, Senior, made absolutely no provision for his widow. She never joined him in the Tygart River Valley, but stayed with her son Samuel Skidmore at her home at Ruddle in Pendleton County.

The original of this will still survives at Staunton. It shows that Joseph Skidmore wrote it out in his own hand, and that Elias Barker signed his own name as well of the two other witnesses who added their marks.

A SUIT IN CHANCERY: PHARES VS. VENEMAN, 1777.

A small collection preserved as Pendleton County Loose Papers will be found at the library of West Virginia University at Morgantown. They were donated by H. M. Calhoun, Junior. He is said to have found them blowing about the town of Franklin after the fire at the courthouse. The bound records were all saved when they were set out on the street, but clearly some other more ephemeral records were lost. The chancery records of Virginia courts, when found, can be exceedingly useful. Just as in old England they do not deal with criminal matters, but are rather arguments between citizens usually over real or personal property. The defendants were not accused by the Commonwealth, but rather by another residence with a complaint against a neighbor or kinsman. They were never copied into books, and usually survive (if at all) tied in bundles in the basements or attics of the courthouse. Unfortunately they seem to have usually been the first thing that the county clerks were inclined to discard when pressed for space. The small collection at Morgantown has never been published and should be better known.\textsuperscript{150} (WS)

Preserved in Envelope 3. Several loose depositions bring out the facts in this case, viz: In 1777 John Pharis came to the house of Peter Vaneman and asked to borrow money. Vaneman assented, but his wife [Elizabeth] remonstrated against the lending saying how difficult a matter it would be to recover the money. Vaneman still took a bond from John Phares who was to discharge the matter within one year. John Walker was a witness to the note, apparently poorly drafted, and had testified to this “at the former trial” (apparently on 7 September 1789) before he moved away from the Buffalo Hills.\textsuperscript{151}

Some bits of family history appear in the depositions. Seriah Stratton stated that John Phares’ first wife died late in the year 1778 and that Phares then lived “in the Allegania.” He married his “last” wife in April or May 1779 and moved about the same time to Thomas Wilmouth’s “place” in the Buffalo Hills. The depositions make it clear that Phares’ second wife Margaret was the widow of Wilmouth.\textsuperscript{152}

Seriah Stratton built his mill [at the Buffalo Hills?] in 1779 and Walker had been a customer of it before he moved away. Conrad Good had removed from the South Branch before 1780. John Phares sold a gray horse to John Burns [alias Byrne] for £1000 paper money (which would only have been worth about eight or nine pounds in hard money according to Stratton).\textsuperscript{153} Thomas Colleck [Collett] testified that he had come to see Phares at Wilmouth's plantation in the year 1779. On 10 August 1790 Jacob Conrad gave a deposition at his smithery that Phares was to repay the money after selling a [gray] horse.

On 17 August 1790 Andrew Johnson stated that John Phares had married his present wife eleven years ago and that the gray horse in question was her property before her marriage to Phares. On 19 August 1790 Robert Pharis of full age testified for his father John. John Smith testified earlier on 28 July 1790 that John Phares had lived in 1777 at the Buffalo Hills on the plantation of Margaret Willmoth there; James Patterson was a witness to Smith’s deposition. Phares’ debt was judged to be worth $50 or $60 [in the deflated currency] and Vaneman obtained a judgement for $30. John Phares signs with his mark; but most of the other depositions are signed with signatures.

\textsuperscript{150} There are several other small boxes of loose papers remaining in the basement of the Pendleton County Courthouse at Franklin. It would be a great service to historians if they could be filmed or abstracted. The depositions in the chancery suits are particularly valuable but the hasty penmanship by the clerk taking notes make them a considerable chore to decipher. Thus there is also in Envelope 6 the marriage bond in 1798 of Moses Thompson and Margaret Lewis, with Peter Conrad as bondsman. The name of the bride has been read elsewhere as Service but Lewis appears to be correct. Moses Thompson must be the man named in the will of Peter Veneman; since he apparently had been either a ward of Veneman’s, or perhaps raised by him. Thompson lived on Leading Creek soon after their marriage.

\textsuperscript{151} Elizabeth Skidmore testified verbally for John Phares on 7 September 1789 about this matter according to the order books. No written deposition from her is found in July or August 1790. She is said to have been a sister and Andrew Johnson a nephew of John Phares although there is no reason why this should be mentioned in the surviving depositions - - and it is not. Seriah Stratton and his wife Catherine later moved to Greenup County, Kentucky, in the company of two sons of Elizabeth Skidmore.

\textsuperscript{152} From records in Rockingham County we know that Thomas Wilmouth had died before 28 September 1778 when his probate was granted to his son Thomas Wilmouth, Junior. The Wilmouths (presumably Thomas, Junior) lived at one time above the mill of Joseph Skidmore on the Skidmore Mill Run at Ruddle. Either Thomas Wilmouth, Senior or Junior, had married Agnes Wait on 16 January 1762 at the Peaked Mountain and Cook's Creek Presbyterian Church.\textsuperscript{153} This was during the American Revolution when the currency was proverbially “not worth a Continental.” The coinage of any country was greatly preferred.

JOHN SKIDMORE AND HIS COMPANIES AT THE BATTLE OF POINT PLEASANT IN 1774, AND AT FORT HINCKEL IN JUNE 1775.

The Romans had a term for it: Nil desperandum. “Do not despair” should be a motto always kept in mind by the family historian. For years the Hinkle family had a largely hearsay account about a “Fort Hinckel” in the Germany Valley near Riverton in what became Pendleton County, [West] Virginia in 1787. The story was widely believed and the family put up a monument in 1936 about the fort near its presumptive site. However despite an intensive search of the written record by a highly qualified researcher no real proof of the tale could be found. Two earlier forts on the South Branch, Fort Upper Tract on 27 April 1758 and Fort Seybert on the next day, were destroyed and their occupants either killed or carried away by Shawnee Indians. Hinkle’s Fort was said to have been built in 1761-1762 at the expense of John Justus [Jost] Hinkle (1706-1778) to protect his family and retainers from the Shawnee. It offered the only defense for the settlers in what was then a very thinly populated and densely forested community. The recent discovery of a muster roll of the men who were actually at Fort Hinckel under Captain Skidmore from June to September of 1775 supplies, at long last, a definitive piece of evidence about the fort. The militia list turned up in private hands in a most unlikely place, written on a blank page of a French Bible belonging to Joseph Cheuvront who was one of Skidmore’s men formerly stationed there. This list is printed here as FIRST PART, 1775 intended to precede what I had published in 1998 about Captain Skidmore’s company enrolled a year earlier to fight the Indians at the Battle of Point Pleasant. It was fought in 1774 in the name of George III, but by local initiative, for the advancement of the royal colony in Virginia. It opened up the west for settlement, but in 1775 Lord Dunmore, the colonial governor, had fled and the American Revolution had begun. (WS)

FIRST PART, 1775

At the time of John Skidmore’s marriage to Polly Hinkle they settled near Mud Lick on the North Fork of the South Branch of the Potomac about two miles from the Mouth of the Seneca. This was not far from Fort Hinkle near Riverton in Pendleton County, Virginia which had been built by his father-in-law “Jost” Hinkle and his family during the French and Indian War. Hinkle’s stockade was never attacked but with the coming of the Revolution the British first agitated the Indians, and then armed them, and alarms were numerous all over on the frontier.

The function of the militia in the western counties of Virginia was largely defensive. They were given the job of protecting the frontier from the Indians (now allied with the British) freeing the Continental Army for more important business elsewhere. In 1774 Captain Skidmore had been wounded twice at Point Pleasant which Several hundred yards west of this marker about the year 1761-1762 John Justice Henkel, Sr. built a block house as a home for his family and a protection against the Indians. It became a nucleus for a colonial frontier fort after used by Continental forces during the Revolution and was called Hinkel’s fort.* Later the state put up a historical marker at a “scenic overview” of Germany Valley which also remembers the fort.

155 Mary Harter (1911-1992), a fellow of the American Society of Genealogists, and the founder and editor (with a great many other accomplishments) of the Henkel Genealogical Bulletin. I know that she would be delighted to learn something definitive has turned up about the fort which would now entitle hundreds of living descendants of Jost Hinkle, styled the Revolutionary “commander” of the fort, eligible to join patriotic societies in his right.

156 The date when it was built seems very likely but is still unproven. I have since found that the fort was still offering protection to the neighborhood as late as 1781 when John McGlaughlin stated in his application for a Federal pension that he was then stationed there. The garrison was now under the command of Captain William Smith, presumably the same William Smith who had been a private under Captain Skidmore in 1775.

157 Later he built a substantial brick house on the South Branch of the Potomac, unfortunately torn down by a later owner and replaced by a large frame Victorian house which still survives.
had subdued the Indians for the moment. Recovered, he was the logical choice to protect the fort that had been built by his wife’s father in Germany Valley.

Cheuvront was probably appointed by Skidmore as his company clerk on this tour of duty, probably in the expectation that they would eventually be paid by a new government for their service. Elsewhere I have pointed out how these company clerks in 1774 had a problem setting down the names of the men who served with them. The Germans clerks (lately arrived from up the Rhine in the German Palatine) had trouble setting down the Scotch-Irish names for what was the largest ethnic block of settlers in the Virginia Valley. The reverse was true and the clerk at Fort Hinkle added still another dimension, for Joseph Louis Cheuvront was a Francophone born 2 February 1757 in Strasbourg, France. He was 15 when he and his first cousin Peter Challe went to England to learn the craft of smithery. Cheuvront clearly had difficulties in understanding both the Germans who served in the company, as well as the accent of the Scotch-Irish which would have been noticeably different from English he had heard spoken as a boy in London.

Moses Ellsworth, another son-in-law of Jost Jinkle, is said to have paid the captain of the Virginia for the Cheuvront and Challe passages, undoubtedly as indentured servants, to America on his ship which left London late in December 1773 and had arrived in Virginia by February 1774. Their terms of service for an agreed number of years were said to have been purchased by John Bennett representing Ellsworth, and they were taken to the fort to work as blacksmiths. Jacob Challe, reportedly an elder brother of Peter Challe, was also there by 1775 when Cheuvront recorded the following muster-roll in his huge French Bible.

After what was seemingly a peaceful tour of duty at the fort in 1775 Cheuvront married his first wife Elizabeth Elsworth in January 1777. He enrolled as a private in the Virginia line in April 1780, and was present at Yorktown on 17 October 1781 when the war ended with the surrender of Cornwallis. Cheuvront never 159 He is said to have known seven languages, clearly an exaggeration, but he certainly did have a better education than many of the other men in the company.

160 This was a large lectern Bible: Le Nouveau Testament de Nostre Seigneur Jesus-Christ (the Mons edition, dated 1672), where Cheuvront recorded the muster roll. This edition of the French Bible was printed at Mons in modern Belgium, and five thousand copies are said to have been sold in the six months after its publication. In 1998 I did biographies of the men who were with Captain Skidmore at Point Pleasant in 1774 who could be traced. I can not to do this for the men listed in Cheuvront’s Bible in 1775, but see my notes on Isaac Henkle, William Bennett, and Arthur Johnson elsewhere who had also served earlier under Captain Skidmore in 1774.

applied for a Federal pension for his service but he did leave a memo that said: “In the year 1781 at the siege of Yorktown God delivered me from all tormenting fear, and gave me two seals to my ministry.”

In 1813 Isaac Robbins wrote to Francis Asbury, the famous Methodist bishop, that he dated his turning to God in the fall of the year that Cornwallis was taken “through the instrumentality of Brother Joseph Cheuvront who used to carry a Bible in his pocket and read to him and converse with him pertaining to the kingdom of God.”

Cheuvront was ordained into the Methodist ministry at the Conference held Uniontown, Pennsylvania in 1790. He had joined the Baltimore Conference by 1800 and is recorded there as serving two parishes in northern Virginia and Ohio. He died testate on 5 March 1832 and was buried in the New Bethel Church Cemetery at Good Hope in Harrison County, West Virginia.

As for Captain Skidmore, several of the men who served still later under him during the Revolution applied for Federal pensions in their old age. Elsewhere in the Appendix I have noticed two further engagements in 1777 and 1779 when Captain Skidmore was called out. The statements made by the men on these expeditions to support their claims are our best source of information on the action that he saw during the rest of the war. While no muster roll survives, the paymaster at the new capital at Richmond lists a sum of over £350 as having been sent to Captain Skidmore in 1777 to pay his men.

Let us end these notes with the cautionary Nil Desperandum, and then look, for example, at the shabby, dusty old foreign language Bibles long forgotten in local historical societies.

APPENDIX, PART 1774

Captain John Skidmore, the son of Joseph and Agnes (Caldwell) Skidmore, was born on 10 June 1736 in Murderkill Hundred, Kent County, Delaware, and died on 12 October 1809 in Pendleton County, (West) Virginia, at the age of 73. He married Mary Magdalena (Polly), the daughter of John Justus and Mary Magdalena (Eschmann) Henckel, on 2 March 1762 at the Peak Mountain and Cook’s Creek Presbyterian Church in Rockingham County. They are buried on a hill overlooking the site of their home about two miles down the South Branch of the Potomac from Ruddle on the east side of Route 220. His grave has been marked with a new stone by the West Virginia Hills Chapter of the Daughters of the American Colonists, who dedicated it to his memory on 2 August 1969.

After the defeat of Braddock’s army in 1755 the militia of Augusta, Frederick, and Hampshire Counties were called out to protect the border. John Skidmore and his two older brothers all served in the French and Indian War, and the expenditures read into the minutes of the House of Delegates show that the Skidmores were paid 7sh each for their service in the company commanded by Captain Abraham Smith. On 19 August 1767 he was appointed as a Captain in the same Augusta County Militia with Peter Veneman as his Lieutenant.

His company was called out in 1774 and served with distinction at the Battle of Point Pleasant, the chief event in what is now called Dunmore’s War. The call to arms went out in late July and about five weeks were spent in filling out the companies and in securing provisions. Henry Mauk, one of the first to be recruited by Captain Skidmore, reported that he was put to work making pack saddles to carry the supplies of the army across the mountains. Skidmore’s company left what is now Pendleton County on 1 August 1774 and arrived at Camp Union (now Lewisburg, West Virginia) on the 10th where they rendezvoused with other units from Botetourt and Fincastle Counties. On 22 September 1774 the army under Colonel Andrew Lewis had advanced to what is now Charleston where they halted long enough to build canoes to float their supplies down the Kanawha River. A return taken of the Augusta companies at a camp on the Elk River on 27 September 1774 shows that Captain Skidmore’s company consisting of himself, Lieutenant Robert Davis, Ensign Nicholas Harpole, three Sergeants, and 32 rank and file were all fit for duty. On the 30th they resumed the march up the Kanawha and arrived on October 6th at a point on the Ohio River, now Point Pleasant, where they camped for the night.

162 This was clearly another smaller Bible (or New Testament) in English.

163 The inflated sum of £350 must be discounted for this was the period when paper money was “not worth a Continental.”

164 This Appendix was written in 1998 and first published as “Captain John Skidmore and his company of South Branch Men at the Battle of Point Pleasant, 1774” in the Allegheny Regional Ancestors, vol. 7, no. 4 (Winter 1998) 92-106. [Jeff Carr, an authority on Pendleton County families, has recently kindly updated a part of what I wrote in 1998.]

165 This biographical material on Captain John Skidmore is taken from my earlier book Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore), 1605-1684, of Westerleigh, Gloucestershire, and Fairfield, Connecticut; his ancestors and descendants to the ninth generation. A completely revised and greatly enlarged third edition will now be found at www.skidmorefamilyhistory.com. (LM).

166 Reuben Gold Thwaites and Louise Phelps Kellogg, Documentary History of Dunmore’s War 1774 (Madison, Wisconsin, 1903), 415-6.
Early in the morning of October 10th two men came running into camp with the intelligence that a large party of Indians was scarcely two miles up the Ohio. The drums beat the sleepy army to arms and 300 of the men were divided into two columns and paraded out to meet the enemy. The two lines marched about 200 yards apart and had only advanced about half a mile when the Indians attacked. The men broke ranks and took shelter behind the trees. Colonel Charles Lewis (in a bright red waistcoat) fell mortally wounded almost at once. Reinforcements were sent from the camp and the engagement wore down to a series of skirmishes that lasted the rest of the day.

Eventually the company of Captain Skidmore was pocketed in between the Ohio and Kanawha Rivers and Crooked Creek with no apparent avenue of escape. Late in life Captain John Skidmore told his young grandson Archibald Taylor (1795-1889) of the considerable gallantry of Captain Mathew Arbuckle which was perhaps the turning point of the battle. Towards sunset Arbuckle with volunteers from the field jumped Crooked Creek and keeping under the high bank of the Kanawha marched single file to the rear of the Indians. Just before Arbuckle was in position Captain Skidmore was shot a second time and his company gave way. He called to them that he was not dead and to stand firm. As his men made a charge to secure him the flanking detail of Arbuckle opened fire and the Indians retreated. Soon afterwards the Indians made a final retreat across the Ohio taking their dead and wounded with them. The Virginians had lost 46 dead and 80 wounded according to the best received estimate.

News of the victory at Point Pleasant did not reach Williamsburg for almost a month. A dispatch from the camp was published in the Virginia Gazette on 10 November 1774 and it lists Captain Skidmore among the wounded. He was hit by two bullets that day. The first passed through the calf of his leg and did no great harm. The second, late in the day, hit him in the hip and passed through his body missing any vital organ. It lodged in his clothes on the other side; “caught in the waistband of his pants” as it was later put by Billie Thompson.

According to the pension application of Adam Harpole the company went on from Point Pleasant to a place on the west side of the Scioto River about 15 miles north of Chillicothe, Ohio, where peace was made with the Indians. They were then marched home, after a tour of what he recalled as “something more than three months.” He also notes that the company did not receive any written discharges. However a payroll does survive for the company which lists the time (which varies from 91 to 134 days) that each man had served.\(^{167}\) Captain John Skidmore and Lieutenant Robert Davis served the longest -- 134 days each. John Skidmore (with most of the other Captains who saw combat) was paid at the rate of 7sh 6d by the day for a total of £50.5sh.0d.

Several of the men who served under Captain John Skidmore at Point Pleasant enlisted soon after in the Revolutionary army. A few of them survived to file for pensions as old men, particularly after the Pension Act of 1832 was passed. Their applications are the best source of information that we have on the action which his company saw during that war. John Mace (who was not at Point Pleasant) lived later in Lewis County and in the state of Ohio. He stated that he was enrolled in May 1777 under Captain Skidmore to go to the relief of the settlers in the Tygart Valley. Isaac Hinkle, who had been at Point Pleasant in the company commanded by his brother-in-law, was now in 1777 his Lieutenant while Samuel Skidmore (a younger brother of the Captain) was the company’s Ensign. According to Mace the company was marched to Westfall’s Fort in the Tygart Valley where they were based while spying and ranging throughout the West Augusta area. They spent their time there searching for Indians and buying beef for the regular army who were pursuing the British elsewhere. No muster roll survives for this company, although the paymaster at the new capital at Richmond lists a sum of over £350 as having been sent in 1777 to Captain Skidmore to pay his men in the Greenbrier Militia.\(^{168}\) John Hagle, who was living in Lewis County when he applied for a pension in 1832, says that he was enrolled as an Indian spy

I am indebted to Donna Kaminsky of Overland Park, Kansas, for a transcript of Captain Skidmore’s company from the microfilm and several useful comments on the participants named there. In addition to the men who went to Point Pleasant there are on the same reel payments made to persons who contributed either supplies or services to the various companies. Among them is a payment of £1.17.2 for a claim for sundry supplies made by his mother Ann Skidmore. The margin notes that this sum was “pd JS,” who was presumably to then reimburse his mother. She probably contributed cornmeal for diets for his men from the family mill on Skidmore Mill Run above Ruddle.

\(^{168}\) John Skidmore (almost as great a land speculator as his father) entered a small claim in the Tygart Valley for 200 acres adjoining the land of John Lambert, which he later assigned to Heinrich Carlock who in turn assigned it to Daniel Westfall. It was confirmed to Westfall by the Land Commissioners on 25 March 1780.
under Captain Skidmore on 1 March 1779 and was discharged at Christmas, this being “the periods between which experience had taught them to fear visits from the savage foe.”

During the lull following Burgoyne’s surrender the new county of Rockingham was formed out of Augusta. Captain Skidmore lived within the boundaries of the new county, and was appointed by Governor Patrick Henry to serve as one of first Gentlemen Justices for Rockingham County. He was later nominated by the Court as High Sheriff and appointed as Major in the Rockingham Militia. However before his signed commission as Major was returned from Richmond, a formality, he had resigned on 25 May 1778 and William Nalle (who had also served as a Captain at Point Pleasant) was appointed in his place.

The following officers and men served under him at Point Pleasant, and to their names we have appended the number of days they served, their per diem rate, and the total payment they received for their service on the expedition:

Robert Davis [Lieutenant], was paid at the rate of 6sh, for which he eventually received £40.4sh.0d. Davis, who was of Welsh extraction, is said to have come with his family to the Virginia frontier from North Carolina. He settled just north of Brandywine in what is now Pendleton County on land purchased from Mathew Patton. He married Sarah, a daughter of Roger and Hannah (Smith) Dyer and previously the widow of Henry Horse [Haas, Hawes] on 8 September 1763. He entered a claim on 18 January 1775 for goods and services supplied for the expedition to Point Pleasant. Davis became one of the area’s most useful citizens. He was named a Captain in the militia at the Rockingham Court of 23 March 1779, and was later a Major in the Continental Line. He served Rockingham County as Sheriff, and was one of the eleven original justices as well as the first Sheriff of Pendleton County on its formation in 1788. He later represented Pendleton County in the Virginia House of Delegates in 1793 and again in 1796. He had died before 1 December 1818 when his will was proven, and he and his wife are buried in a family cemetery near Brandywine. The South Branch Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution dedicated a marker there to his memory in 1982.

Nicholas Harpole [Ensign]. He earned £14.12sh.6d (at 2sh 6d by the day) for 117 days of service. He was born at Epfenbach in Germany about 1735 and arrived at Philadelphia on the Billander Thistle in 1738 at the listed age of eight in the family of Anna Barbara Herboldt. He and his younger brother Adam settled in what is now Pendleton County. Nicholas was appointed an Ensign in the militia at the Augusta Court on 17 August 1773. He and his first wife Elizabeth (probably the mother of his ten children) lived on North Mill Creek in what is now Hardy County where he farmed 195 acres. Nicholas Harpole had been involved about 1768 (during an interval of peace) in the savage murder of three friendly Indians who were traveling down the South Branch Valley on their way north. They were pursued down the valley by a party of white men that included Henry Judy (1744-1824), Andrew Skidmore (1750-1827), and a man named Cowan. They caught up with the Indians on Mill Creek and killed all three of them. The white men who committed the murders were apprehended and jailed, but about 200 of their neighbors raised a party to storm the jail and they were released

Nothing else is presently known about an expedition by Captain Skidmore’s company in 1779 and Hagle may have been confused about the date. Hagle (who was born in 1750 at Schuykill in Pennsylvania) had been earlier at Point Pleasant under Captain John Lewis and Lieutenant William White. He stated that he “started from the part of Virginia which is now Randolph County under Lt. William White as a drafted militia man, [and] was Marched to Point Pleasant.”

Sarah and her brother James Dyer had been taken prisoners by the Shawnee after the massacre at Fort Seybert in 1758 (where their father had been killed).

and never brought to trial.\textsuperscript{179} Kercheval says that one of the prisoners (who he did not name) was later a Captain in the militia at Point Pleasant -- which may have been a reference to Harpole.\textsuperscript{180} In happier times he married soon after 15 August 1775 [Anna] Margaret Burgstaller, the young widow of George Dice, Senior, as his second wife.\textsuperscript{181} He was a patriot during the Revolution that followed soon after as his public service claim shows.\textsuperscript{182} He is said to have died before 2 September 1806,\textsuperscript{183} although his estate was not appraised until 7 December 1807. The vendue sale bill is dated 5 April 1808, when the widow was one of the purchasers.\textsuperscript{184}

Roger Pattun [Patton] [Ensign]. He was paid £16.7sh.6d (at 2sh 6d) for 131 days. He was born in 1748, a son of Mathew and Esther (Dyer) Patton and a namesake of his grandfather Roger Dyer who had been killed at Fort Seybert. Mathew Patton, his father, is said to have been born in 1730 in Northern Ireland at Newton Limavady, County Derry, and to have died on 3 November 1803 at Sycamore near Winchester, Frederick County, Virginia. Roger was clearly one of the very first men recruited for Captain Skidmore’s company, no doubt by his uncle Lieutenant Robert Davis. He is last noticed in Virginia at Peter Hull’s vendue sale on 16 August 1780,\textsuperscript{185} and signed a petition before 1 June 1782 in Kentucky. He was taxed in 1790 in Jessamine (then Fayette) County, Kentucky, where he lived at or near Steals Landing at the mouth of Stone Lick.\textsuperscript{186} He died there (apparently a widower) before February 1812 when his will (dated 10 November 1811) was brought into the Jessamine court and proved.\textsuperscript{187}

William Bennett. He was paid £9.16sh.6d for 131 days. Jeff Carr, who has made a diligent effort to untangle the Bennett families in Pendleton County, believes that this William may have been the unnamed (and unmarried) second tithable living with John Bennett in 1777.\textsuperscript{188} He appears to have been taxed separately in 1782, and then disappears. If we pick and choose carefully among the later records mentioning William Bennets he appears to have been the man of his name who drowned during the American Revolution. This William and James Lambert served together in the war, and when Lambert later applied for a pension he stated that William Bennet had drowned with Lambert’s discharge in his possession. Lambert’s pension application shows that he went with Captain Skidmore to the relief of the settlers in the Tygart Valley in 1777:

> “The first of June 1774, he volunteered for three months and served against the Indians under Col. [Andrew] Lewis, Major [Gawin] Hamilton, Capt. [John] Skidmore, Lieu. [Ralph] Stewart, and Ensign William White, First Sergeant James Stewart a brother to Lieu. Col. Stewart, and marched from Wilson’s Station which was situated in the Tiger Valley on the Monongehaly River to the mouth of the Kenhawa River where he was in a severe engagement with the Indians. About three hundred of the whites were killed and wounded, but how many of the Indians could not be ascertained as the warriors in order to save the scalps of the fallen, would drag them to the Ohio River and throw them into the stream.”

\textsuperscript{179} Samuel Kercheval, A History of the Valley of Virginia (3rd edition, Woodstock, Virginia, 1902) 104-5, who had his account of the incident from the son of one of the men in the rescue party. Alexander Scott Withers, Chronicles of Border Warfare (Revised edition, Baltimore, Maryland, 1980) 135-6, adds a few details. He says that only Judy was apprehended and jailed.

\textsuperscript{180} See Freeman H. Hart, The Valley of Virginia in the American Revolution, 1763-1789 (Chapel Hill, N.C., 1942), 78-9. The colonial government made an effort to control what were called these “villainous bloody minded rascals” after a similar incident in 1765, but the frontier courts could do little or nothing to enforce the law. It is also possible that Kercheval confused Andrew Skidmore (one of the bloody minded rascals) with his older brother Captain John.

\textsuperscript{181} Chalkley, III, 141. Johann George Theiss (Dice) and Margaret Burgstaller were married on 7 March 1755 at Tulpheckon in Berks County, Pennsylvania. Margaret Dice, the administratrix of her husband, was still a widow on 15 August 1775 when she settled the will of her late husband. Three days later (on 18 August 1775) Nicholas Harpole was also at court to enter a claim for supplies or services made for the expedition to Point Pleasant.

The position of John Bennett on this list of the tithables in Captain John Skidmore’s company is important, for he is surrounded by a good many of the familiar South Branch names that filled out the company at Point Pleasant. See also “Corrected Errors” by Jeff Carr in the ARA, vol. 6, no. 4 (Winter 1997) 94.
James Lambert’s name does not appear on Captain Skidmore’s payroll for Point Pleasant, and this statement can not be explained. It is not likely that he invented service in Dunmore’s War, since this did not qualify him for credit under the Pension Act of 1832.\(^{189}\)

Thomas Norton. He was paid £8.3sh.6d for 109 days. A poor man, he is on the list of Augusta County men (noticed elsewhere) taxed as a tithables in 1777 but with no land.\(^{190}\) He had died before 26 November 1781 when Peter Veneman came to the Rockingham Court and obtained an order that the churchwardens bind out Norton’s daughter Sarah (then aged 4 1/2) to him until she came of age. Norton also left an unnamed wife and other children “destitute of the means of subsistence.”\(^{191}\)

Thomas Herrott [Herold]. He was paid £16.7sh.6d 131 days. Nothing has been learned of this man either before or after the battle. [He was not related to the Harholt family of Pendleton County.]

John Wyat. He was paid £16.7sh.6d for 131 days. John Wyat was a Pendleton County man with probable roots in what is now Greene (then Orange) County, Virginia. In October 1762 “John Wyatt apprenticed himself to James Griffin to learn the mystery of a cooper, from now until he arrives at the age of 21.”\(^{192}\) He was probably then about the age of 14, but was another man in Captain Skidmore’s company who did not survive to old age. He was dead before January 1790 in Pendleton County when his son John Wyat [Junior], called “a poor boy” was bound to James Patterson by the Overseers of the Poor. Samuel Wyat, John’s younger brother, had Thomas Collett appointed as his guardian in September 1794, and their brother Edmond Wyatt later married Collett’s daughter Mary. In 1806 Edmond, William, John and Samuel were named as plaintiffs in a land title dispute where they were identified as the sons of John Wyat, deceased.\(^{193}\)

Henry Mauch [Mauk]. Paid £17.7sh.6d for 131 days. He was born (according to his own statement) in 1761 most likely in Shenandoah County, but enlisted in Augusta County in the Indian War of 1774 apparently at the age of 13.\(^{194}\) According to his pension application he was put by Captain Skidmore to making pack saddles to carry supplies. He went about four or five years after Point Pleasant to what is now Sullivan County, Tennessee (then North Carolina) where he enlisted in 1780 in the North Carolina Line. He lived on the Holston River where he built a fish trap that provided him with a living for a time, but it was demolished after an act of the Tennessee legislature required that thirty feet be left in the current of rivers for the passage of boats. On 2 November 1806 the citizens of Sullivan County petitioned that an exception to the law be made “to bennefit the neighbourhood adjacent unto the same place where the old trap stood which would be of Great utility to that Part of the Community.”\(^{195}\) Henry Mauck applied for a pension in Sullivan County on 22 August 1832 at the age of 71, and presumably died there.\(^{196}\)

\(^{189}\) Little, II, 1999. Lambert (1758-1847) was born near Hagerstown, Maryland, and moved in 1814 to Dearborn County, Indiana, where he applied for a pension in November 1841. I am greatly indebted to Jeff Carr for this extract from his pension file. It seems likely that he was a son of the John Lambert who had made an entry next to John Skidmore in the Tygart Valley noticed earlier. Captain Ralph Stewart also commanded a company of Randolph County men at Point Pleasant in 1774, but James Lambert’s name does not appear on the payroll of his company. Lambert says that he lived during the Revolution in Rockingham County, so it is likely that he served under Gawn Hamilton who was not recorded as Major there until 29 May 1781. Hamilton (who had married Margaret Skidmore, a sister of Captain Skidmore) did a tour of duty under General Muhlenberg at Norfolk in 1781, and it seems likely that Lambert was at Norfolk with him.

\(^{190}\) Thomas Blizard, Thomas Hicks, George Couger (375 acres), Posley Stone, Andrew Full [misread as Tule] (50 acres), Robert Davis (297 acres), Michael Houver, John Smith, George Richard, Henry Make, Nicholas Judy, John Wiet, and Arthur Johnston also appear on the same list as tithables in 1777 without land (except as noted).

\(^{191}\) Constance Levinson and Louise C. Levinson, Rockingham County, Virginia, Minute Book 1778-1792. (Part I, 1778-1786), 95. Sarah Norton survived to adulthood and was remembered in a deed of gift from Peter Veneman shortly before his death. (Pendleton County Deed Book 5, page 85).

\(^{192}\) Orange County Deed Book 14, page 266. Jeff Carr has found that James Griffin, Wyatt’s master, lived in western part of Orange County which is now Greene. Griffin was a familiar of Charles and James Walker and of John Warner (who married secondly Anne Walker) all to be noticed later. Peter Ferrell married Jane Whyatt in 1783, and was one of the defendants in a later dispute over boundaries where John Wyatt’s sons were the plaintiffs.

Thomas McCollick [Collett]. Paid £16.7sh.6d for 131 days.\textsuperscript{197} He is said (on no known evidence) to have been born about 1760, but if this is so he was considerably younger than his wife. How he arrived in Pendleton County is unknown, but he may have come from what is now Greene County, Virginia. His Pendleton County neighbors John Warner, Thomas Wilmot, and Samuel Richards all seemingly came from Greene (then Orange) County.\textsuperscript{198} Thomas is said to have had a brother George Collett who was captured and raised by the Indians, and who was killed while fighting with them at Point Pleasant. Thomas Collett is reported to have recognized his brother’s body when looking at the dead left on the battlefield.\textsuperscript{199} He married Margaret Bartlett, an illegitimate daughter of Mary Conrad. Margaret Collett was an eventual heir to her grandfather Jacob Conrad, a blacksmith at Ruddle.\textsuperscript{200} The Colletts seemingly prospered, and on 30 March 1782 he filed a public service claim (as Thomas Collick) with the Rockingham Court for driving packhorses.\textsuperscript{201} In 1788 he was taxed on seven horses and was living in the Buffalo Hills.\textsuperscript{202} The Colletts stayed there until 3 October 1804 when they sold four tracts (apparently all their holdings) to Oliver McCoy, and moved to Beverly in Randolph County.\textsuperscript{203} On 28 October 1816 Thomas Collett, Senior, having given bond, was licensed to celebrate the rites of matrimony in the county.\textsuperscript{204} On 27 August 1818 he gave a deposition for Andrew Scidmore in which he stated:

“that he [Collett] was at pnt Plesant under the command of Connl. Andrew Lewis in the old Indian war and that he the said Andrew Skidmore was there in the Service under him [i.e., Lewis] and that he the said Skidmore was wounded there in the Battel.”

Collett is said to have died on 27 June 1823 according to his D.A.R. marker in the Beverly Cemetery.\textsuperscript{205}

John Akin [Agin]. He was paid £13.7sh.6d. for 131 days. Not certainly identified, but he is probably the John Akin taxed in Greenbrier County (that part now Monroe).\textsuperscript{206} He was taxed as John Agen in Monroe County in 1800.

Arthur Johnson, [Junior]. Paid £13.7sh.6d. for 131 days. He was born about 1750, the youngest son of Arthur and Margaret (Phares) Johnson, Senior, who lived near Dayton in Rockingham County.\textsuperscript{207} Johnson married Elizabeth Harrison, and they settled on the North Fork of the South Branch near his older brother Andrew Johnson and the Hinkles, Greggs, and Evermans. He appears on the Personal Property Tax Lists of Rockingham County from 1782 to 1787, but is gone in 1788. The Johnsons immediately appear thereafter in Harrison County, Virginia, where they made their home on the West Fork of the Monongahela east of \textsuperscript{197} Since these notes were written David Armstrong has published “Thomas Collett Sr. of Pendleton and Randolph County” in the ARA, vol. 7, no. 2 (Summer 1998) 45-51.

\textsuperscript{198} Thomas Collett is mentioned in the loose papers that survive in a suit Phares vs. Veneman adds some genealogical detail about these people: John Walker (who had moved away from Pendleton by 1790) had been a witness to the note given by John Phares to Peter Veneman in 1777 promising to repay a loan. Phares defaulted and this generated a number of depositions. Thomas Wilmot, Senior, died in 1778 and his widow Margaret married John Phares as his second wife. Phares then moved in with the widow Wilmot, and Thomas Collett testified that he had gone to Wilmot’s plantation to see Phares in 1779. Jacob Conrad gave a deposition on 10 August 1790 at his smithery that Phares had promised to repay the loan to Veneman after he sold a grey horse belonging to Margaret, but did not do so. John Smith, apparently the man of his name in Captain Skidmore’s company noticed later, also testified on 17 August 1790 that John Phares had lived in 1777 at the Buffalo Hills on the plantation belonging to Margaret Wilmot. (Extracted from Envelope No. 3 of loose papers from the Pendleton County Court Records given by H. M. Calhoun to West Virginia Valley Records, vol. 5, no. 2 (Summer 1996) 2-10.

\textsuperscript{200} Jeff Carr points out that Margaret was old enough to partake of communion in 1767, and that her daughter Mary (wife of Edmond Wyatt) was born about 1770-5. This would put the indiscretion of Mary Conrad with Bartlett back in the Berks–Lancaster Counties area of Pennsylvania where the Conrads lived until about 1763. Jacob Conrad’s will was proved on 19 March 1776. (Chalkley, III, 143)

\textsuperscript{204} See Hu Maxwell, History of Randolph County, West Virginia (Morgantown, 1898) 313. This may be a confusion with his son, Thomas Collett, Junior (1788-1870), who was a clergyman. Clarksburg. He appears on the tax lists there until 1807, by which time they had gone with the Cutlers (who had married two of their children) to what is now Xenia Township, Greene County, Ohio. They went on to Spencer and Monroe Counties in Indiana, and finally to Edgar County, Illinois. Arthur Johnson died there in March 1823. His wife Elizabeth (Harrison) Johnson survived until August or September of 1830 when she died at the reputed age of 88 years. They are buried on a farm belonging to their son east of Grand View in Edgar County.208

Adam Mallow. Paid £9.15sh.0d for 130 days. He was born on 6 October 1751, the son of Johann Michael and Anna Margaret (___) Mallow. They arrived at Philadelphia on the Phoenix in 1749 coming from Griesbach in Alsace.209 They lived briefly at or near Marion Township, Berks County, Pennsylvania, and then went about 1753 to Mallow’s Run near Upper Tract in Pendleton County. He served there in the French and Indian War.210 Mrs. Mallow and two of her children were captured by the Shawnee Indians when they destroyed Fort Upper Tract in 1758, and were marched to the Ohio country. When an infant daughter carried in her mother’s arms started to cry the Indians forced her to move on after leaving the child on a rock. The little girl was never seen again. Mrs. Mallow returned home after two or three years, but the young Adam remained with the Indians for about six years until a treaty was arranged for the return of the prisoners.211 On his return Adam Mallow married Sarah (born 16 May 1753, died 2 April 1850), a daughter of Lewis and Eva (___) Bush of Pendleton County.212 They had moved before 1810 to Concord Township, Ross County, Ohio, where Adam Mallow (remembered as a ranger and scout in the Virginia militia) died on 27 November 1841 at the age of 90—presumably the last survivor of Captain Skidmore’s company.213

Cornelius Bryant. Paid £9.12sh.0d for 128 days. He was born in 1749, a son of Cornelius and Ann (___) Bryant.214 This name is quite uncommon and he may have been related to the Cornelius Briant of Springfield Township, Hamilton County, Ohio, whose will was filed on 7 August 1815. His two executors were Sarah Briant (the widow) and John McGilliard. His wife Sarah Moore (who he had married on 30 September 1809 in Butler County, Ohio) was the only beneficiary mentioned in the will.215

Henry Jordan. He was paid £9.12sh.0d for 128 days. He was born about 1760, and was paid after Point Pleasant for his subsequent service at Pittsburgh. He went next into the Fifth Virginia Continental Line.216 He was probably the son of John Jourdan, Senior, who acquired land on the Bullpasture in 1768, and again it is likely (but unproven) that he was the Henry Jordan (presumably from what is now Highland County, Virginia) who went with his wife Lydia Stone (born 1763) to Williamson County, Tennessee.217 He applied for a pension on 13 November 1818, and was enumerated there (over 45) in the 1820 census. He had died by 1823 in Williamson County when his probate was recorded.218

Abraham Hornback. Paid £9.12sh.0d for 128 days. He was probably born in 1758 on the South Branch in Hardy County, the son of Daniel Hornbeck. He remained with the army after Point Pleasant, and was later paid at Romney on 25 October 1775 for his service as a ranger under Captain James Parson.219 He enlisted in Hampshire County in the Eighth Virginia Continental Line, and later with Captain Zackquill Morgan’s Rifleman in Illinois. He went to Nelson County, Kentucky (probably in 1779), where he married Hannah Cleaver (then

As unlikely as this may seem the identification is certain since Michael Mallo is called “of Augusta County, Virginia” in the parish register. This useful reference was supplied by Glenn Huffman of Harrisonburg, Virginia.
212 Ludwig [Lewis] Bush was born on 2 July 1723 at Zazenhausen in Daisbach, Germany (Postal Code 74939), and died after 1799 in Fayette County, Ohio. He came on the Hope to Philadelphia in 1735 at the age of 12.

aged 19), on 3 April 1783 at the home of her father William Cleaver. He applied for a pension on 27 May 1819 in Spencer County, Indiana, where he died on 16 November 1834. After his death the widow applied on 19 September 1842 for a pension in his right. She was then aged 78 and died a few months later on 14 December 1842. For the Cleaver family see my notes on the company of Captain Jonas Friend.

John Smith. Paid £7.4sh.0d for 96 days. He is almost certainly the John Smith (there were two others of the name in the area) who lived in the Buffalo Hills next to Thomas Collett (q.v.), Thomas Wilmoth, and Peter Veneman. On 9 April 1787 he sold 98 acres of land to Samuel Richards between the land of Thomas Wilmott and Peter Venemon for £15. No wife (or her dower interest) is mentioned and it seems likely that he was then unmarried. He disappears from the personal property tax lists of Pendleton County about 1803, and presumably died unmarried and without the benefit of probate.

Patrick Sinnett. He was paid £7.4sh.0d for 96 days. He was born on 17 March 1752 in Ireland and came to America in 1773. He was at Point Pleasant and afterwards served in the Virginia Line. He settled after the war at Black Thorn in that part of Rockingham that became Pendleton County. In 1788 Pett Sanit was taxed on seven horses. He married Catherine, a daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (______) Hevener, Senior, of Shaver’s Run on 1 May 1783 in Pendleton County. He remained there until 1815 when all of his family except his eldest son moved to what is now Harrisville, Ritchie County. He applied for a pension on 18 March 1833 in Ritchie (then Wood) County, Virginia, where he died on 19 December 1850. His widow was living in Ritchie County on 13 August 1855 aged 86.

John Abygust [Arbogast]. Paid £7.2sh.6d for 95 days. He is said to have been born about 1762 in what is now Highland County, a son of Michael (1734-1812) and Christina (______) Arbogast who had come (it is said) from Cologne, Germany, in 1749 on board the Speedwell. He served under Captain Peter Hull in the 2nd Battalion of Augusta County Militia in 1779 together with several of his former comrades from Point Pleasant. He and Hannah Davis were married about 1788, and settled in Pendleton County. He died there near Circleville before 3 April 1821, the date of his probate in Pendleton County.

Robert Moore. Paid £8.15.6d for 117 days. Another very common name, but it seems likely that he is the Robert Moore living close to Roger Patton at Steeles Ferry near the mouth of Stone Lick in Fayette County, Kentucky, in 1787. There was a small colony of families from the South Branch there by this date.

George Cowger. Paid £8.15.6d for 117 days. He is said to have been a younger son of Michael Cowger who had settled on 900 acres in the Shenandoah Valley in 1753. He married Hannah, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Dyer) Hawes, and entered a claim on 18 August 1775 for goods or services supplied for the Point Pleasant expedition. He died before 6 November 1788 when his estate was appraised near Fort Seybert. His widow

[Jeff Carr thinks it more likely that George Cowger was the eldest son of Johan Cowger and Anna Barbara (Propst) Cowger who were married on 9 March 1742 on the Cohansie River in Salem or Cumberland Counties, New Jersey. She was a sister of Johan Michael Propst, a pioneer in Pendleton County. When some Moravian missionaries passed up the South Fork in Pendleton County in the late 1740s they noted in their diary that they had known Propst “back on the Cohansie.”

Hannah married Jacob Trimble (Trumbo) as her second husband before 7 March 1791 when her dower in Cowger’s land was laid off “to include the mansion house, the loom house, and the barn.”

Henry Swatley [Swadley]. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born, probably in Pennsylvania, about 1748, a son of Mark and Catherine (______) Swatley. He married Mary, a daughter of Valentine and Maria Catherine (Oberlin) Pence, in Pendleton County. He filed a public service claim for supplies in 1782, and in 1788 was taxed on 13 horses. He died before 2 December 1829, the day his will was proved in Pendleton County.

James Jones. He was paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He, or another man of the name, also served on the expedition to Point Pleasant with the Captain John Lewis whose company was raised largely in what is now the Tygarts River Valley and the present Highland County.

Andrew Full. Paid £6.16.6d for 91 days. He was on the South Fork in 1771, and appears to have been kin to an earlier man of his name who served with Michael Mallow in the French and Indian War. He also seems to have enjoyed the military life and is probably the man of this name later with Captain Zackquill Morgan in Illinois.

Postle [Sebastian] Stone. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was a son of Henry and Julianna (Andre) Stone. Henry Stein arrived on the Edinburgh at Philadelphia in 1748 from Hoppstädten in the Rhineland-Palatinate. He settled at Atolhoo in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, where he married his first wife on 4 February 1750. Their son John Sebastian was born on 28 March 1752. He was assessed after Point Pleasant as Posley (a frequent German corruption of Sebastian) Stone in 1777, and served with four of his former comrades from the battle there in Captain Hull’s company of Augusta County Militia in 1779. Sebastian married Catherine, a daughter of Sebastian and Catherine (Müller) Hoover about 1787, and was a brother-in-law of Michael Hoover next below. The Stones went to Woodford County, Kentucky, about 1789. He had died in Woodford County by 1809 when his estate was appraised.

Michael Hover [Hoover]. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born on the South Branch of the Potomac, a son of Sebastian Hoover, Senior and his wife Catherine (Müller) Hoover. His father (called Bossell Hoover) entered a claim in 1775 for provisions made for six men for eight days, and for £9 due for a horse supplied to the campaign to Point Pleasant. Michael Hover served in 1779 in the Virginia Continental Line. He married firstly Mary (______), and secondly Susanna, a daughter of George Simmons, Senior, on 30 November 1830; who was previously the widow of George Crumett. He applied for a pension on 7 November 1832 on the South Branch (after the new act was passed) and was then living about 12 miles from his birthplace. He died in 1842.

Thomas Blizzard. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born on 5 December 1747 a son of John and Ruth (______) Blizzard. He married Eleanor Rodney (born 1751) and they signed a quitclaim deed with the other children of John Blizzard on 13 November 1799. They moved to Ohio arriving there in November 1808. They are said to have come from Virginia in a company of ten families and followed the Zane Trace to Irville. From this point on they cut their way through the unbroken wilderness to what is now Jackson Township in Muskingum County. His family consisted at that time of eight children, three of whom were married.

daughters. He bought the southwest quarter of section 12 of Jackson Township, and the “old Blizzard homestead” descended to his son Colonel William Blizzard. Thomas Blizzard of [blank] County, Ohio, sold his lands in Pendleton County to Ferdinand Lair of Rockingham County on 2 February 1808 for £500. There is an interesting family story about Thomas sending his youngest son William, then about 15, back to Virginia on “the little gray mare” (who remembered the trail) to collect the money due from the sale. Thomas Blizzard died on 22 January 1833 in Muskingum County at the age of 85.

Goodleaf [Gottlieb] Gabbard. Paid £8.15sh.6d. Probably from Frederick County, Virginia, he had a survey as Cutlip Gabbard for 50 acres on the South Branch adjoining Henry Swadley on 21 October 1773. On 18 March 1778 he was owed a small debt from the estate of Mark, the father of his neighbor Henry Swadley. In 1779 Gottlieb acquired Adam Stroud’s preemption of 1400 acres between the Elk and Gauley Rivers, and came to an agreement with Cornelius Riddle of Augusta County to give Riddle half of the 1400 acres if he perfected the title to the whole of the tract. This land (including Gabbert’s 1400 acres) was surveyed on 6 June 1785. He was living in Augusta County, Virginia, in 1796. Gabbert died testate soon after leaving his lands to his nephews John and Michael Gabbert who were both enumerated in 1810 in Greenbrier County.

Thomas Hicks. Paid £6.16.6d for 91 days. He was apparently from Greene -- then Orange County, Virginia, where he is first noticed in the court minutes in 1754. He did not own any land there, nor does he appear as a witness to any deeds or wills. In November 1771 Andrew Sheperd & Company sued Samuel Richards, but the county recorder notes that “The deft. being returned no Inhabitant it abates.” This probably dates his removal to what is now Pendleton County where he arrived as an older married man. On 26 May 1783 the Rockingham Court ordered that Samuel Richards be exempted from the county levy on account of his age and infirmity. He was living in 1788 in the Buffalo Hills, where he is found as Sammeywell Richards with only two horses. His will is dated 1 February 1798 in Pendleton County, and proved there on 1 May of the same year. He left his estate to his wife Rachel, and at her death to John Smith, Senior, “now living with me.” Then at Smith’s death (who was presumably a bachelor) his estate was to go to Mary [formerly Warner], wife of Jeremiah Howell and the heirs of her body. Jeremiah Howell was appointed administrator with the will annexed at Smith’s death (who was presumably a bachelor). He was survived by, with others, a youngest son Morrill Hicks.

Samuel Richard. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 1744 in Bedford County, Virginia, and married Elizabeth, a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Davis) Morral on 4 January 1781 in Campbell County, Virginia. Their eldest son John Hicks was born on 17 April 1783 in Hampshire County, and Thomas was taxed in 1787 in Hardy County. He died after February 1829 in Shelby County, Kentucky.

George Fults [Junior]. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born on 17 December 1753, and christened on Christmas day at the Christ [Tulpehocken] Lutheran Church at Stochsburg, Berks County, Pennsylvania. He was the eldest son of George and Catherine Barbara (Jacke) Fults [Foltz, Voltz] who came

Adam Harpole [Junior]. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born in 1755, the son of Adam Harpole, Senior, by his first wife Margaret (______). Adam, Senior married his second wife Sarah Hoogeteelng (who was previously the widow of Johannes Bogaert and Henry Thorn).\textsuperscript{261} After Point Pleasant he volunteered in 1777 in Captain Skidmore’s company again, and was “stationed in the Tiger’s Valley to guard against the Indians.” He was later enlisted in the Virginia militia in Hampshire County in 1781 and served two months in this tour. He had a written discharge at this time, but it was lost when his house burned. He lived after the war in Pendleton County, but moved in 1792 to Sumner County, Tennessee, and in 1801 to Wilson County, Tennessee.\textsuperscript{262} He was enumerated there over 45 in the 1820 census. He applied for a pension on 28 September 1832 when he stated that he had no written record of his birth but thought that he was then aged 77. Adam Harpale, “a soldier of the revolutionary war,” died a few days before 24 January 1838 according to a brief obituary in the Nashville Daily Republican Banner.\textsuperscript{263}

Nicholas Judy. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 91 days. He is said to have been born in 1747, a son of Martin and Rosanna (Shaffner) Judy, and was about three years younger than his brother Henry Judy noticed earlier. His father Martin (1708-1785) came from Sissach, Canton Basel, Switzerland, in the Snow Enterprise to Philadelphia in 1738, and settled later in what is now Grant County, West Virginia. Nicholas married Mary Fultz, who is presumed to have been a sister of George Fultz, Junior (noticed above), who was also at Point Pleasant. He died after 1803 but before 9 November 1810 when his estate was appraised.

John Alguire [Alkire]. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. He was born in 1750 in Pendleton County. He married Christena, probably a daughter of Jacob and Christena (______) Wolf, by 1770. He owed a debt to the estate of Joseph Skidmore when it was settled on 15 March 1779. The Alkires were living in 1783 near Weston in what is now Lewis (then Harrison) County where they settled on 200 acres on the left hand fork of Hackers Creek. He was taxed there as a tithable in 1786. On 19 March 1798 John and Christina Alkire sold another 127 acres on the West Fork River to John Coonrod of Hardy County for £200. He died in 1828 at Weston.

George Walker. Paid £8.15sh.6d for 117 days. Nothing is known of his ancestry. He first appears in Pendleton County not long before Dunmore’s War, perhaps coming out from Orange County at about the same time (1771) as Samuel Richards (q. v.). He and his wife Sarah lived on Dry Run, a tributary of the North Fork. His will is dated 17 April 1810, but does not mention all of his children.

Andrew Skidmore. Paid £9.1sh.6d for 131 days. He was born on 8 November 1750 in Virginia, the youngest child of Joseph and Agnes (Caldwell) Skidmore. In his pension application he stated: “that when about eighteen years of age he had moved from the South Branch of the Potomac to Tygart’s Valley encountering all of the dangers and hardships of a frontier settlement during an active and bloody warfare with the savages.” He was probably in Randolph County this early (1768), but perhaps only on hunting expeditions. However he and his father, his brothers Edward (who went to Kentucky) and Thomas, and their brother-in-law Jonas Friend were among the earliest permanent settlers in the county. Andrew Skidmore had a reputation in his teens as a vicious Indian fighter and was implicated about 1768 with Nicholas Harpole (q.v.) and others in the murder of three peaceful Indians on what is now Mill Creek in Hardy County. There is no doubt that he was one of the party that massacred five families of Indians at Bulltown in what is now Braxton County in June 1772. He was wounded at Point Pleasant in 1774. Late in the day, during the worst of a rain storm, he and several other men took shelter in a hollow log. When the log became crowded he pointed out another close by, and as he did so a chance shot tore off his index finger. He married Margaret, a daughter of Arthur and Margaret (Phares) Johnson in 1783. His father Joseph Skidmore had been the proprietor of a mill on Skidmore Run in Pendleton County, and he and Andrew Skidmore undertook the construction of a mill on the Tygart’s River at Westfall’s 272 She is not mentioned in the will of George Fultz, Senior, dated 10 February 1772. However Fultz’ will mentions only his three infant daughters Hanna, Eve, and Susanna and Mary is likely to have been an older daughter and recently married in 1772.

277 Jeff Carr suggest that he might be the man of this name who was the sole heir of Elizabeth (Thompson) Walker of Culpeper County. Elizabeth Walker was a daughter of George Thompson, Senior, and his wife Catherine Phillips. A number of Thompson’s descendants migrated to Pendleton County, tended to associate with that area.

280 Virginia Revolutionary War State Pensions, (Virginia Genealogical Society, Richmond, 1980) 112. The legislature acting favorably, and he was granted a pension on 20 January 1819. It is important to distinguish here between the state pensions and the later ones granted by the Federal government. Andrew Skidmore had no claim under Federal law, then or later, as a soldier in the colonial army.

281 This is on the word of his nephew Andrew Pendleton Friend (1780-1865). Thomas Collett, noticed above, also certified at the time of his application that Andrew Skidmore had been wounded in the hand at Point Pleasant. Andrew Skidmore was also paid £1.7sh for only 18 days of service under his brother-in-law Jonas Friend who was the Captain of a company called out earlier in the Tygart Valley and lumped together with Dunmore’s War by the paymaster at Williamsburg. See the ARA, vol. 5, no. 4 (Winter 1996) 1-7, where I wrongly surmised that Captain Jonas Friend was at Point Pleasant since the payroll for his company was included with the accounts for Dunmore’s War.
Ford. After work had progressed they came to the conclusion that the fall would not power a mill, and the project was abandoned. All of his 12 children were all born near this site in what is now South Elkins. He moved late in life with his younger children to what became Sutton in Braxton County where he died on 15 November 1827 and is buried in the Skidmore Cemetery.

Isaac Henkle. Paid £9.16sh.6d for 131 days. He was born on 5 December 1754 on Dutchman’s Creek in Davidson (then Rowan) County, North Carolina, a son of John Justus and Mary Magdalena (Eschmann) Henckel. His family removed to the beautiful Germany Valley in what is now Pendleton County in 1760. He became a brother-in-law of his future Captain as a boy of six in 1762 when John Skidmore, then 25, married his older sister Polly. Grown to adulthood Henkle served as an enlisted man under his brother-in-law at Point Pleasant, and as his Lieutenant in the expedition to relieve the settlers in the Tygart Valley in 1777. He was one of the original justices of Rockingham County, and was named a Captain there in the militia on 27 August 1781 (to replace Andrew Johnson, another brother-in-law, who had resigned). He married Mary, a daughter of John Cunningham, deceased, in the same year on 13th December 1781. When the first court was named for the new county of Pendleton County in 1788 he was a member, an appointment probably due both to his kinship with Skidmore (who was the most powerful political figure in the new county) as well as his own demonstrated abilities. He was elected to represent Pendleton County in the General Assembly in 1807-8. He died in October 1824 and is buried in the North Fork Cemetery. His will, dated 23 October 1824 and probated on 3 November 1824, named all nine of his children.

There are still some mysteries to be solved about this payroll account. Captain Skidmore is said to have had three sergeants in his company, yet not one of the rank and file with him was paid an extra stipend for the added responsibility that this rank entailed. Equally baffling is the status of Roger Patton who is paid at the same rate (2sh 6d) as Ensign Harpole, and for 131 days as opposed to Harpole’s tour of only 117 days. We still know little about the incidents that provoked the calling out of companies commanded by Captain Jonas Friend and Captain Ralph Stewart for shorter tours of duty, presumably in response to earlier troubles in 1773 with the Indians. Their men were paid at the same time and apparently at the same rate as were the rank and file at Point Pleasant. There is, however, a discrepancy in the pay of the captains. Captain Skidmore and the other captains at Point Pleasant were paid a per diem of 7sh 6d. Captain Friend was paid only 6sh for policing the frontier, but Captain Stewart had £16 (for 32 days) which works out to 10sh a day for his pains for what was probably similar service in 1773. Something to answer a part of these questions may be buried somewhere in the journals of the Virginia legislature, but if so I have failed to find it. Virgil Lewis (to whom these payroll accounts were sadly unknown) writing back in 1909 devoted a chapter to the “Pay of the Soldiers in Dunmore’s War.” He gave the following schedule for both officers and men: Major, 12sh.; Captain, 10sh.; Lieutenant, 7sh. 6d.; Ensign 7sh.; 1/4Master, 6sh.; Sergeant 6sh.; Corporal, 2sh.; Drummer, 2sh.; Fifer, 2sh.; Scout, 5sh.; Private, 1sh. 6d.

289 For Captain Friend’s company see the ARA, V (no. 4) (Winter 1996) 1-7. The rank and file were universally paid 1sh 6d by the day. It would now appear that Elias Barker was an Ensign (paid 2sh 6d) under Friend in the pre-Point Pleasant expedition, and was promoted soon after to Lieutenant as I have noted there. For Captain Stewart and his men (largely from the Tygart Valley), see my article in the ARA, VII (no. 3) (Fall 1998) 62-6
CAPTAIN JOSEPH FRIEND'S REVOLUTIONARY PENSION PETITION

Introduced by Mr. Warren Skidmore

[This article was published (some 52 years ago) in the Magazine of History and Biography by the Randolph County Historical Society, No. 11 (December 1954) 19-22. It was my first effort on a historical topic, although I had written a good many articles for the St. John's Collegian at Annapolis and innumerable book reviews for a local newspaper. It is a fitting postscript to my later articles on his father Jonas Friend. (WS)]

Capt. Joseph Friend, one of western Virginia's most celebrated frontiersmen, led a life as exciting as any dime novel hero. His autobiographical petition for a Revolutionary pension has recently been transcribed from the original preserved at the Virginia State Library, and will be printed here in full. Materials for a large scale biography of Capt. Friend have been collected, but for the purposes of this short preface to his petition a few vital statistics seem to be most in order, particularly since an accurate account does not seem to have appeared in print.

He was born in Pendleton County, probably in 1755, the eldest child of Jonas and Sarah (Skidmore) Friend. His father served as a corporal and later as a sergeant during the French and Indian War, and was one of those who rebuilt Fort Seybert after the massacre there in 1758. He removed with his family to Leading Creek near Elkins before the Revolution where he built Friend's Fort, the site of which has been marked by the D. A. R. Jonas Friend served as a Gentleman Justice for Augusta County from 1778 to 1781, and continued to be a power among the Randolph pioneers until his retirement around the turn of the century. He is said to have died in 1807 and his wife in the year following, and both are buried on the Friend farm adjacent to the Fort.

Capt. Friend married Elizabeth Davisson (a sister of Maj. Daniel Davisson of Clarksburg) who died shortly after the birth of their only child, Mary (or "Polly"). She was subsequently adopted by her father's sister, Sarah Wilson, and the minute books show that this was legalized by a "deed" from Capt. Friend to his brother-in-law William Wilson.

Capt. Friend acquired by surveys around 1800 several tracts of land largely in what is now Webster County, and he settled there permanently about the time of his parents' death. His daughter and her husband, William Arthur, joined him there in the year 1819 and his petition was doubtless made from their joint household near Webster Springs.

The petition is not in the hand of Capt. Friend, as a comparison with authentic specimens at Richmond will show. At the Virginia State Library are two military vouchers with genuine signatures of Capt. Friend, both for beef to be used by the Monongalia County volunteers on their march to join General Clark in 1781 (one dated May 2nd of that year was given to Benjamin Cutwright, and the other of May 16th to William Robinson). Endorsements on the petition show that it was referred to Claims on December 13, 1822 and rejected by this committee on December 24th. But the following month the petition was reconsidered: on January 4th, it was found "reasonable", on the 6th a report was drawn, and the final endorsement shows that on January 15th, 1823, a bill was drawn for Capt. Friend's relief.

The text published here retains the original spelling and punctuation:

LEGISLATIVE PETITION, NICHOLAS COUNTY 13 December 1822. Req. C 8455

"To the Senate and House of Delegates for the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The Petition of Joseph Friend humbly Shewth that when he was about nineteen years of age (being a native of Virginia) he viewed with Indignation the tyranny of Great Britain towards his native Country. Your Petitioner also viewed with horror the murder of his friends who inhabited Tygarts Valley then a frontier part of Virginia. Your petitioner at that early period of his life entered as a Militia Man under the command of Capt. Benjamin Wilson to fight the savages and to avenge his Countries wrongs and continued as a soldier under the command of Wilson from the year 1776 until the year 1781 during which time your petitioner underwent much fatigue, and was exposed to great danger being often called upon to pursue, and fight the Indians, who had been committing depredation upon the frontier inhabitants of Virginia. And during which period your petitioner also submitted to great deprivation, and performed many Hazardous tours as a ranger or Scout. Your Petitioner about the year 1781 raised a Volunteer company and marched with that company, and joined the Regiment commanded by Col. Zacknell Morgan and with that regiment joined the army commanded by Gen. Clark, and marched against the indians to the falls of the Ohio. Your petitioner at the time that Gen. St. Clair with his army was sent to fight the Indians, tendered his services and joined that army as a Volunteer, and was present and fought in that destructive battle called St. Clairs defeat and although your petitioner in that bloody contest witnessed his companions falling on the right and on the left, and escaped with his own life narrowly Yet he was not dismayed, but determined again to face the savage foe, and to revenge the blood of his brethren. And accordingly your petitioner When Gen. Anthony Wayne with his army was sent to fight against the Indians, tendered his services, and as a volunteer joined Wayne's army. Your Petitioner so far met the confidence of Gen. Wayne that he appointed your petitioner a captain over the Spy companies, that belonged to his army. Your Petitioner closed his Military career in that Victorious battle fought by the army of Gen. Wayne by which the savages were conquered. Although your petitioner often faced the foe, and stood amidst the danger of Many hard fought battles, yet he never received a Scar or a wound from a ball, a sword, or a tommyhawk. But your Petitioner had the Misfortune, whilst acting as Captain of the Spies under the command of Gen. Wayne to break the rim of his belly. The pain and disability of which rupture increases with old age, and has rendered your petitioner unable to Labour for a Maintainance. It would be much more agreeable to your Petitioner to voluntarily serve his Country, than to be compelled to ask its aid but necessity knows no rule. Your petitioner has nearly burnt the lamp of time allotted to man - he is nearly 70 years of age - poor - and inform - And hopes that inasmuch as he Voluntarily Spent the prime of his life in the Service of his Country, and became disabled whilst in that Service, that he will from the Humanity of his Country receive a small pension, during the remnant of his days, and a small sum for his present support.

JOSEPH FRIEND"
THE ANDREW SKIDMORE FAMILY OF RANDOLPH COUNTY, VIRGINIA

by Warren Skidmore

[This short article was prepared for the recent history of Randolph County, West Virginia, where it has since been published. (WS)]

Andrew Skidmore (1750-1827), the ancestor of a large family in central West Virginia, left an autobiographical account of himself written in 1818. He stated, with much more, "that when about eighteen years of age he had moved from the South Branch of the Potomac to Tygart's Valley encountering all of the dangers and hardships of a frontier settlement during an active and bloody warfare with the savages." He was probably in Randolph County this early (1768) only on hunting expeditions, but he and his brothers Edward (who went to Kentucky) and Thomas (who was the ancestor to the family in Barbour County) and their brother-in-law Jonas Friend were among the earliest permanent settlers in the county. They were descended from a family which was living by the middle of the 14th century at Westerleigh, Gloucestershire. Thomas Skidmore or Scudamore (1605-1684) of that place came to Cambridge, Massachusetts in 1636 and died at Fairfield, Connecticut. His posterity went by way of Jamaica, Long Island, Kent County, Delaware, and Washington County, Maryland, to what is now Pendleton County by 1749. Andrew Skidmore had a reputation in his teens as a vicious Indian fighter and was implicated (probably as early as 1768) in the murder of three peaceful Indians on what is now Mill Creek in Hardy County. There is no doubt that he was one of the party that massacred five families of Indians at Bulltown in what is now Braxton County in June 1772. He served under his brother Captain John Skidmore at Point Pleasant in 1774 where he had a finger shot off as he pointed out a hollow log as a place of shelter from the rain during the battle. He married Margaret Johnson in 1783; she is sometimes said (in error) to have been related to President Andrew Johnson. His father Joseph Skidmore had been the proprietor of a mill on Skidmore Run in Pendleton County which had ground grain for the army in both the French and Indian War and the Revolution. Andrew Skidmore undertook the construction of a mill on the Tygart's River at Westfall Ford. After work had progressed he came to the conclusion that the fall would not power a mill, and the project was abandoned. Their 12 children were all born near this site on the outskirts of Elkins. He moved late in life to Sutton where he is buried in the Skidmore Cemetery. His eldest son James S. Skidmore (1784-1860) married Sarah Kittle and remained in Randolph County leaving posterity here that are well-known at the present day. His son David Evans Skidmore (1837-1907) married Martha Virginia Corley, and his grandson Charles Skidmore (1868-1928) married Nettie Virginia Caplinger. His great-grandson Gerald Hively Skidmore is still living, and a great-great-grandson Charles Gerald Skidmore now lives at Fairfax, Virginia. Interested descendants of this family should make an effort to see Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore), 1605-1684 (3rd ed., 2006) by Warren Skidmore, or the recent history of Pendleton County in this series.
DEED OF GIFT BY ANDREW SKIDMORE OF RANDOLPH COUNTY, VIRGINIA TO HIS CHILDREN

[This deed of gift by Andrew Skidmore to his younger children would first appear to have been a benevolent act by devoted father. In point of fact I suspect that it was motivated by a desperate man anxious to avoid paying a judgement awarded following a suit in chancery. Andrew Skidmore lived on another eleven years after this deed was signed presumably enjoying the comforts afforded by his children’s chattels! It is recorded in the Randolph County Deeds, liber VII, folio 52. (WS)]

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS that I, Andrew Skidmore of Elk River, in Randolph County and State of Virginia, for and in consideration of the natural love and affection which I have to my six children, Joseph Skidmore, Jesse Skidmore, John Skidmore, Benjamin Skidmore, Margaret Skidmore and Rebecca Skidmore of the aforesaid place as well as for the further consideration of One Dollar to me in hand paid, by the said Joseph, Jesse, John, Benjamin, Margaret and Rebecca Skidmore at or before the ensealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have granted and by these presents, do give, grant unto the said Joseph, Jesse, John, Benjamin, Margaret and Rebecca Skidmore, their executors, administrators and assigns, all my personal property, consisting of horses, cattle, hogs, plantation tools and household furniture; also all debts due to me either by Bond, Note, open account, TO HAVE AND TO HOLD the said property unto them the said Joseph, Jesse, John, Benjamin, Margaret and Rebecca Skidmore, their executors, administrators and assigns in equal share forever; and the said Andrew Skidmore for himself, his executors, and administrators, the said property unto the said Joseph, Jesse, John, Benjamin, Margaret and Rebecca Skidmore, their executors, administrators and assigns against the claim of him the said Andrew Skidmore his executors and administrators, shall and will warrant and forever defend by these presents.

George Davis
Andrew Skidmore, Jr.

THE SKIDMORE-JOHNSON CONNECTION, A NEW LOOK AT AN OLD MISTAKE!

by Warren Skidmore

These notes were put together at the request of David Armstrong, editor of the Allegheny Regional Ancestors, who felt that the truth about a widely believed error should be better known. This article was published in the ARA, vol. 4, no.2 (Summer, 1995), pages 33-5.

Act One of our drama begins with Archibald W. Corley, a great-grandson of Andrew Skidmore and Margaret Johnson of Randolph County. He took a considerable interest (even pride) in his Skidmore ancestry in a period when this was not common. As a practicing attorney he spent much of his time in courthouses and had "stoped (sic) off one time at Harrisonburg from the train to look at the old records for my family." It was doubtless at this time that he located an Andrew Johnson there, made him the father of Margaret Skidmore (she was in fact his youngest sister, a posthumous child of Arthur Johnson), and produced a tale out of the whole cloth that this Andrew Johnson was the grandfather of the president of the same name.

In 1914 his distant cousin, Minna S. Hyman (Mrs. Harry), of San Antonio, Texas, wrote to Counsellor Corley (now in his mid-sixties and practicing in a sleepy country town) asking for some genealogical information. She was descended from William Wilson who had married Sarah Friend, a daughter of Jonas and Sarah (Skidmore) Friend. Corley answered her letter on 2 October 1914, and wrote again on 19 December 1914 sending her some rather careless information on her Randolph and Pendleton County ancestors. Mrs. Hyman was not a descendant of the Johnsons, but he wrote gratuitously in December (on the stationery of A. W. Corley & C. F. Greene, Attorneys and Counselors at Law, Sutton, West Virginia):

"Andrew Skidmore was born in 1751, died in 1827, his wife was Margaret Johnson of Andrew Johnson, she died in Randolph County, Virginia, in 1809 and is buried on what is now the Odd fellows home for W. Va. at Elkins, she was an aunt of Andrew Johnson the 17th President of the United States."*

Most genealogical correspondence eventually gets trashed but Mrs. Hyman saved hers, and I was able to make pencil copies of these letters (and another from Claude W. Maxwell, Counsellor at Law at Elkins, dealing largely with Friend's Fort) back in the pre-Xerox period. The Second Act involved John D. Sutton who received a somewhat embellished tale of the Johnson connection which he published in January 1919 (after Corley's death) in his History of Braxton County and Central West Virginia. Publication led to an immediate acceptance, and Act Three was played on the grounds of the Old Fellow's Home at Elkins. Here, on 8 July 1929, the Margaret Johnson Skidmore monument (now sadly vandalized) was unveiled and dedicated before about 2000 people. The plaque parroted the Corley correspondence:

"Margaret Johnson Skidmore; daughter of Andrew Johnson; sister of Jacob Johnson; Aunt of Andrew Johnson, 17th President of the United States. Was married to Andrew Skidmore, a soldier of the Revolution in 1783, the mother of twelve children. She died in 1808."

The speakers included a United States Senator, and a special Skidmore-Johnson issue of the Randolph County Historical Society Magazine was published to commemorate the event. Sadly, more than one member of the West Virginia family later visited the Greeneville, Tennessee, home of the president and convinced Mrs. Margaret Johnson Patterson Bartlett (a greatgranddaughter) of the truth of the Pendleton County story. They were true believers who had been led down the garden path, and it would...

290 He was a son of William Fogg Corley and Sarah Ann Skidmore (1821-1880), and a grandson of James Skidmore (1784-1860) and Sarah Kittle of Elkins.

291 Corley had published earlier an expanded account of this in a five-page biographical sketch written with his cousin John Henry Conrad, clerk of the circuit court of Lewis County, in Bernard L. Butcher's Genealogical and Personal History of the Upper Monongahela Valley West Virginia (New York, 1912), II, 778-82. Conrad was a grandson of James Madison and Edith (Skidmore) Corley and this article had sections on their mutual Corley and SkidmoreJohnson ancestors.

292 The Johnson fiction is told here once again on page 431, and Sutton added an appreciative note about the help received from the late A. W. Corley on page 434. I do not want to malign the work of John D. Sutton who did collect a great deal of exceedingly useful (and remarkably accurate) information from several of his other elderly Skidmore cousins then living in the Braxton County area.
serve no useful purpose to identify them at this late date. There can be no doubt, however, that the acceptance by the president's family has made Corley's tale even harder to stamp out. If I may be permitted a personal aside, I have told anyone who would listen since the 1940s that the Johnson connection was completely fraudulent but have resisted telling the full story until now. I put the editors of the Henkel genealogy (Andrew Johnson of Pendleton County had married Hannah Henkel as his first wife) on the alert before publication, but they still repeated the presidential story. Since then I have also published two editions of my Skidmore family history and denounced the Johnson error in both.

The next actor in our drama was the late Mary Harter (1911-1992), my candidate for the first inductee to the West Virginia Genealogists' Hall of Fame when it is formed. We knew that Andrew Johnson had sold all his lands in Pendleton County but where he went, if it was not North Carolina, was still unknown. Mary, with more faith that the truth would out than I could muster, undertook to find him. She had the means and leisure to travel and find him she did in Nicholas County, Kentucky, after a county-by-county search that took three years! She announced her discovery in the Fall 1973 issue of the Henkel Genealogical Bulletin which she then edited and published.

It was a remarkable detective story. Andrew Johnson had married Alsey (Elsie or Else), a daughter of Henry Black, as his second wife by a bond dated 11 October 1783 in Rockingham County. The original bond survived signed by both Andrew Johnson and Andrew Skidmore, his bondsman. Mary had a tracing of these signatures, and found a microfilm of the original consent note dated 29 May 1796 at Paris, Kentucky, to the marriage of Andrew Johnson's daughter Abigail and Enoch Robnett. The two signatures (written over 12 years apart) matched perfectly, and most fortuitously Alsey Johnson (while only a stepmother), signed giving her consent as well. Proof positive (all that Mary would accept) had been found. Johnson died there before 9 May 1805 when an inventory was filed of his estate in Nicholas County.

Mary's account of the pursuit is still in print, and recommended highly to the interested reader. She included a short sermon:

“It is tragic that the Junkins [who edited the Henkel Genealogy] were imposed on by self-styled historians, and used this material [on the presidential connection]. The real tragedy is that once an error such as this appears in print, it is almost impossible to correct it. One thousand copies of this mistake are in print to haunt family researchers forever. It is surely true that in a 1447-page genealogy, not every person listed can be so placed with "documentary evidence" ... but when a well-known person is listed without proof, it reflects on the accuracy of the entire book.”

Recently I looked at a reference book published just two years ago called American Presidential Families. It has 792 pages, some colored coat of arms, an eminent publisher, and sells for $95.00. After some nonsense... about a differing Virginia ancestry for the president it adds parenthetically, perhaps from the Greeneville homestead, “(other authorities have argued that Andrew JOHNSON, of Augusta County, Va., was the father of Jacob Johnson mentioned below).” Corley the authority has a nice ring to it!

Now for the epilogue to our drama. The writer Lately Thomas (who spent weeks working in the Johnson papers at the Library of Congress) found that the president learned very late in life, long after it was of much interest to either him or the Tennessee electorate, that his father Jacob Johnson was born in England and had sailed from Newcastle for America about 1795!298excellence found in the early years.) To the notes given by Harter on page 154 the following unpublished information may be added: Arthur Johnson, Senior, was in what is now Rockingham County, Virginia, as early as 15 September 1742 when he appears on a list of Captain Hugh Thompson's delinquents. His son John Johnson (born 1745) married Mary Sheltman (or Shelpman) on 17 August 1763 at the Cook's Creek Presbyterian Church. They were living in 1785 in Harrison County (and for a year or two thereafter, perhaps that part now Randolph), but had returned by 1788 to Rockingham County where the probate on his estate was given to his eldest son John Johnson, Junior, on 22 February 1796. Arthur Johnson, Junior, the youngest son (born about 1750), and his wife Elizabeth Harrison lived for a time on the North Fork in Pendleton County near his brother Andrew, but moved later to Harrison County. He was taxed there as late as 1807 on the West Fork River, but removed in the same year to Bath Township, Greene County, Ohio. After an interval in Indiana he died in March 1823 in Grandview Township, Edgar County, Illinois.

JOHN SKIDMORE OF BRAXTON COUNTY AND HIS REMARKABLE TOY CLOCK.
by Warren Skidmore
[This article appeared in the Allegheny Regional Ancestors, vol. 3, no. 1 (Spring 1994), page 3. This John is one of my very favorite Skidmores, and I would liked to have seen his hand-carved toy clock in operation! (WS)]

JOHN SKIDMORE was born 15 August 1800 in Randolph County, (West) Virginia, a son of Andrew and Margaret (Johnson) Skidmore. On 7 November 1818 (immediately after their father's death) Benjamin Skidmore conveyed 100 acres to his brother Jesse Skidmore for support, clothing, and boarding of John Skidmore who is "supposed to be incapable of managing his own business." John Skidmore lived with his brother Jesse until 1840 when Jesse, then of Kanawha County, deeded back this land on 16 January 1841 as his wife had recently died.

THE GREENBRIER ERA, a weekly newspaper, published an article in 1858 from Braxton Court House (Sutton) about this John Skidmore: “We have in Braxton County a remarkable mechanical genius named Skidmore, who, although unable to write, without any other tool than a penknife, constructed a clock which not only kept good time but moved a number of automata, made to resemble a company of soldiers and their officers, which made their appearance at regular intervals and performed various military evolutions. He afterwards attempted to get up a subscription to defray the expense of construction a clock designed to run for a year without being wound up. The attempt to secure the subscription failed but nobody doubts the ability of Skidmore to construct the clock. The man, it is said, is not able to distinguish between a five dollar bank bill and a ten.”

Today John Skidmore would probably be recognized as an idiot savant (a learned idiot), and one of a small company of mental defectives who can do lightning calculations or who exhibit same great untaught musical talent.

He was living in the 1870 census with his niece Elizabeth Coberly and her husband Robert Jackson in Braxton County. Nothing more has been learned of him. It seems likely that he was buried in the Skidmore Cemetery at Sutton but, alas, no stone marks his grave.

“SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE,” LETTERS HOME FROM AN A.E.F “SAMMY” IN 1918.

Newton Bland Nicholas Skidmore was born on 21 April 1890 and spent most of his life at Jefferson in Ashtabula County, Ohio. He married Pauline Zeiger on 17 April 1917 and registered for the draft a few weeks later on 5 June 1917. He gave his address as R.F.D. #4, Jefferson, Ohio, and his occupation as the driver of an oil wagon for the Standard Oil Company. He was drafted and enrolled in Company M, 331st Infantry on September 18, 1917 at the age of 27. He was promoted to Private 1st Class on April 1, 1918 and to Corporal on June 17, 1918. He was not happy to have been drafted as a married man, but seems to have reached an accommodation with the army at Camp Sherman. He missed trench warfare in France and was honorably discharged on the 8 February 1919, and died at Jefferson, Ohio on 15 January 1952.

Dear Bro & Sis

Rec’d your letter today and very glad to hear from you.
We are getting along very well. Have got most of our clothes now. I have everything I need except leggings. I bet you were glad to get home. Well I must not talk about that.
As far as being a soldier I rather like it. But I don’t like being taken away from my wife just as we were getting along good. I only hope that you and Ed300 don’t get into this.
Everything is very nice here. We can go to church on Sundays. It is pretty nice to go to church after all even if you you don’t live up to everything.
I had a letter from Pauline301 today She is well but says she can’t eat anything. This is harder on her than anyone else, even me. For if I never get back she will always be heart broken. But I think I will come out OK.

299 The street name and number were changed about 1930 to 2475 Sixth Avenue, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.
301 His wife Pauline, formerly Zieger.
We expect to go to France the first of the year. I am hoping to get a pass to Chillicothe Sunday.

We are getting some stiff drilling now and they are increasing every day. But I would rather do that than lay around and think. Sunday was the worst day I have put in since I came here. The YMCA is doing a great thing. The soldiers in each Regiment has a nice YMCA. It is fitted out as show and every evening there something doing to entertain us boys.

Well I have written one letter already and am quite tired. Have written two letters to pals today.

With love and best wishes,

Your bro

Dear Bro & Sister
Will try to answer your letter of the day before yesterday. Was certainly glad to hear from you.

I have been sick for three days. We got some poisoned food from somewhere and had the diarrhea. Some of the men were so bad they had to go to the hospital for an operation for piles. Its [blank] I tell you. The Captain is taking a look to see what is wrong.

Inez,302 I received your box of grapes and thank you very much for them but I guess I will have to throw them out as they are all mashed ready to make wine and the government won’t let us have liquor of any kind. Oh I guess I can get a little out of them.

I hear from Pauline every day she is in Painesville [Ohio] this week helping Mrs. Strock. I guess she is going home this week. I didn’t know she tried to get us exempted until a few days ago. I guess though if she could of sworn to her belief it would of done the work. For I heard that a married man of our Company had a letter from his wife and gave it to the Captain and he said he would get him exempt. I wouldn’t care to be out if I wasn’t married. Take my advice and stay out if you can. For it certainly is hard on a married man.

I guess another bunch from Jefferson and Ashtabula got here last night. We heard they were coming into our Company. You ought to have seen the excitement among the boys. But they put them in other end of the Camp. Otto Reeder is with them.

The boys from our bunch that were discharged are going home I guess. It makes the rest of us kind of homesick to see them go. Only two out of the bunch from Jefferson and Ashtabula that came when I did are going.

We were out to the aviator’s field the other day. A fellow from the field at Dayton landed and gave an exhibition. It was quite good. But I don’t want to go in for any of that stuff.

Well I must bring this to close soon for I guess we are in for a hike of about six or eight miles this P.M. And my “tummy” feels like it was bust.

Ernest, I would be glad to spend my furlough at your place but I guess we can’t get anything of that kind until we are ready to go across. So I guess if any of you folks want to see me for awhile your will have to come here. Would be tickled to to see any of my folks any old time. So if you want a little trip you and Inez come down some Sat[urday] and stay over Sunday.

I am going to have Pauline come down in about a month. Gee, wouldn’t that be nice though if she came down to your place. Try and get her interested for I am afraid she is worrying herself sick.

I had a letter from mother the same day I got yours. They are all well, and getting along good. They are pretty well pleased with their farm. Believe me old boy this is the farming country. We get two hikes a week out in the country and I tell you there is some corn here.

Well both of you take care of yourselves and write often. Don’t wait for an answer but write anyway, for I average about five letters a day.

Look out that your back don’t get the better of you. Tell Uncle Ed303 to write for if there is anything that cheers me up it’s a letter.

---

302 Inez (Stormer) Skidmore, his sister-in-law.
303 His uncle Edmond Stonestreet of 1627 High Street in Cuyahoga Falls.
Chet is well and getting along good. I don’t see much of him anymore. He bunks upstairs and I am down. Well I must close and get this in the mail. Inez I will thank you again for the packages of your cookies and candy was certainly good. The grapes would have fine except they were mashed. Well goodbye,

Bland
P.S. Don’t worry about me being [sick?] for I am OK now.

Dear Bro & Sister
Will try and answer your letter of a few days ago. Was glad you are both well. I am well and getting along good. Ernest just let that watch go. I am getting along alright without it. We just came back from a lecture about Liberty Bonds. They are urging every soldier to buy them. Its alright for some of them but I can’t buy any for I have a wife to help support. I think everyone that isn’t in the service should buy as many he could. But for me I can’t I think I am doing my bit already. Inez you send cookies to let you know don’t worry about that. They are sure good. We don’t get any fancy grub here.

I had a letter from mother yesterday. They are all well except colds. We have colds here all the time.

I am going to try to get home for Thanksgiving. Don’t know if I will make it or not. If I do you folks had better come up. For I guess we are going across January 1st. Pauline was coming here Sunday a week. But her mother I guess is in bad shape so she can’t come. I had planned on it so much too. But I would rather see her take care of her mother.

I am going to look up Claud Sunday.
Well I can’t think of anything to write so had better close. I am going to try and get to town Saturday.
Hope you are well.
Inez if you want to send more cookies send them now.

Dear Bro & Sister
After so long a time I’ll try to answer your letter of several days ago. I am well, only a little flu. I was at home from Saturday noon until Tuesday and you may know. Its damn tough in this old camp now. I am not as well satisfied as I was before going home.

Everyone is well out there and you bet were glad to see me. I had a great time and I guess that’s what makes me so blue. Dad hasn’t moved yet.

We are having some awful weather here. Its done everything except the sun to shine. But I couldn’t see if it did. Damn I am bluer than indigo and don’t care who knows it. I wish the old Kaiser would hurry up and die so this thing would be over. I think we are going to get a chance to see France yet. Our General told us yesterday we were to go in three months. I wouldn’t mind if I wasn’t married but it damned tough on me.

By the time this thing is over I wont have anything left.

Well how are you making it? I hope you are all well.

Inez, the cookies were fine and I thank you for them. Our grub is poor at present.

Here is our prayer: Our father who art in Washington Sam be thy name, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in this outfit the same as any other one. Give us this day our daily rations of meat balls, beans, and stews. Lead us into some saloon where we can get good Lager Beer and we’ll enlist and be thine forever. Amen.
I haven’t seen Claud this week. He was well the last time I saw him. I saw Carl Gratz from Akron Tuesday night. He was over to our Barracks. He is pretty homesick. Well I’ll have to sign off as this is all of my paper. Answer soon.

With best wishes,

Dear Bro & Sis
Rec’d your letter last evening and was surely glad to hear from you and glad you are all well.
I was dreaming of you last night. I thought you were with me and we went into battle and out of ammunition. Gee old boy I hope you are never dragged into this and if you know what is good for you you’ll stay out too. Gordon and Mae wasn’t home Sunday and that damn fool is trying to enlist in the aviation corps. He had better stay at home and take care of Mae and his mother. But I guess he’ll leave.
Wish you and Inez could down to some of our football games. Our team played a real hard game with one of the other soldier teams and it rained them out. The score was six to six. I know you would enjoy them. Can’t you come down and visit our camp some Sunday? It would be a treat to me as I never have had any company since coming here. But I want Pauline to come down in about three weeks.
Ernest I want to thank you for the two dollars you sent me. But we got paid Monday although I sent most of mine home. One of our Lieutenants was telling me that in a few days a law was going into effect to send half of a married man’s wages to his wife and the Government would send as much. So Pauline can live on my wages after we get started. I bought a fifty dollar bond and have to pay $5.00 out of each month’s wages for ten months.
I do hope and pray that I pay for it outside of the army for if I have to stay here a year or two I’ll just go nuts, that’s all. If I wasn’t married I would be having a good time. But as it is I am having everything except a good time. Although I’m not homesick. But I guess that Pauline understands if it is nice tomorrow.
I am going out into the country for a hike and maybe stop at some good old farmer’s house for supper. I can hardly go our feed since I came back here. I’ll tell you that mother and the kid sure did feed me good while at home.
Well it is most time for retreat and I have got to go to be there so I’ll say goodbye.
I am well and hope you are both well.
I am going to write to some of Uncle Ed’s tomorrow. Take care of your selves and write often.

Dear Bro & Sister
I will try and write you a few lines I’ve been pretty busy lately. Pauline was here last week, went home Monday. I heard from her today. Her dad came near getting killed. Don’t know how it happened. He has concussion of the brain. I guess he is pretty bad.

304 His brother-in-law Gordon Griffith (1895-1973) and sister May Skidmore Griffith, whose parents were both born in Wales, went to Canada and enlisted as a pilot for the Canadian R.A.F. He flew throughout the war, and for recreation all his life.
We are under quarantine for measles. Don’t know if I will get home for Christmas or not. I want to go if I possibly can. If I get to go you two better come home for I guess we are going across soon. At least everything points that way now.

Pauline and dad are trying to get me out of here. The papers are in here now. That is they are in General Glenn’s office. I don’t know if it is going to do any good or not. I hope so for I am getting tired of this kind of life.

How did you come out with your exemption? I hope you don’t have to go to war, for it is hard on anyone that is married. I would give most anything if I could get home.

Pauline is just worrying herself to death. She is getting thin and don’t look well at all. Her mother has been sick for a long time and has to have an operation soon, and now her dad is hurt and is liable to be laid up for a long time. And he is in debt I don’t hardly see how they are going to make it. Wish I could get home to take care of her.

Of course there is a slight chance of getting out, but very slight at that. Believe me you better fight your case to the last ditch. I hope you or Ed either one don’t have to come.

Inez I do thank you very much for the box. Everything was just fine. I rec’d a nice big box from Pauline yesterday. She sent some chicken and it almost makes me homesick to think of chicken. We don’t get that very often here. We had turkey for Thanksgiving.

We are having our first real Winter here now. It snowed last night and has been snowing all day. We haven’t been out today only to clean away the snow.

I wish I could get out. If I don’t I hope we get busy and settle and settle this thing up. I would like to see the end of this old war. Well I must hurry and finish as it is about time for retreat.

I hope you are well. I am feeling just fine now. But have had an awful sore throat and cold for a few days. But its about gone now.

Don’t do as I have done. But write soon.

Dear Bro & Sister
Just a few lines this evening. I am well and hope you are the same.

I hope to get home for Christmas and will expect to see you two there. We under quarantine for measles but hope to get out soon if there is no more cases. I am to get a pass if we get out. All the married men get home on Christmas. So you can bet some of the boys are sore. Only thirty per cent of our Company is allowed to go home and the married men get first chance.

My finger are so stiff I can hardly write so I am going to cut my letter short and will tell you all about everything when I see you. Now come home if you can for I would like to see you before I go across and I feel certain we will go soon for we have almost completed our course of training here. We are learning to shoot now and that is about all we are to get here.

If you have as hard a time reading this as I have writing it I pity you.

So goodnight,

My darling wifey

Just a few lines tonight to let you know I am well and feeling fine.
We turned in all our worn and misfit clothes. I got rid of my white coat. Told them it was too small. If anything was just worn a little bit we got new ones. Some of the boys haven’t got any clothes except their underwear tonight.

Tomorrow we get passes to New York City for twenty-four hrs. I don’t know if I will go or not. Wish you were here to go with me. Then I would enjoy myself.

How is Johnny Boy? I would like to see him and Ed’s kids, in fact would like to see you all.

Girllie when I get across I want you to send me those pictures also one of the family pictures.

I am sending you a cartoon of myself that one of my squad made of me. Do you remember Str[–]z, the fellow I said was so slow? He is the guy that made it. He is going to make me a larger one. This is too young for me and I thinks looks just like Charlie. How is mother getting along? I hope she is better. Tell all the folks I would like for them to write for it is quite lonesome now since I can’t see my old baby darling every night.

Well girllie never mind it is soon going to be over with and I’ll come back to you. I hope and trust you aren’t worrying are you darling, for you must not do that for you must be brave. Well sweetheart I must close. I hope to hear from you soon.

Tell all the folks I said hello. Write to me here and I’ll get it wherever I go.

Now darling I must say goodnight.

I send me love to all and keep a good portion for yourself. So goodnight kitten.

“Somewhere in France.

Dear Bro & Sister At last I’ve got settled and will try to write you a few lines. I am well and hope you are the same. I like this country fine. We are having dandy weather here and drilling again.

Wish I could tell you of all I see over here. I am sure it would be interesting to you but of course I can’t. So will have to wait until I come back.
The people are good to us Sammies\(^{306}\) but of course we can't understand each other yet. I am trying to learn to speak French.

If you enlist I wish we could be in the same company.

Our cousin Harry Carper\(^{307}\) is in the same Division as I am in but I have only seen him once. He is a baker.

I guess Gordon will soon learn how to fly as he is interested in such work. But for myself I would rather fight on the ground.

We had quite a nice trip coming over. I was sick one day.

How is Uncle Eds? Tell them I send my best regards.

Yes Inez, I would be glad if Pauline would come and visit you folks for I am afraid she will work too hard as she is at home all the time. I don't want her to work at all but she is very ambitious and wants to add to our little savings while I am away. She would like to join the Red Cross Nurses but I don't want her to do that as it would be almost impossible for us to see each other here.

Well I don't know of anything to write that would be of interest to you.

Take care of yourselves and don't work too hard.

Please write as often as possible for I am anxious to hear from you.

One thing I almost forgot to tell you. I am Corporal now was appointed some time ago. I am going do my best and try to go higher.

Well it is almost time for retreat so will close.

With best regards,

Your Bro

Bland”

My Dear Bro & Sister.

I will now try to answer your letter of several days ago. I was sure glad to hear from you I am well and hope you are the same.

Well there isn't much to tell you I guess you get more war news than I do and I never know just what I can write. But I guess the Allies are giving the Dutch the Devil now.

I haven't seen any real warfare yet and don't know if I will very soon or not. But I don't think so.

Our company is on detached service for a few days. I like it quite well it gives us a rest from our other work.

We hear the big guns occasionally. But if all reports are true the Dutch will soon be “finish” as the French people say. You ought to see me trying to talk to those people I make motions and say any old thing that I think of.

Wish you could visit me in my new home I am sleeping in a hay mow it makes a good bed.

I haven't had any mail for several days and I am getting quite anxious to hear from home. Seen a boy from near home one day last week. It is nice to talk to someone from home away over here.

Well there isn't anything I can write so will close.

Write all the news and write as often as possible.

Dear Bro & Sister
Rec'd your letter of Aug 13 and was certainly glad to hear from you. I am well and hope you are the same. It has been very hot here until a few days ago now it is cool and nice. Inez you said I should be glad I wasn't pitching hay I guess that wouldn't be much hotter than what we are doing. I rec'd six letters this morning. And you can't believe how much better I feel after reading them. Something from everyone except Ed. I guess he is too dammed busy fixing his motorcycle to think of anyone else. Inez I thank you very much for the picture. You look very good in your Red Cross outfit. I was hoping you all would have a family picture made when you were out home. But Mother says you didn't. Pauline wrote saying had just had one taken of the folks at home and would send one to me. Wish you could be in the same Co[mmpany] with me if you go into training. Believe me we have got a real outfit. Haven't seen anyone yet we would have to take back seat for.
Well I must close. I hope you pardon this short letter Write as often as possible and I'll do my best.
With best regards

Dear Bro & Sister
Just a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along fine. It has been quite awhile since I wrote you but I know you hear about me through Mother and it is quite a job to write anything of interest. Don't think I don't want to write to you for I do. Have made several attempts to answer your letter in the last few days and of course I write Mother and Pauline every few days. Ed picked up courage and sent me a few lines some time ago. Mother says they are getting along fine at home. I am very glad for Dad has been in hard luck long enough. I am afraid his job will be too heavy for him in time. Everything is going good over here. We are in great spirits. Just fighting for one thing and that is to lick Kaiser and get home. Believe me that is going to be the happiest day of my life. But I am very glad I come to the army for I don't think anyone will be sorry for the time he has spent. I have seen a lot of country I never could of hope of seeing in civil life and I think I am sure the training has done me a lot of good.
Pauline is getting along very good and is working in the Beckwith House in Jefferson. I didn't want her to work but she is more content at work. She sent me a picture of herself and May and Mayme also. Mother sent hers and Dads, one of Chas & Paul and one of Ed's kids. Those are great kids of Ed's, anyone should be proud of them.

Can't you and Inez send your picture? I will send you/mine as soon as I go back to my company. Had some taken sometime ago. But I am on detached! service just now. Still spend Sunday with the Co[mpany].

How are you getting along in the shop? I hope everything is booming and continues good for I must get a good job when I get home. You see I am planning already. Well it don't cost anything to dream.

Well folks I must close. Hoping the few lines finds you well and enjoying life. Write as often as possible.

Newton Bland Skidmore died at the Ashtabula General Hospital on 15 January 1952. His first wife (and mother of his five sons and a daughter) had died on 15 February 1934.He married secondly Isabel Diemer (the widow of Anthony L. Mayer) on 9 May 1936 who survived him, as did all his children and three stepsons and a stepdaughter. According to a long newspaper obituary he was a retired contractor and sawmill operator, and widely known as a fisherman.
by Warren Skidmore

“Old Skid” is one of the most fascinating men of his surname yet studied. He was a country boy in Massachusetts who turned into a local “renaissance man” at Danvers. Richard Skidmore, Senior, his father, is first noticed at Shrewsbury in Massachusetts, but he was born about 1708 at Stratford, Connecticut. His removal to Massachusetts comes from the undeniable evidence of a DNA sample given in 2004 by a descendant of this family living in Wisconsin. Happily it matched the DNA samples collected from several descendants of Thomas Skidmore (1605-1684) of Westerleigh, Gloucestershire in old England who had settled at Boston by 1636. Richard Skidmore, the elder, was his great-grandson although it was once generally thought that he had come in the great migration of that time from Ulster in Ireland. Richard Skidmore, the younger (“Old Skid”) is still well-remembered at Danvers as a wheelwright, a soldier in three wars, and a man of many talents and interests. He is reported to have been physically “a man of very large frame standing over six feet high with a very large Roman nose, and a man of much humor, and many anecdotes and witty sayings are related to him.” This is largely his story, really quite a good one, with some notes on a part of his posterity. (WS)

1. RICHARD SKIDMORE, the elder, was born in or about 1708, the youngest of the known sons of John and Mary (Andrews) Skidmore [or Scudamore] of Stratford, Connecticut. He married his wife Jemima a daughter of John and Jemima (Hurlbut) Blackman, probably in 1733 at Stratford and they moved soon after to Massachusetts. Beginning around 1717 the dismal economic and political conditions in Ulster led to a mass migration to the American colonies. Richard Skidmore, the father, was spoken of as an immigrant based on the fact that in the 1720s and 1730s there was a large population of recently arrived Irish Protestants in Massachusetts. This was a notion that I repeated, although we did learn a bit later from a DNA sample that Richard Skidmore came from the family once at Westerleigh in Gloucestershire and was not from Ulster as the local historians had suggested.

Richard Skidmore is first noticed there at Shrewsbury in Worcester County on 12 July 1733 (newly married) when he purchased 20 acres and 20 rods of land and swamp from Jonathan Foster, a yeoman, for £70

308 This is a corrected version of an article “The Skidmore family of Danvers, Massachusetts” written in 2005, which was included on the Scudamore/Skidmore Family History CD of 2006. This revision has benefitted enormously from the work done on this family by Dr. Tom McCarthy of the History Department, U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, and by Lenore P. Wolters of Hampton, New Hampshire. They are not to be held responsible however for any errors found here of my judgement.

309 Frank G. Skidmore, then of Balsam Lake, Polk County, Wisconsin.

311 Jemima Skidmore has been said, in error, to have been the Jemima Gould who was born on 30 June 1696 at Chelmsford in Middlesex County, Massachusetts. This Skidmore-Blackman marriage seems to have been the first of several between these two prominent families at Stratford. Emily C. Hawley, the author of the first Skidmore genealogy in 1911 (and a Blackman descendant by way of her own Skidmore ancestry), included a brief history of the Blackmans as an appendix to her A Genealogical and Biographical Record of the Pioneer Thomas Skidmore (Scudamore). A much better, and more recent, account of the Blackman family will be found by Donald Lines Jacobus in his History and Genealogy of the Families of Old Fairfield (Fairfield, 1930), I, 81-7, and with a supplementary note, III, 706. of “good and lawful” money. Then just two months later on 14 September 1733 Richard Skidmore, (now styled a weaver) added 12 adjoining acres bought from Richard Ward for £12 “current money of province.” Strangely, while he continued to live for a time at Shrewsbury, he sold all of his 32 acres on 19 January 1733/4 to Jonas Cutting, a husbandman from Lancaster, Massachusetts at a nice profit for £130 which was due to him in bills of credit.

Their eldest known child of Richard and Jemima, a daughter Rebecca, was born on 26 June 1734 and her birth was entered at Shrewsbury.

Richard Skidmore is first found in the adjoining town of Worcester on 1 March 1735/6 when he was (with Zebediah Rice and Benjamin Gates) elected at a town meeting to be “hog reeves” for the ensuing year. On 13 June 1736 his wife was back at Stratford where as Jemima Scudamore she joined the congregation of Christ Church (Anglican) in Stratford. Seemingly she had gone home to be with her mother (now widowed, and married to her second husband Nathaniel Whitehead, Senior) during her confinement. Her second daughter Keziah was born six weeks later on 26 July 1736.

The following year the Worcester town meeting voted on 2 May 1737 to allow £3 18sh 4d to “John Curtice for Richard Scidmor Rates, John Hunters & William Whitakers rates they being gon out of ye Town before he Receid ye Lists to be Returned if he Receivs it.”

A major step in the settlement of Berkshire County in the western part of Massachusetts was the grant of land in four townships along the route between Sheffield and Westfield in Hamden County. The main purpose of the expenditure was the opening and maintenance of a passable road between the Connecticut and Housatonic rivers, primarily for military purposes since it now gave a fast route for troops and supplies to the Canadian 312 Worcester County Deeds, VIII, folio 225. There is nothing harder to prove in family history than a removal. What took Richard Skidmore northeast to Shrewsbury, an uncommon migration path 120 miles away, does not appear. Nor do we know how he came by his £70 unless it was an advance on a patrimony from his father who died in 1741 but left no will or known deeds of gift. This sum, £70, was then a considerable amount to pay for 22 acres which is described as “partly swamp.” The site must have promised some other easy development.

313 Deeds, VII, 501. The Skidmores back at Westerleigh were coincidentally largely workers in cloth, and the weaving of fine coverlets was frequently a cottage industry at Stratford.

315 Shrewsbury Vital Records, 94. While Rebecca’s birth was entered at Shrewsbury it does not necessarily prove that she was born there. She might have been born at Stratford in Connecticut and entered by her father in the town records where he was then living.

316 Early Records of the Town of Worcester, (Worcester, 1879) I, 99. See also Charles Nutt, History of Worcester and It’s People (Lewis Publishing Company (New York, 1919), 227). Nutt was one of those who believed that Richard Skidmore might have been a Scotch-Irish immigrant. He also noted that Richard was at Worcester in 1736 but “soon left.” The office of Hog Reeve was usually wished off on the recently young married men in New England towns.

317 As early as 1702 the adherents of the Church of England made an effort to establish a church at Stratford. John Skidmore was a signer of a letter from sundry inhabitants of Stratford on 1 June 1706 asking that George Muirson be given leave to officiate among them as their clergyman. On 1 April 1707 John Skidmore (and 18 other gentlemen) signed a letter to the Bishop of London begging his interest in their infant church at Stratford. This letter was received in London in September and Christ Church, Stratford became the first Anglican church established in Connecticut probably in the same year. The records of the church do not begin until 1722 when John Scudamore and his wife are found in that year on the first surviving list of communicants and pew holders. He and Thomas Lattin, his son-in-law, were both vestrymen in 1725 (and for many years thereafter). They were buried in the old Episcopal burying ground at the foot of Academy Hill in Stratford, he in 1741 and his wife in 1748, but the church has since moved from the site and the cemetery was neglected for many years. Most of the early gravestones (probably including those for the Scudamores) have now disappeared.

318 Her mother Jemima (Hurlbut) Blackman-Whitehead, died at Westport on 4 February 1757. The delivery of babies was generally left to elderly midwives, but Jemima Skidmore had an uncle, Dr. Joseph Blackman (1675-1738) of Stratford and she may have gone home to be his patient. Dr. Blackman married Hester Wheeler as his second wife, and they had a son Ephraim Blackman who was christened at Christ Church, Stratford on 4 November 1723 but had connections in Worcester County. He was aged about 16 at the death of his father in 1738 and he chose Eleazar Robins (1683-1758) and his wife Ruth (Wheeler) Robins (1683-1761), who was Ephraim’s aunt, on 17 August 1738 be his guardian. The Robins lived at Harvard in Worcester County, Massachusetts and Jemima Skidmore probably saw her aunt Hester Blackman and her cousin Ephraim at Harvard occasionally.

319 Keziah, an uncommon Biblical name, was perhaps a namesake of Jemima Skidmore’s aunt Keziah Hurlbut of Stratford. For the Hurlbut family see Jacobus, I, 316.

frontier. On 31 January 1737/8 Richard Skidmore was granted a 42 acre house lot, no. 57, in the first division of the lands in the third section of Housatonic Township by the proprietors. He did not settle there, but went instead to Methuen where he was admitted to full communion on 15 October 1738 in the First Parish Congregational Church. A month later, now called a husbandman, he mortgaged 52 acres of land and a dwelling house at Methuen on 28 November 1738 to Ebenezer Everett. The mortgage was to be voided if Skidmore paid Everett the sum of £175 with lawful interest on or before 1 April 1740. He signed the mortgage with his mark but may have defaulted on the payment since neither he, his widow, or his heirs ever sold the property.

King George’s war against Spain was announced “with due solemnity” at Boston on 21 April 1740. The New England colonies raised about 1600 men to join the fleet commanded by Admiral Edward Vernon (1684-1767) against the Spanish in the West Indies. Richard Skidmore is said to have been one of the men who was a part of the expedition against Havana in 1740. It is said that scarcely 100 of the men sent to Havana under Vernon’s command lived to return home perishing largely from disease and not combat.

On 16 March 1742/3 at a legal meeting of the First Parish of Methuen, it was voted to remit £1 9sh 2d of Richard Skidmore’s rate [tax] in the parish which suggests that he may have been in financial difficulties. The rest is silence. Richard Skidmore may have died at Methuen but no burial record or probate has been found for him there. It is possible that he went off on another expedition for his king and country in 1745, not to the Caribbean, but rather to Ile Royale (Cape Breton Island) in Nova Scotia. All of this is speculation.

Governor William Shirley (1694-1771) of Massachusetts claimed that the loss of L’Arcadie to the French would threaten the security of Massachusetts and New England and he convinced the General Assembly to provide the funds for this expedition.

Two regiments were organized and the recruits who enrolled were promised 25 shillings per month and the first month in advance, then a two year exemption from further military service, and finally the suspension from paying their personal debts until they returned from the campaign. New England was then in the midst of an economic recession and all of this proved to be an immense inducement. Recruitment was an instant success and the expedition set off for Nova Scotia in eighty vessels owned by local merchants, and supported by four British men-of-war.

If Richard Skidmore was on the expedition to Cape Breton Island (a speculation which has yet to be proved) it seems possible that he may have met his young nephew Thomas Skidmore (ca.1731-1779) from Stratford, who was already there in Nova Scotia. Thomas Skidmore served from Connecticut in 1746 in Captain Josiah Starr’s Company of Foot. This company was in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Elisha Williams that had been “raised with no small difficulty” to support the force already there as part of the 600 troops from the colony of Connecticut sent “for His Majesties Service against Canada.” A letter from Starr on 6 August 1746 reported “I have Called my Company together & find I have my full Compliment of Men Inlisted: all 323 Essex County Deeds, volume 77, folio 208.

324 Report of the Committee to Revise the Soldiers’ Record (Danvers, 1895), 106. Despite an exhaustive search in the Massachusetts Archives his service at Havana cannot be verified.
325 His cousin, Dr. Rufus Skidmore (1793-1828), decided to go to Havana to study yellow fever which he unfortunately caught himself. He recovered, however, and returned to Newtown in Fairfield County, Connecticut where he practiced medicine until his death in 1828.
326 Shirley, an ambitious young British lawyer, had been named the governor of Massachusetts in 1741 by the Duke of Newcastle (1693-1768) who was the foreign secretary of King George II.
328 Thomas Lattin (1693-1776), who had married their sister Mary Skidmore, also served in the Cape Breton expedition according to Jacobus.
Clothed; & all of my Company, Except fifty Seven provided, with a good Gun and are Ready to move on first Notice.”

Nothing more is known of Richard Skidmore. However it is certain that his young son Richard, (“Old Skid”), was himself at Louisbourg in Nova Scotia only ten years later. Richard’s wife, now the widow Jemima Scidmore, married Adam Gould (ca. 1711-1795) on 23 February 1758. The Goulds moved to New Ipswich in Hillsborough County, New Hampshire about 1760. On 6 June 1767 Adam Gould deeded land in Rockingham County, New Hampshire to his wife’s daughter Keziah Farnum and her husband who were newly arrived from Chelmsford. The deed stipulated that Adam and Jemima were allowed to live on the property until “each of their deaths.”

This reservation went for naught apparently. The Goulds are said by a local historian to have stayed at New Ipswich in a house built by Colonel Kidder on one of his lots on Kidder Mountain. It was near the old Peterborough Road, and the probable location was still faintly visible some fifty rods west of the old discontinued Todd Road. Presumably Adam supported himself and Jemima (sometimes remembered like an “Adam and Eve” kind of couple) as a shepherd of his cattle there in the local mountain pastures. Adam Gould was exempted from taxes for many years before his death, and they were living alone both of “patriarchal age” at the time of the 1790 census of New Ipswich. Jemima Gould is said to have died there later in that year, but Adam lived on until 1795.

Children:

i. Rebecca, was born 26 June 1734 presumably at Shrewsbury. She joined the First Church at Bradford, in Essex County, Massachusetts on 21 December 1755 at the age of 21. She was still living there, alone and unmarried, in the 1790 census.

ii. Keziah, was born 26 July 1736, presumably at Stratford, although her birth was later recorded at Worcester. She married Stephen Farnum (1734-1813) on 12 February 1765 at Chelmsford. He was already then called “of Wilton” in Hillsborough County, New Hampshire. She was called “of Dracut” (which adjoins Chelmsford, Massachusetts) at the time of their marriage. They were living in 1768 at Dracut, but he had taken his family by 1770 back to Wilton in New Hampshire. Farnum was living in 1810 at Concord in Rockingham County, New Hampshire. He later joined their son Benjamin Farnum (1770-1859) at Manchester in Bennington County, Vermont where he died on 13 January 1813.

iii. Richard, was born 9 November 1739 at Methuen, of whom further.

2. RICHARD² SKIDMORE (ENSIGN), remembered as “Old Skid,” was born on 9 November 1739 at Methuen the only known son of Richard (no. 1) and Jemima (Blackman) Skidmore. He married Rachel, the youngest child of Israel and Margaret (Case) Wilkins on 25 July 1764 at Middleton in Essex County. He died on 20 October 1820 at Danvers (in the same county) at the age of almost 81. His wife had been born on 28

The original index, presumably still at Concord, has not been seen but might improve this account of the Gould and Farnum families at New Ipswich. The LDS film number 14979 covers the surnames from Estabrook to Farri, while reel 14987 includes the families from Godfrey to Gould. Also reel 15032, Shortridge to Skinner might also be useful, although no Skidmores are known to have ever lived in New Hampshire before 1850.

February 1746, and died late in January 1827 aged 82 at Dorchester, Massachusetts according to a newspaper obituary.

Although he was barely 16 the young Richard Skidmore was involved in what proved to be the tragic expulsion in 1755 of French Arcadians from their homes in Nova Scotia.\[^{337}\] The Arcadians actually tried to remain neutral in the series of conflicts between the British and the French for the control of Canada and North America during the French and Indian War. Even so, they still became the victims of a scheme probably perpetrated by the British Lieutenant Governor Charles Lawrence (1709-1760) which was totally supported by William Shirley (1694-1771) who was the Governor of Massachusetts. Shirley started a propaganda campaign that preyed on the negative views held by the colonial British as well as the Puritans in Massachusetts about the French Catholics. Lawrence used the weaknesses he found in the Arcadian’s social and political systems to justify writing a deportation order to remove the Arcadians from the property they had owned and improved over the previous century in Nova Scotia.

Back in Massachusetts Shirley, always the most willing accomplice, promptly got the Massachusetts Assembly in a secret session to vote their approval of an expedition to Nova Scotia to support the British troops there under Colonel Robert Monckton (1728-1782). Recruitment in Massachusetts began immediately in early February 1755. Shirley sought the assistance of Colonel John Winslow who was a highly regarded military man in New England who had served earlier in Nova Scotia in 1745 when Richard Skidmore, Senior, may have been there. Winslow’s good reputation quickly helped to recruit about 2000 Massachusetts men to join him to aid the British in Nova Scotia. Governor Shirley wrote “French Catholics must be evicted from L’Arcadie at the muzzle of our guns and at the point of our swords” on 18 February 1755, and the combined force executed what they viewed in 1755 as “the great and noble scheme” to expel the French from that place.

Winslow’s recruits were also persuaded by the Puritan ministers who preached against the Arcadians and Roman Catholics, and 14 of the clergy taking with them sometimes a part of their congregations off on the campaign. Laurence supposedly ordered the Arcadians expulsion without the authority to do so, although modern historians have tried to implicate the British Crown in what became a monstrous incident of what is now called and condemned as “ethnic cleansing.” A convoy of 31 transports and three warships left Boston on 19 May 1755 carrying nearly 2000 New England provincial troops and 270 British regulars.

The four companies raised by Colonel Winslow were now in Nova Scotia. A list of the 75 men in Captain Nathan Adam’s company (including Richard Skidmore, the younger) was entered in Colonel Winslow’s journal on 14 August 1755, and they were ordered to hold themselves in perfect readiness to sail from Chignecto on the schooner Warren.\[^{338}\] Back at Boston the General Court had just voted to raise 800 more men to strengthen what had already been a successful expedition.

From this point forward we have a fine autobiographical statement about Old Skid’s military life made in 1820, late in his life, when he applied for an invalid veteran’s pension from the Federal government. It expands on what can be found in the official records, and it has been copied as an appendix to these notes.

In 1758 and 1759 he was soldiering again with the Third Massachusetts Provincial Regiment commanded by Colonel Jonathan Bagley (1717-1780). He had enlisted as a drummer on 13 March 1758 in the company of Captain Andrew Fuller of Middleton in what is remembered as the French and Indian War. He probably first worked on the construction of Fort William Henry, but he does not elaborate in 1820 on his duties there with the regiment.\[^{339}\] Captain Andrew Fuller of Middleton enlisted a company that included sixteen men from Danvers, including both of his two lieutenants (Israel Hutchinson being one), and his Ensign Richard Skidmore had enrolled as a drummer on 18 March 1758 and was present with Captain Fuller as his “famous drummer” at the battle of Fort Ticonderoga on 8 July 1758, which was the bloodiest battle in America until Antietam in the Civil War.\[^{340}\] Skidmore survived, but received a shot which went through the corner of his cocked hat “raising the hair on the top of his head.” He was discharged from Fuller’s company on 9 December 1758.

He was not at the siege of the French fort at Louisbourg in 1758, but he promptly re-enlisted in 1759 in the military and went there in the company commanded by Captain Israel Davis from Danvers in Colonel Bagley’s regiment. He remained to do garrison duty at Louisbourg until he was discharged on 15 April 1761.

Some of the men from Louisbourg are known to have gone to the capture of Quebec on 13 September 1759 under General James Wolfe (1727-1759), and where Monckton was now second in command. Richard Skidmore is said to have been among them, and that he was the only one of his platoon of 12 men who escaped unwounded.

The French and Indian War, which led to the British domination of North America, was now largely over. Richard Skidmore went home to Massachusetts no doubt happy and content that the British colonial officers and the militia of his own New England legislators had eventually deported more than 14,000 Arcadians from the maritime region. They were taken away in boats belonging largely to New England merchants, an immense effort in what is now called “ethnic cleansing,” and sent to several scattered ports on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

Presumably in 1764 Richard Skidmore, now newly married, became something of a fine folk artist. His powder horn, a handsome one of horn and wood, is now in the Peabody Essex Museum at Salem. In is engraved on one side Richard Skidmore - His Horn 1764, but it also has the date 1755 on it. Frequently these pieces of scrimshaw were done during the long boring hours on board a ship, but we have nothing to confirm what he might have been doing or where he might have been traveling in 1764. The horn on one side has a drawing of a man standing on the left smoking a clay pipe, and pictures of three structures labeled Tavern, Metinghous, and another as Salem. The other side of the horn has a number of inscribed floral and geometric designs, and a part of the original leather strap is still attached.

The fort at Louisbourg has been reconstructed and is a popular tourist attraction. It is protected now as a National Historic Site of Canada.

This tale is probably apocryphal according to Dr. Tom McCarthy. He has not found any record evidence at Quebec listing the Davis company or the Bagley regiment at Montreal, nor does Richard Skidmore (or any of his colleagues) mention it in his pension file set down in 1820.

Many were settled in Louisiana where they remained as Cajuns. Some of those transported to France later returned to the maritime provinces of Canada (particularly New Brunswick) after the British conquest.

See the catalogue In the American Spirit: Folk Art from the Collections, Peabody Essex Museum, 5 May through 30 September 1994. The powder horn was the gift of Robert Brookhouse (1768-1844), a merchant at Salem, to the museum in 1848. The donor was a son of Robert and Sarah (Mugford) Brookhouse of Salem, who do not appear to have been Skidmore descendants.
He moved his family from Middleton to New Mills (a neighborhood in Danvers) about 1772. In the American Revolution he was enrolled at Danvers as an Ensign in Captain Jeremiah Page’s company. Early in January 1775 each man was supplied with “an effective fire-arm, bayonet, pouch, knapsack, thirty rounds of cartridges and ball” and trained three times a week. In February of 1775 a quantity of the military stores including several cannon were collected at New Mills. The cannon were unmounted but Richard Skidmore, now a millwright and wheelwright in the village, took upon himself the task of constructing carriages for them. Later the cannon, already mounted on his new carriages, were trundled off from New Mills to Lindall Hill where they were concealed in the woods.346

Captain Jeremiah Page’s company was called out at the Lexington Alarm on 19 April 1775 at the start of the war.347 While the men were gone their women, perhaps Rachel Skidmore among them, gathered together at the house of Captain Israel Hutchinson at New Mills (who was away with his company) to watch and wait for news together. On the evening of the following day several men on horseback escorted the Danvers dead home on an ox-sled, and six bodies still wearing their heavy stockings of gray homespun, were unwrapped from their bloody sheets on the floor of Hutchinson’s kitchen. Danvers had suffered more than any other town except Lexington in the alarm and only one of the Danvers dead was over the age of 25 years.348

The Lexington watch served only two days, and it was discontinued on 17 July 1775 when Congress provided a guard for the seaport towns. Two years later Richard Skidmore wrote a note to Page (now Colonel Page) in his own hand,

Danvers, April 17, 1776 Col Page, Sr – Please to Pay to Samuel Baker the Wages Du to me on your Role for the serves Du in the concord fight in April, 1775 and you will oblige your Humbell Servent Richard Skidmore.349

After Lexington and Concord he enlisted on 1 January 1776 as a Sergeant for the coming year in Captain Benjamin Kimball’s Company of Foot. The company was attached to the 27th Regiment of the Massachusetts Line commanded by their old captain, now Colonel Israel Hutchinson (1728-1811) of New Mills. On the night of 29 August 1776 the men (all from Essex County) in Glover’s and Hutchinson’s regiments rowed the entire 9500 men of the Continental Army across the east River to the safety of Manhattan which avoided the total destruction of the army.

Richard Skidmore was with the regiment at Fort Washington when it fell on 16 November 1776, and by 30 November was with what remained of the regiment in New Jersey.350 Hutchinson’s regiment disintegrated during the first three weeks of December when most of the men were reported sick. Skidmore may have been with the army to cross the Delaware with Washington on Christmas Day in 1776, but this seems unlikely as Colonel Hutchinson himself, and his command, were apparently dispersed by that date. Like much of Washington’s army their term of enlistment was over, and he was honorably discharged after his year of service on 1 January 1777.

He helped organize the United States Lodge (Masonic) at Danvers on 1 May 1778 and became its Tyler.351 The Tylers were the officers in the lodges of that day appointed to guard the door from the intrusion by unqualified, malicious, or simply curious observers. On 16 April 1779 he visited Essex Lodge at Salem and was one of those who favored the consolidation of the two lodges.

346 See David Hackett Fischer’s Paul Revere’s Ride (Oxford University Press, Inc., 1994) for a good account of the Salem Alarm of 27 February 1775. Although he is not mentioned by name Fischer suggests that Skidmore’s work on the carriages for the canons almost started the war.

347 Hurd, Duane Hamilton, History of Essex County, Massachusetts, with biographical sketches of many of its pioneers and prominent men, (J. W. Lewis & Company, 1888) II, 449. Hurd reprints the full muster roll of this company with Joseph Porter and Henry Putnam as Lieutenants and Richard Skidmore as Ensign in Captain Page’s company. Among the rank and file in this company was Benjamin Kimball who soon after became the captain of his own company.

348 Hurd, II, 448. For fine accounts of the Danvers men at Menotomy Village (Arlington) see Richard P. Zollo, From Muskets to Missiles, Danvers in Five Wars (Danvers, 2001), or David Hackett Fischer, Paul Revere’s Ride (Oxford University Press, 1994).

349 It is endorsed on the back “Reed of the written Order 3 Shillings & 7 Pence in full per me, Saml Bacon.” Although a muster roll lists him as the Ensign of Page’s company, the enormous 17 volume Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War reduces his two days of service in that company to that of a Sergeant, and adds in error “probably on the alarm of April 19, 1775.” He was enrolled as a Sergeant in Kimball’s company soon after, and Kimball himself had served as a Sergeant earlier in Captain Page’s company at the time of the Lexington Alarm.

350 Richard Skidmore stated in 1820 that he served in “the Jersies.”

351 Hurd, II, 524.
He was one of the founders of the Baptist Society on 12 November 1781. Early in November 1783 the Baptist Society at Danvers voted that the pews “be Sold at Vandue” in the new meeting-house and Richard Skidmore was one of the bidders. His old commander, Colonel Israel Hutchinson, was Chairman of the committee who was voted to “attend the sale” of the pews. On 26 March 1793 the society met “respecting the Rev. Thomas Green preaching for the present year.” A subscription list was passed around and it shows that Richard Skidmore pledged 12 shillings, while the Colonel (now listed in 1793 as “Israel Hutchinson, Esq.”) set down a gift of £2 10sh. on a very long list for the support of Reverend Green.

At the time of the first census in 1790 Richard Skidmore and his family are found at Danvers. He was enumerated with two males over 16 and four under 16 together with six females. He seems to have supported his family in this period largely by working as a wheelwright.

Richard Skidmore, Jr., of Middleton, called “a fisherman and wheelwright,” together with his wife Rachel and his children “Eli, Elias, Zele, William, David, Rachel, Rebecca, and Phebe” were all warned out of Danvers on 10 January 1792. This was a “fair warning” that Danvers (under the terms of the poor law then in effect) would not be responsible for the support of a family that fell on hard times because they “belonged to” Middleton. The Skidmores were therefore a problem for Middleton and not for Danvers.

There is a curious entry in the diary of the Reverend William Bentley, D.D., about the Indians once at Danvers. It adds still another dimension to the life of Richard Skidmore. Bentley wrote on 13 August 1801:

There has been very lately opened an Indian Grave near the Iron Factory on Cowhouse or Duck river, at Waters’ Bridge... there were found graves of a grown person & of a Child... the presumption is that the skeleton was sitting... wrapped in a skin, tied round by a leathern thong on which Copper was strung. Mr. Skidmore told me on the spot that he had dealt much with the eastern Indians, & that at the Cape Sables, they buried stone or bone marked across with a line for the children, distinguishing those for females by a round hole in the marked line in part or entirely through the stone or bone.

Skidmore’s house at Danversport (next to the Baptist church) burned down on 29 March 1808 and in addition to his personal loss of all his possessions, the charter, records, furniture and the jewels and regalia belonging to the Masonic Lodge at Danvers were destroyed as he had them in his care at the time.

He also became a privateersman in the War of 1812. On 25 February 1814 the British brig Britannia (Richard Skidmore, prize-master) was brought into the port at New Bedford. She was one of nine prizes captured by the privateer Mars by Captain Ingersoll of New York. A barrel of rum is said to have fallen to him as his share of one of the prizes. As long as it lasted he said he heard “How do you do Mr. Skidmore,” but once the rum was gone it was back to “How are you, old Skid.”

In the summer of 1814 nearly sixty aged men largely from New Mills, all of them exempt from service, voluntarily associated themselves into an independent company of defense during the War of 1812. They met in the school-house on 16 July 1814, and chose Captain Samuel Page as their moderator and established the front yard of his house as their Alarm Post. They agreed to meet at Page’s on the following Saturday “well equipped, including Knapsack, etc.” At the same time they agreed,

Voted That as we have pledged ourselves of Honor to be Always Ready and willing to obey the commanding officer of the said company, therefore any member who does not at all times (when ordered) at the Alarm Post in good season and well armed and equipped shall be liable to be reprimanded for each neglect by the commanding officer.

A muster roll survives for the company, which was largely honorific, and Richard Scidmore (now aged 74) is listed below the non-commissioned officers as their Drummer. He is said to have beat the same drum he used at Louisbourg at the head of this company of minute men.

When the centennial celebration of Danvers was held on 16 June 1852 a delightful bit of doggerel verse about some of the early settlers was read and later published. Of Richard Skidmore it was said:

Long, long may their descendants be 352 Eli must have been a clerical error for his son Elias whose name follows and is correctly set down. 353 Dr. McCarthy says that the legislation permitting “warning out” was done away with soon after. It was based on the British Act of Settlement passed in 1662 to determine the residence of the poor who needed relief. 354 Hurd, II, 524. 355 Hurd, 448. 356 Hurd, 492.

Worthy their names and ancestry.
Here, too th’ eccentric Skidmore dwelt,
Whose ready wit, keen, unrefined,
Was sure to hit its mark, be felt,
And leave its tickling sting behind.
A true comedian genius, who,
Had he been trained to walk the stage,
With habits all comedian too,
He’d been the Mathews of his age.
His power is not exhausted yet,
For often, now, the laugh will rise,
Excited by old Skidmore’s wit,
Recited from old memories.
A patriot, too, his drum he beat
In three wars at his country’s call.
Beating the onset, not retreat,
He came victorious out of all.

Richard Skidmore, the “old Skid” of Danvers, was long remembered there as “Fuller’s famous drummer.” He was a man of eccentricity and of many peculiar traits, but of undeniable courage and patriotic to the core. The doggerel verse says that he served in three wars, no doubt counting his presence on the “alarm list” of 1814.

He died on 20 October 1820 and was buried at Danvers in the small Porter (or High Street) Cemetery which is still well-maintained. While money was undoubtedly in short supply at home his children did see that a neat white stone marked his grave with another bit of verse:

Richard Skidmore
Died
Sept. 23, 1832
Aged 83 Years
Father thou art gone to rest:
And this shall be our prayer
That when we reach our -------
Thy glory -------[the last lines buried in the sod]\[357

His widow was not buried beside him, but rather in her son Zeal’s family tomb (old number 125) in the Boston Common Central Burying Ground on 29 January 1827. She was subsequently buried anew in a mass grave when the Boston subway was built in 1895.

The administration on his estate as an intestate was given on 2 October 1821.\[358

He married on 8 April 1793 at Danvers to Phebe, born on 28 May 1771, a daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (Baker) Felton (who moved later to Biddeford, York County, Maine).

He was a fisherman at Danversport in 1792, and served on several schooners owned by the Page family from 1792 to 1798. They were living at Danvers at the time of the 1800 census with two young daughters under 10. He died on 25 September 1832 aged 63 according to his monument in the High Street Cemetery, and he was called a laborer when his estate was eventually probated at Danvers on 4 April 1837. His wife survived him by several years and was the head of a family at Danvers in 1840.

He was married at the Hollis Street [Unitarian] Church in Boston to Catherine, a daughter of Captain William and Deborah (Smith) [Kil]Patrick on 4 May 1800. She was born on 10 March 1774 at Stoughton (now Canton), Massachusetts, and died at Boston on 1 February 1846 of cancer and was buried in tomb 41 in the Central Burying Ground.360

The Hollis Street Church came to play a large part in his life. On 12 April 1801 he was admitted to the church’s covenant “without coming to communion” and was later a sexton and pew holder. On 1 December 1802 he was licensed as a Funeral Porter and was to have the care of the South Burial Ground. In The Boston directory of 1805 he was listed as Zeally Skidmore, the sexton of the South End Meeting, and living on Nassau Street. In the list of Boston taxpayers of 1821 Zeal Skidmore is shown as having a house on Orange Street (worth $100) and another on Nassau Street (worth $300) in the 12th Ward. The Boston city directory of 1825 lists him as a wheelwright and sexton, and living at 546 Washington Street. His personal property was assessed at $700 and his tax bill was $10.29. His mother was buried in his tomb in the Boston Common Central Burying Ground on 29 January 1827, and he followed her in death only nine days later just two months short of his 49th birthday.

359 On April 17, 2003, a loose piece of paper, about 6 by 9 inches, was sold at auction on eBay (item number 2922867732). It listed the birth dates of all the six children of Richard and Phebe Skidmore (Sally, Betsy, Nancy, Phebe, Stephen and Henry) with the dates as listed above. It is noted as “Recorded” at the bottom of the page and was presumably in the hand of one of the parents and submitted to the town clerk.

360 Catherine [Kil]Patrick was christered on 8 January 1775 at the First Church at Canton. Her father served as a captain in Colonel Ichabod Alden’s Sixth (later the Seventh) Massachusetts Regiment of the Continental Army.
His widow Catherine Skidmore is last noticed in 1840 living “near 4 Orange Lane.”

minor, was given at Haverhill, Essex County, Massachusetts, on 8 December 1814. He was apprenticed as a young boy to a Mr. Clark who was in the clothing business at Plaistow, Rockingham County, New Hampshire, and became a clothier at the end of seven years when he was aged 21. In 1841 he was Commissioner of Highways at Union, and in 1849 was elected to represent the town in the State Legislature. His home at Stove Hill on Skidmore Road west of North Union village is still standing in poor condition adjoined on the south by the Skidmore Cemetery. The cemetery is presently (1987) well maintained and Elias Skidmore's plot and a tall monument to his family stands in the exact center of the graveyard (which is shown in the 1857 Atlas of Lincoln County to be located near the Washington Township line). Many other families, neighbors of the Skidmores at Stove Hill, are also buried there. The funeral of Elias Skidmore was from the home of his grandson Albert J. Skidmore on 16 October 1894 at Liberty, Maine.

THE INVENTORY TAKEN IN 1762 OF THE SHOP AND MEDICINES OF DR. JOHN SKIDMORE AT DOVER, DELAWARE.

by Warren Skidmore

This is my last draft of a transcript I started in 1998 of the contents of the medical office and apothecary’s shop of Dr. John Skidmore at Dover, Delaware as it was in 1762. The original was found there in the Hall of Records, to whom I still remain indebted for an old photostat copy. It is an incredible document, for John Haslet who took the inventory did a meticulous job setting down every medicine, instrument, book and supply that he found in the office - together with their individual weights and valuations. Haslet was born in County Londonderry, Ireland about 1727. He earned a degree in divinity at the University of Glasgow and was ordained a Presbyterian minister at Ballykelly, Ireland in 1752. Arriving in America in 1757 he was appointed a captain in the Pennsylvania militia and went with Braddock on the expedition in 1758 that attempted to capture Fort Duquesne. He settled near Milford, Delaware where he married (secondly) Jemima Molleston, the widow of John Brinkle, and began the practice of medicine perhaps tutored by Dr. John Skidmore who was a kinsman of his wife. In 1776, at the start of the American Revolution, Haslet was made the Colonel of the 1st Delaware Regiment and had a short but distinguished career. Unfortunately on 3 January 1777, in a skirmish just before the Battle of Princeton, he tried to rally General Mercer’s brigade and was instantly killed by a shot to his head. In 1841, by a special act of the Delaware General Assembly, his remains in Philadelphia were disinterred and reburied in the Presbyterian Cemetery at Dover. I have not heard of a similar document to Haslet's work anywhere else and it deserves to be better known. The weights of his medicines (in ounces and pounds) or their value (in pounds, shillings and pence) set down by Haslet have not been copied here. A part of Skidmore’s medicines, entered in Latin, have been identified and sometimes it has been possible to find what ailment they reputedly cured. Undoubtedly one of the printed dispensatories that he used in his office would identify and correct many of the spellings given here, frequently only a best guess made from a somewhat defective document. Dr. John Skidmore died in Misippillion Hundred shortly before 24 February 1762 when the administration of his estate was given to his younger brother, Dr. Samuel Skidmore. The inventory “of the shop and medicines of Dr. John Skidmore late of Kent County” dated 16 April 1762 lists the contents of an 18th century apothecary’s shop in a day long before local pharmacies became so common. The inventory of the shop of John Skidmore, Practitioner, with bonds, bills, and notes totaled £675 3sh 3d.

365 Doctor John Skidmore, the son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Molleston) Skidmore, was born at Dover about 1726. He married firstly Mary, the daughter of John and Anne (Purnell) Fullerton by a bond dated 2 May 1754. She died about December 1755, and he married secondly Mary, the daughter of Nathaniel and Deborah Luff, and was previously the widow of John Marim who had died in 1755. The noncuptative will of Mary (Luff) Skidmore was dated 24 January 1760 and was recorded a few days later on February 4th. It is curious to see that her father’s will was signed a day earlier on February 3rd 1760, which suggests that both father and daughter were carried away by some common epidemic complaint. Jemima Brinckle was remembered in the will of her mother Jemima, the widow of Henry Molleston, dated 20 August 1760. Her husband John Brinkloe had purchased the childhood home of Dr. John Skidmore on 14 May 1760 from his father’s estate. Partly built in 1728 it is now the celebrated “Ridgely House” and is reputedly the oldest surviving house in Dover. See sketch at end of paper.

367 I have read all of Dr. William Buchan’s enormous Domestic Medicine (London 1785) which identifies many of the common medications for 18th century complaints that are mentioned in the Skidmore inventory. Alas, progressing beyond this point is to work in a bottomless pit. I have supplied the best text possible, and I hope that some young pharmacist or medical student may take on the rest of this chore.

368 Where the Skidmore brothers had their medical education is unknown. The scope of Dr. John Skidmore’s library suggests that it may have been in England, a common practice. Their father was a prosperous inn keeper and legislator who probably could have afforded the expense.

369 John Skidmore left no issue. According to a conveyance made to Garrett Sipple on 16 July 1774 by his sister-in-law Elizabeth, the widow of Dr. Samuel Skidmore, her father-in-law Thomas Skidmore had died intestate leaving three sons John, Thomas, THOMAS SKIDMORE (1790-1832) OF MANHATTAN, NEW YORK CITY, AN APPRECIATION.

[For an extended life of this Thomas Skidmore see family no. 265 271 in the history of the Skidmores of Westerleigh, Gloucestershire.]

Thomas Skidmore would have been surprised, Amos Gilbert wrote in his biographical preface, that Gilbert would turn out to be his biographer. He's have found it far less surprising that Gilbert, thirty years later, would also be a biographer of the flamboyant feminist, Fannie Wright. The paths of Skidmore and those of Wright and Gilbert passed in New York City in the late 1820's, and, Skidmore felt, to his detriment.

In 1828, Thomas Skidmore was a 40-year old former child prodigy and itinerant teacher turned metalworker, author, and founder of the Working Man's Party. He'd organized a coalition of unionists against an 11-hour day sought by the City's nascent merchant class. He'd convinced his united labor front not only to seek improvements in working conditions, but redress as well in far more permanent moves to gain what he considered to be their inalienable right to property. Six months after publishing a 400-page philosophical treatise and step-by-step manual on how to secure that right for all persons and generations, Skidmore had committed his labor front to press for it by running Party candidates for the State Assembly on this unusual political platform.

Just as the campaign began, Frances (Fannie) Wright arrived in the vibrant, overcrowded and seething city of a quarter-million people, with the remnants of New Harmony movement. Earlier that year, Fannie had phased out her own Nashoba interracial "sweat-equity" compound in Tennessee, and joined in the move of New Harmony, led by the Scottish socialists Robert Owen junior and senior, to New York City. There, Fannie bought an old church and converted it to a auditorium where he held forth on universal education, divorce, church oppression and free love, and the junior Owens began publishing a newspaper based on the quasi-communist ideals of the New Harmony movement. Both Owens and Wright decided to get behind the popular Working Man's Party, and to co-opt its educational platform to theirs, which called for removal of children from the corrupting influence of their parents.

Skidmore disagreed with their views for both philosophical and practical reasons, but was forced to accept their alliance. The Working Man's Party captured fully 30% of the vote and elected one of its candidates in its first, hurried effort. Skidmore was convinced that the audacious remarks of Fannie Wright and the views of the Owenites had cost, rather than helped, his effort. Amos Gilbert was a devotee of Fannie Wright, but melded into the Owenites when Wright resumed her romance with the former education director at New Harmony and returned to France. He later joined with the junior Owen in forcing Skidmore out of his own party, becoming part of a strange bedfellows combination of communist and capitalist, both worried about the popularity of Skidmore's principles.

After founding another party and his own newspaper, Skidmore attempted to rebuild his personal fortunes by perfecting an innovative welding technique during the summer of 1832. Unfortunately, that hot and humid summer became the last great stand of the worldwide cholera epidemic to which Skidmore and thousands of others succumbed. A year after Skidmore's death, Gilbert's long obituary traced his career and influences in some detail. While readers of today's biographies wouldn't be surprised, it is strangely out of historical context to read in Gilbert's essay about the influence of Skidmore's troubled childhood on his philosophical and political views.

Gilbert ignored Thomas Skidmore's exhaustive and detailed equation of the suppressed American right to property with the other inalienable rights to life and liberty. And he further demeaned that powerful linking by ascribing it to a lingering resentment at having to support his family and alcoholic father as a teacher from the age of 13. Gilbert's treatment changes the perspective of Thomas Skidmore from that of an economic philosopher and political organizer to just another victim of a troubled childhood. But it remains the only true biographical sketch dedicated solely to Skidmore.

For a more comprehensive point-of-view on the man and his times, you might read a few of the scholars. One of those scholars describes Skidmore in terms I find more appropriate to his life and work, that is, a man who was and may still be ahead of his time.
LEWIS PALMER SKIDMORE (1877-1955), THE TITANIC, AND A MOMENT OF FAME.

by Warren Skidmore

Lewis Palmer Skidmore was the grandson of Philo Hurd Skidmore (1817-1902) of Bridgeport, Connecticut who ran a successful machinery business that made stationary engines and boilers for a number of customers including the United States Navy. In 1870 he went South where he bought a railroad in Florida, and also invested heavily in real estate in New Orleans and Louisiana. His fortune provided a comfortable living his family at his death in 1902.

The young Lewis Skidmore, an artist and photographer, had just received a degree in fine arts in 1911 from Yale, when he and his young wife Emily C. Vinton booked a passage on the S.S. Carpathia for a holiday in Rome, Italy. When the Titantic was lost he made a series of photographs of the survivors as they were pulled aboard the Carpathia. It returned to New York City with about 700 of rescued Titanic’s passengers and Skidmore made timed drawings on board based on an eyewitness account by a teenager of the gradual floundering of that great liner. His drawings were widely reprinted by the press and later in books about the Titantic. They were also published by Emily C. Hawley who added them to the 1912 supplement of her Skidmore genealogy.

The Borland family, from Haverford, Pennsylvania had boarded the Titanic as first class passengers at Cherbourg, France. John Borland, then 49, was a senior vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He and his wife Marion occupied stateroom C-70 while their only son John Borland, Jr. (Jack), age 17 and a scholar on the passenger list, was alone in C-68 which adjoined.

Jack was ready for bed when the Titanic hit the iceberg, but pulled on his overcoat over his pajamas and ran up on the deck to see the excitement. He got his parents up and they all dressed, Jack in a warm tweed suit, and put on their life-belts. His mother and her maid got into lifeboat 4, and Jack eventually jumped, feet first, over the side as the Titanic went down. After several hours in the water he was seen and pulled aboard lifeboat 12. He and his mother were eventually reunited on the Carpathia.

373 In 1940 Thayer produced a pamphlet about his experiences on the Titanic. His complete story was well told by Logan Marshall in his The Sinking of the Titanic and Great Sea Disasters (1912).
Jack described the sinking to Lewis Skidmore who drew a timed sequence of pictures based on his description. The elder Boardman was lost, but his private train carriage took them home to Haverford. Jack graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, and after a career in banking he returned to the University as a Vice-President and Treasurer. He died in 1945.374

Lewis Palmer Skidmore was a painter, restorer, illustrator and lecturer, and taught for 20 years at the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.375 In 1929 he became the Director of the prestigious High Museum of Art on Peachtree Street in Atlanta.376 He and his second wife Helen Maria Turner (1858-1958), an American impressionist painter who survived him, were both successful artists who were widely exhibited.

THE SKIDMORE FOUNTAIN

by Charles Erskine Scott Wood

[This article appeared in The Oregon Historical Quarterly, vol. 34, no. 2 (June 1933), pages 97-102, and was forwarded to me by Nedra Brill. I was delighted to find that a German brewer had offered to pipe his lager there, an offer declined (alas) by the city fathers. It probably would not have thrilled the dogs or horses of Portland, but would certainly have pleased their masters. A definitive history of the fountain by Eugene E. Snyder called

Skidmore’s Portland: His Fountain & Its Sculptor From Buckboards to Bustles, Binford & Mort (1973), who suggests that free lager was only supposed to run on the day that the fountain was unveiled. For an account of Stephen Gregg Skidmore (1838-1883), the benefactor of Portland’s thirsty, see his father Andrew Reed Skidmore (family no. 245) in my Westerleigh book. (Warren Skidmore)]

I have been asked to give some account of how the Skidmore fountain came to be, and particularly how it came to be placed where it is now; and I am glad to place my recollections at the service of the Oregon Historical Society, but it must be understood that I am writing absolutely from memory, unrefreshed by any note or memorandum of any kind, and naturally there will be errors, and I do not pretend to know dates.

I resigned from the army and entered the practice of law at Portland, Oregon, in 1884; and eventually succeeded to the law business of Morris Fechheimer by association with his surviving partner, Henry Ach. This partnership was arranged by Fechheimer himself on his death bed, and Judge George H. Williams was invited to join us, which he did, and the firm of Williams, Ach and Wood was established in the former offices of Fechheimer and Ach in the First National Bank Building on the corner of First and Washington streets. I am giving these facts because from them I hazard the guess that it was sometime about 1887 that one day as I was sitting in my office in the First National Bank Building I received a message from Henry Failing, in the bank below, requesting me to come to his private office, as he wished to speak to me on a matter of importance to him and to the city of Portland. When I called on him, he said to me, "I do not know that you are aware that Steve Skidmore left in his will a bequest of $5000 for the erection of a drinking fountain, to be placed in the business part of the city, for men, horses and dogs." He then showed me the drawings of several designs of fountains from one or more marble or granite works making a business of doing this sort of thing, and he asked me what I thought of them. I looked at them, but told him without hesitation that they looked to me more like designs for soda fountains in drug stores, and if one of them were put up, I felt sure, or at least I hoped, that the artistic taste of later generations would tear it down. He said I had expressed his ideas exactly and that was why he wanted to talk to me, and then continued, "Now, you know many of the best artists in New York," and I said I knew Saint-Gaudens and Warner, and others, but I considered these as our best sculptors, and of course, I knew a lot of painters, such as J. Alden Weir, Ryder, Brush, and the architect Stanford White -- and so on. "Well," he continued, "I wish you would take up this matter for me, and write to the ones you think are the best, because I think in justice to Steve Skidmore and this youthful town we ought to begin with the very best, and I will have you appointed on the committee by the mayor."

Of course I gladly accepted this trust, but I at once said to him, "Mr. Failing, it will be utterly impossible to have a civic fountain, such as I know you have in mind, for anything like $5000." "Never mind about that," he answered, of course Skidmore had no more idea that the rest of us about cost, but pay no attention to the amount of the bequest. just do the best you can, regardless of cost, for the present."

I wrote to Augustus Saint-Gaudens and to Olin L. Warner. Saint-Gaudens said he was so far behind in important commissions that he did not dare undertake another, and thus eliminated himself from consideration. Warner wrote that he would gladly undertake it, but wanted some idea of the site where the fountain was to be placed, and the surroundings. Mr. Failing told me that the city was going to furnish the site and all the expenses of installation, and that the angle where First Street changes direction and where the fountain now stands had been selected. Mr. Failing was quietly collecting a fund and Mr. Woodward, who was connected with a bank, said that if the fountain was placed at that particular site he would give a certain sum of money, considerable, but the exact amount I do not remember, and he made that condition because he was at that time the owner of a lot on First Street which was just opposite the fountain site.

Mr. Warner sent out two designs, one in a general way similar to the present fountain; but instead of two caryatides supporting the basin, and standing back to back, with a block of granite between, there were three caryatides and no central pillar, the three caryatides carrying the bronze basin. This, if I remember rightly, was about $35,000, the city or the Skidmore committee to bear the expenses of transportation and installation. The design for the fountain as it now exists was $18,000. Mr. Failing, Charles E. Sitton and a very few others quietly made up the $13,000 necessary to be added to the Skidmore bequest, and none of them would ever have a word said about it, and even I never knew how much Mr. Failing or any of them gave. They said they wanted it to be absolutely Steve Skidmore's bequest with no thought of any other person associated with the gift. But though I do not know how much Mr. Woodward gave, I do know he gave a considerable amount, because it had that condition attached to it, and Mr. Failing told me of the gift and the condition.

After Mr. Warner had been engaged to do the work he was called west as far as Colorado, and he then came to Portland, for the express purpose of seeing the site and its surroundings, as he felt it important that he have the fountain in proper scale and harmony. At the time the United States Government was taking testimony to forfeit the land grant of the Willamette Valley, and Cascade Mountain Military Wagon Road Company, which had passed by purchase into the hands of Messrs. Lazard Freres. I, as their attorney and manager of the grant, went with the Government's representatives, taking testimony at various points along the grant. This was in 1888. At Prineville, Oregon, my leg was broken, and while I was laid up there, I received from the Reverend Thomas L. Eliot a request for suggestions for the inscriptions to be cut into the faces of the lower granite basin of the fountain, and I sent down those which are now carved in the granite. An error was made by the stonemason in some date relating to Steve Skidmore, whether it was birth or death, I do not know, but the error was filled in with concrete and recut, and the place may be seen if carefully examined. I have been amused by the not infrequent references to that proverb which is on the fountain - "Good citizens are the riches of a city" - as a quotation from the Bible - a compliment, of course, to the composer, but a reflection on the speaker's or writer's knowledge of the Book of Proverbs.

I was asked by Mr. Failing and the committee to make the address at the unveiling of the fountain, and the newspapers published this fact. Henry Weinhard, the brewer, as fine and honest an old German as you could find, and whose attorney I was, came to see me, as I supposed on legal business, and when we were alone he unbosomed himself of the proposition that he himself would bear the expense of whatever hose was necessary in addition to the fire hose of the city, to connect his largest lager tank with the fountain, and have the fountain spout free beer! Of course I gratefully thanked him- perhaps not as gratefully as I might in these days - and conveyed the proposition to Mr. Failing, who felt obliged to decline it. At the unveiling all of Portland's great and near-great were present. W. S. Ladd sat in his buckboard right in front of me as speaker, and when I paid a tribute to the boy, Steve Skidmore, who in his last hour thought of the city which had received him penniless, and where he made his money, and spoke of the nature that could think of the down town busy part of the city, the sweaty drivers of trucks and drays, the thirsty horses and the thirsty little dogs, I saw tears trickling down Mr. Ladd's face unchecked.

And so the Skidmore fountain came to be.

I understand that once more the epidemic to move the fountain is agitating certain members of the community. If I may be allowed to say so, this continual recurrence very seriously reflects on the artistic judgment and good taste of these people. At first blush it may seem natural to collect everything that a city has in the way of works of art in its park as a sort of cemetery or museum. But I think a little serious thought on the matter ought to show that the works of art decorating the public places of a city should remain where they were placed by the city and the citizens of their day, and instead of herding everything in a park, more things ought to be placed in the heart of the city, where the stream of human life flows longest and thickest. I cannot help thinking of the statues and fountains I saw in Rome, Naples, Venice and all the hill cities of Italy, rooted for centuries, in the places which were selected for them. One of the greatest fountains of the world, the Fountain of the Turtles, is down in a quarter of Rome whose elegance has passed for centuries, among beggar population and ragged little children, but the people never think of moving it. In the first place they are not so poor in works of art, and secondly they are more religious minded and know it would be desecration. The very greatest equestrian statue in the world is in a little, obscure, bare plaza in Venice. If a people's instinct does not teach them to respect a work of art in its original place, to respect those who put it there, if they are actually so bourgeois and new-rich that they cannot bear to leave their one and only work of art where Steve Skidmore clearly willed it to be, where Henry Failing and those men who reverently carried out Skidmore's will from their own pockets, wished it to be, where the sculptor placed it and came across the continent to view the site, that all might be harmonious, then move it. No skyscrapers can ever affect that harmony; it is not height of line around the Skidmore fountain that can ever affect it, but a widening of space, with trees for environment, would be simply ignorant vandalism. If the city fathers and a controlling element of the city wish to show their ignorance, I suggest that they put the Skidmore fountain on wheels, which might be done in these days of great truck wheels, and move it from place to place, as the mood changes, with a card "This is our one and only work of art, the world celebrated Skidmore fountain. Bids will be accepted for its next location."

I do not like to stress the legal obligation existing, because Steve Skidmore gave his money specifically that dogs and work horses and thirsty laboring men might have drink; that Mr. Woodward contributed, and all the other gentlemen contributed heavily, to place that fountain just where it is, after careful consideration. If ever there is anybody interested enough to do so, he can bring court proceedings to stop this stupid misunderstanding of art, and works of art.

I have several times written on this subject at the request of various people, William S. Ladd, Miss Henrietta Failing, and others, and I am now writing for the last time and by request, placing the history of the fountain where it may be kept. I hope if this sort of "flu epidemic" ever gets dangerous, that some citizen of Portland will have civic pride enough to take the case into court, as he would have an absolute right to do. But no court decree would be as powerful as an educated good taste and an artistic righteousness in the people to determine that a monumental work of art, made as a very part of the city itself, should be left where the sculptor and the citizens of its own time originally placed it. If ever an ignorant generation without art instinct moves the fountain to the park, they will be surprised to see how it will shrink in importance and will become more insignificant. Or will they see? No. If they are dull enough to move it, they will be too dull to see what they have done. It will always be a great work of art, but it will be out of place, and will have lost its eternal fitness, which the most ignorant must now feel as they contemplate it.

And finally I suggest that the fountain might be used as a text to educate the children of the public schools in culture and good taste and art appreciation which will hold an architectural work of art at least as sacred as a tombstone in a cemetery.
History of Relatives and Descendants of Isaac Skidmore

ISAAC SKIDMORE

Isaac Skidmore, whose ancestors came from Wales, was born in Connecticut Sept. 15, 1780. He was married to Sarah Lull Dec. 10, 1809, and to them were born eleven children, all of whom lived to man's estate.

Their early married life was spent in Butternuts, N. Y., where five of their children were born; in 1822 they removed to New Lisbon, Otsego Co., N. Y., where they continued to reside until 1838 when they moved to Michigan, preceded by their three elder daughters. They settled on a farm in Unadilla, Livingston County, where, on January 14, 1842, Mr. Skidmore died. The farm was sold to Wm. Stilson, and the widow with four younger children, moved to the village of Dexter; in 1860 she went to live with her eldest daughter in Waterloo, Jackson County, where she peacefully passed away on August 28, 1865.

EUNICE ANN SKIDMORE

Eunice Ann Skidmore, the oldest child of Isaac and Sarah Skidmore, was born in Butternuts, N. Y., April 26, 1811; she was married to Lamech Sweet on December 9, 1830. They came to Dexter, Washtenaw County, Mich., in 1833 and moved to Waterloo, Jackson County, in 1837.

She became the mother of four children. She joined the First Baptist church of Dexter, riding five miles on horseback to present her church letter, afterwards taking it to Unadilla, and later to Stockbridge.

On December 9, 1860, after fifty years of happy wedded life they celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. Sweet died on December 15, 1894, followed by his loving companion May 27, 1899.

Elicia Sweet was born in New Lisbon, N. Y., May 28, 1832, and was married to Joseph D. Rogers of Stockbridge, on March 28, 1850, residing in or near that village until about 1880, when they moved to Detroit to make their home with their children, Harris and Emma. Mr. Rogers died in 1904.

Emma Rogers was born in Stockbridge on June 18, 1854, and was married to Albert Whiting in Chelsea November 30, 1875. To this union one daughter was born, Nina Whiting, born in Jackson, Mich., June 18, 1878, and married to Arthur E. Sulphin at Detroit, October 18, 1892. Two little ones have come to this home: John W. Sulphin, born in Detroit, Mich., July 17, 1900, and Caroline E. Sulphin, born in Detroit, May 24, 1905.

Harris L. Rogers was born in Stockbridge October 9, 1857, and died at Colorado Springs, November 18, 1892, where, too late, he had gone in search of health.

Elias Sweet was born in Dexter, Mich., April 1, 1836, married at Convias to Sevra Burch June 20, 1860, and died in his country's cause at Alexandria, D. C., July 5, 1864.

Hobart Sweet was born in Waterloo, Mich., Aug. 1, 1840, and was married to Sarah L. Smith at Stockbridge October 3, 1866.

They became the parents of four children and resided in or near Stockbridge until a few years since, when they moved to Detroit.

Howard B. Sweet was born at Waterloo, Mich., April 27, 1868; was married to Laura Warrington March 28, 1890, and died in Stockbridge December 24, 1900.

Mable L. Sweet was born in Waterloo March 9, 1871, and was married to Wm. Smith November 24, 1892, at Waterloo and later moved to Detroit. Two bright boys call her mamma: Howard D. Smith, born at Detroit May 17, 1894, and Russel Smith, born in Detroit February 28, 1900.
Cortlandt Sweet was born in Waterloo, April 23, 1873, and was married to Susa S. Mapes at Josco, Mich., November 25, 1896; at present living on a farm at Josco, where their little son, Dale, born at Waterloo, December 5, 1898, helps to make home lively.

Bertha E. Sweet was born in Waterloo August 8, 1875 and while it has been her lot to endure much physical suffering, she has borne it with Christian fortitude and endeavored to cheer and comfort those near her.

Burris W. Sweet was born in Waterloo, July 22, 1843, and was married to Mary McIntyre at Unadiilla, Mich., November 25, 1868. To them were born three children.

Adah M. Sweet was born in Waterloo January 28, 1870. After reaching maturity she followed the profession of nurse in Wisconsin, afterwards returning home to make life’s burdens lighter for father and mother.

Anna M. Sweet was born in Waterloo August 19, 1871, and was married on June 25, 1902, at Waterloo to Arthur E. Camburn, of the Detroit M. E. Conference. To them were born two lovely children: Helen M. Camburn, born at Stony Creek, May 5, 1903, and Burris Harmon Camburn, born at Stony Creek, March 29, 1904.

Hugh D. Sweet was born in Waterloo June 23, 1877, spending the early part of his life at home and then passed four years at the Michigan Agricultural College, after which he came to his father’s relief to carry on the work of the dear old home.

She followed her sister Eunice to Dexter, Mich., in 1835, where she made the acquaintance of Wm. Jones, to whom she was united in marriage February 23, 1837. Their union was blest with seven children. Her life was spent on the farm where she came as a bride, until after a lingering illness she passed away July 20, 1858, leaving a sorrowing husband with one son and four daughters to mourn her loss.

When Amy was about one year old they moved to Lincoln, Isabella County, and in 1893 they moved to Mount Pleasant, where both daughters graduated from the Central Normal College. For three years Amy taught in the Traverse City schools, after which she returned to her parents’ home to help comfort them in their declining years. In May, 1904, they removed to Ypsilanti, Mich., and in 1905 Cora left her school duties in Charlevoix to perfect herself in vocal music under the direction of Prof. Pease. She was married to Alva Lincoln Coulter in Ypsilanti, April 5, 1906, going with her husband to make her home in Charlevoix, Mich.
